Pamper your hair and scalp. Brush your hair and massage your scalp every day. In addition to this, use a good scalp lotion or pomade as directed by its manufacturer. I believe the best hairdo for one your age is to part the hair either in the middle or on the side, whichever part is most becoming, and let the hair hang straight or waved with ringlet ends. This is usually flattering and by far the easiest to keep in order. Curlers shaped like little arrows and made of pastel green rubber are kind to hair ends and do a splendid job of curling them. These curlers may be found in dime and department stores. Misuse of metal curlers, together with lack of care, often result in split hair ends. The hair should be shampooed as often as necessary to keep it clean and once each week is not too often.

I am 28 years old and never use creams because I don't like anything greasy on my skin. Powder never stays on. I use an almond lotion occasionally, but then my powder goes on in spots. Please let me know what lipstick and rouge to use. I have black hair, brown eyes and have a dark complexion. MRS. A. D.

You need not use cream unless you want to and unless your skin is dry. Use soap and water for cleansing your skin, then, after drying it with a towel, smooth on a little of your favorite almond lotion. Smooth the lotion evenly and sparingly when it is to be used as a powder base. I feel sure you will find a true red, rather than one with either an orange or blue undertone, most flattering on lips and cheeks. Be careful not to use either rouge too liberally.

Is there any cream or treatment I may use for clearing up my complexion? I have little whiteheads under my skin which make it look rough and bumpy. DORIS.

Use a well-lathered complexion brush for scrubbing your facial skin. Then rinse off all soap and put on a light film of cream. Let the cream remain on for half an hour, remove it and wash your facial skin with a lathered complexion brush. Repeat every day. If this procedure does not improve the appearance of your skin within two weeks, write me again, enclosing a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope and I will forward further instructions and suggest a preparation for overcoming your skin condition.

Do you know of a good hair remover for use on the face? I would like something that could be used regularly and which would eventually stop the growth of hair. I have never done anything about this but I must do something soon. "DESPERATE."

I do not know of anything other than electrolysis that will destroy the growth of hair. Certain epilators and depilatories are claimed to lessen the growth. If you would like the names of hair-removers, or if you would like my directions for making and using a bleach paste to make the hairs less noticeable, send me a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope, and I'll forward the information to you at once.

Corbys Gain Edge in Series With Reliance by Winning 16-10 While Cementmen Oust Juniors

Near Free-For-All Occurs at Flats and Two Players Banished.

KISER BATTING STAR

One half of the City Softball League semi-finals was decided last night when the Point Anne "Cementmen" eked out an 8 to 7 win over the Esquire Juniors at Point Anne, taking the series in three straight games. The Cementmen now await the winner of the Corby-Reliance series in the City League finals for the championship and the Bank of Commerce Trophy.

While Bubby Gaulin's Ox Pointers were winning, the Corby's A. C. took a firm hold in their series with Reliance by winning 16 to 10 at Coleman Flats, thanks to some fine relief hurling by Johnnie Bawden and "Ki" Kiser's lusty hitting. Excitement ran high at the Flats where general bedlam broke loose in the fifth inning when the players from both clubs swarmed the field and chose opponents in a near-free-for-all. When the dust had settled Umpire-in-Chief Eddie Schrieder banished the two opposing catchers, Tuttle and Rowbotham for engaging in fisticuffs, although to all intents and purposes Tuttle was the aggressor and the party responsible for the outbreak. No bones were broken or fractures reported, however.

Scoring is Early

Reliance took an early-game lead by touching Harris for four runs in the initial frame. Corby's came back to score two in the second and six in the third but the "plane-makers" notched a brace more in their half of the third and Harris was replaced by Johnnie Bawden who allowed but five hits and four runs the remainder of the tussle. In the seventh and eighth frames Bawden struck out five of the six batters to face him and whiffed nine in six innings. Archie Major, hurling for Reliance was replaced by Ray Smith in the ninth, but the damage had been done. These two clubs meet in the fourth game of a best-in-five series on Wednesday next.

Corby's collected 19 hits with "Ki" (you can't get me out) Kiser pacing the winners with a home run, a double and two singles in five tries. He batted in four runs to boot.

Teddy Henn had a quartette of singles for the winners, while Johnny Ronsky collected three one-base blows for the Corby cause. Jimmie Barriage in the left field supplied the sensation catches of the piece. Gen La Bonne led the Reliance on the attack with a fourth inning circuit blow when Doll Pointer slipped and fell in centre trying for the catch. La Bonne had two singles for good measure. Ray Smith with a trio of singles and Goyer with two safe blows followed in that order. The Reliance kicked in with two fast double plays in a game that saw a comedy of errors committed by both sides. Each squad used two pitchers, Bawden being the winning moundsman.

Cementmen Rally

Forced to come from behind in a ninth inning rally, Bubby Gaulin's Point Anners scored three runs in the last inning to eke out an 8 to 7 win over Red Townsend's Esquire kids on the former's diamond. The kids took an early lead by scoring two in the initial frame and added one in the third. The Cementmen reversed this order to knot the count in their half of the third. The remainder of the scoring was the result of single runs until the ninth when the Esquires were leading 7 to 5.

Whitehead, Sero and Green hit in succession to give the Cementmen two runs and knot the count. With Green aboard the kids got pinch-hitter Gaulin and Mike Whalen for outs, but Doug Bennett produced the hit that gave the homesters the winning counter with two away.

DODGERS' "HANDY -ANDY" THAT'S FITZ

Although he set the National league's all-time percentage record for pitching last season when he won 16 and lost two games, Fred Fitzsimmons, Brooklyn Dodger mound veteran, is not content to rest on his laurels. Pirates Become Trouble Makers As Whole National League Gets Jolt in Friday's Firing

Pittsburgh is 'Hottest' Team in Loop and Take Dodgers Twice

YANKS STILL WIN

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

In the old days the Pittsburgh Pirates used to roll through the early season like a fast freight and then go into seclusion on a sidetrack at about this time of year.

Fiery Frankie Frisch, if he hasn't accomplished anything else, at least has turned the time-table around so the Pirates now park during the spring and go like lightning during the summer.

They're the hottest things in the National League right now and leaped into third place yesterday by humiliating the Brooklyn Dodgers in both games of a double-header, 8-4 and 8-2.

This might have been a mortal blow to Brooklyn's pennant ambitions except that the St. Louis Cardinals took this occasion to concede an 8-0 decision to the Boston Braves.

Pittsburgh's first victim was Whitlow Wyatt, who a few weeks ago was the leading pitcher in the National League. In the nightcap the Pirates took less than three innings to knock out Curt Davis, who had won six in a row for the Dodgers.

Something of Shock

The St. Louis setback last night was something of a shock in the way it was accomplished. The Braves scored all eight of their runs in the first two stanzas. Harry Gumbert, who was a brief sensation in June, started on the mound for the Cards and couldn't get anybody out.

The Phillies plopped Cincinnati, 4-3, to drop the Reds to fourth place and squeeze New York into the second division even though the Giants cuffed the Chicago Cubs, 5-2.

The New York Yankees continued to sweep through the American League, but the big thrill was Lefty Grove's feat in winning his 300th victory after two previous failures. He gave the Cleveland Indians a dozen hits, but the power of the Boston Red Sox pulled him through to a 10-6 triumph.

The Yankees bombed the Chicago White Sox for an 8-0 triumph behind the three-hit hurling of Spud Chandler and increased their first-place margin to 11 games.

The surging Philadelphia Athletics won their fifth in a row and sent the Detroit Tigers to their eighth straight defeat, 11-5.

Buffalo Westsides Have Clear Lead At Canadian Henley

Port Dalhousie, Ont., July 26 (CP) —Buffalo Westsides, 1940 aggregate champions, go into today's competition—the third and last day of the 59th annual Royal Canadian Henley Regatta—with a clear 23-point lead over their nearest rivals, second-place Toronto Argonauts.

Yesterday was a profitable day for entries from the United States as they made practically a clean sweep of all events.

Art Gallagher, representing Penn., A.C., won the association singles after rowing to a dead heat against Harvey Hutcheon of St. Catharines in the open event. Gallagher defeated W. Bostick of the Philadelphia Undine Barge Club by three lengths. Jake Gaudaur of Hamilton Leanders was third.

The race between Joe Angyal of Ravenswood, N.Y., and Theo Dubois, of Winnipeg, United States amateur champion, is expected to be the most keenly contested event on the program. Angyal did not race yesterday, apparently intent on being in top form when he meets the westerner today.

Toronto Argos recorded two victories during yesterday's races, defeating Westsides in both the mile and the 550-yard event by less than a length in both races.

Detroit posted its first victory of the regatta in the final for the junior 140-pound eights, finishing a length ahead of Lachine, with Buffalo third.

The row-off for the quarter mile was won by Hutcheon. Three attempts were made to race the event but there was a foul each time and the judges finally awarded the race to Hutcheon who fouled once to Gallagher's twice.

F. HUTCHINSON HAS HARD TIME TO WIN 20TH GAME

Thwarted in Attempt by Newark Bears After Winning Eleven Straight

LEAFS LOSE

(By The Associated Press)

Freddy Hutchinson, the Bob Feller of the International League, is having the same trouble trying to knock down his 20th victory as the Cleveland fireballer, but on a smaller scale.

Rapid Robert, seeking his 20th American League conquest, was stopped by New York Yankees earlier this week and Hutchinson was thwarted last night by Newark Bears, number one farm club of the Yankee chain.

Before meeting the Bears, the Buffalo ace had a winning streak of 11 straight and had lost only three starts.

Newark's victory came in the second game of a doubleheader, the Bears won by a 7-2 margin, after dropping the opener, 8-3, in a game marked by injuries to both sides.

George Washburn, who started against Hutchinson, was struck by a line drive off the Buffalo hurler's bat in the sixth inning and was taken to the hospital. He was said to have broken blood vessels, and possibly fractured ribs. Dixie Parsons, Bison catcher, the other casualty, was injured in a collision at the plate with George Stirnweiss, Newark second basemen, and was reported to have suffered a slight concussion.

The defeat ended an 11-game winning streak of the Royals and halted a six game losing streak for the Chiefs.

In the other games, the champion Rochester Red Wings shutout Baltimore Orioles 6-0, and Jersey City Giants beat Toronto's Leafs, 5-3.

Courage, Control Won 300th Victory For Lefty Grove

BY STEVE O'LEARY

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Boston, July 26.—(AP)—It was his own courage and control which played a major part in elevating Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove to the select circle of 300 game winners but the scorers who keep track of dreams, which come true are crediting Red Sox team-mate Jimmy Foxx with a big assist today.

"Lefty's" famous fireball, which terrorized the American League for a decade has gone long since but the wisdom of many baseball years, his uncanny control and a heart as big as his stalwart frame enabled him to turn back Cleveland Indians, 10-6, to record his epochal triumph.

But it was the stout bat of Jimmy Foxx, who is feeling the impact of the years himself these days— he broke in with Grove with the Philadelphia Athletics back in 1925 —which settled the issue definitely with a booming triple.

That telling blow sent two runs scampering over the plate to break a 6-6 deadlock.

That was your ball game and Grove was the first to admit it later in the jubilant Red Sox locker room, where he parked his sweat-stained self after a cordon of police has rescued him from a howling mob of admirers as the game ended,

"That Jimmy!" Grove grinned. "He's hit some mighty important baseballs for me over the years. But never one as important as that one today. I had a hunch Jimmy would get one for Old Mose".

For Foxx, it was enough that he had been able to help "Lefty" break into the select circle, which no major league hurler has attained since Grover Alexander turned the trick back in the twenties. For that matter "Lefty" is only the sixth to attain that honor since the turn of the century.

Canadian Henley To "Carry on"

St. Catharines, Ont., July 26.—(CP)—Members of the Canadian Association of amateur oarsmen, at their annual meeting here, last night, decided to carry on the Royal Canadian Henley Regatta, which next year celebrates its diamond jubilee.

The executive suggested that all clubs sponsor as many high school crews as possible, and it was proposed that school athletic authorities be approached for financial assistance.

Maj. Henry B. Burgoyne of St. Catharines, was elected president succeeding R. B. (Bob) Dibble of Toronto. Maj. Burgoyne is president of the Henley Aquatic Association, and was first vice-president of the C.A.A.O.

The Association accepted the application of the Schoolboy Rowing Association for affiliation with the C.A.A.O.

Bill Westwick, sport columnist of the Ottawa Journal, says he never thought he'd see the day when he'd be pencilling the details of a softball game in which Jimmy Cagney, the famous movie star took part. Cagney, Dennis Morgan, George Tobias and Alan Hale of "flickerland" were in Ottawa this week shooting scenes for Warner Brothers new movie—"Captains of the Clouds," starring Cagney. Earlier in the week the Warner Brothers softball team, including Tobias, Morgan and Cagney, played a Red Cross benefit softball game versus the Ottawa Air Force and at which some 3,000 residents of Ottawa saw the "movie boys" win 5 to 4 over the Air Force. Incidentally included in the Air Force lineup was Laurie Gibson, former Trenton R.C.A.F. goalie and softball star. Gibson caught for the Flyers. Your reporter hears that Cagney and the rest of the members of the cast of "Captains of the Clouds" are scheduled to arrive at the Trenton Airport on Sunday, but when shooting continues we could not learn.

Although genial Alan Hale did not participate as an actual player, he did entertain the crowd as umpire-in-chief. Bill Westwick says Hale stole the show as umpire behind the plate, as he had the crowd in fits of laughter with an umpiring characterization that would have put Nick Altrock or Al Schact to shame. Cagney caught for the winning movie team and slashed a hard single through short to score a run for his team. Of course Dennis Morgan was the cynosure of all feminine eyes as he performed around first base. Both Cagney and Morgan confessed to Mr. Westwick they had never played softball before in their lives, but both play baseball occasionally in Hollywood. Whether or not Cagney, Morgan and Hale could be induced to appear in a benefit softball game here next week, if their stay at the Trenton R.C.A.F. base permits is worth consideration of the local softball moguls, now that the O.A.S.A. war charity drive is in full force.

Do you remember when the Canadian Olympic track team defeated Scotland at Greenock, winning five out of nine events, 17 years ago today. E. H. Liddel, Scottish champion, was beaten in the 100 and 200 yard dashes by Cyril Coaffee of Winnipeg.

Willow Wyatt, leading pitcher in the National league, is 32 years old and baldish, but he has a great noodle and is master of the curve ball in the clutches. He's a student too, of psychology, and believes all hitters have habits at bat which a smart twirler can turn to his own advantage.

At both City League play-offs last night there was considerable umpire-baiting, which seems to be the annual practice in our City Softball playdowns. Perhaps the employment of neutral umpires from Trenton in the remaining games would eliminate all this prattle. Bubby Gaulin's Cementmen are "in" the City League finals once again, but not before the Esquire kids tossed a real scare their way last night. Over at the Flats Corbys had to rally to beat the Reliance, when it was Johnnie Bawden's fine relief hurling effort and "Ki" Kiser's booming bat, that put the Corbys one up in a best-in-five series. Reliance didn't get the resemblance of a base knock after the sixth in a game, that was loosely played by both clubs. Ted Henn and Johnny Ronsky did some hefty clouting for Corbys while La-Bonne and Smith hit hardest for the losers. A general melee occurred in the fifth following which Rowbotham and Tuttle were banished, the latter being the aggressor and main instigator of the whole unfortunate fracas.

The United States Golf association gets questions involving everything from the most complicated interpretation of the rules to whether it is good taste to wear a red shirt on a golf course. But they never had one to top this: "A competitor was in the act of swinging her club on the fairway when, like a flash, a ball from a nearby fairway not only knocked the player's ball from its position but stopped on the exact spot. In other words, the 'wandering' ball replaced the player's ball after knocking it away. The player, unable to stop her downswing, smacked the wandering ball on to the green. What is your decision?" The U.S.G.A. ruled that she could retrieve her own ball and play another shot without penalty.

The Corbin "lockmakers" stayed in the Girls' Softball League race with a 24 to 9 win over the very much surprised Vikings last night, thanks to the very potent bat of Pete Haslip, the winners' veteran first-sacker, who just missed a perfect night at bat with a home run, three doubles and a single. Chubby Evelyn Reid had things pretty well her own way hurling for the Corbins, as she turned in her best pitching chore of the season. Her teammates showed their appreciation by driving out two dozen base hits, many being of the extra base nature. Rita Rabbi, the Vikings starting hurler, was shelled from the hilltop in the sixth, after Corbins had scored eight, Norma Maker taking over the pitching chore for the Vikings. One would almost think Pete Haslip was shooting for a spot on the Belleville "All-Stars" for Civic Holiday versus the Sunday Morning Class senior team from Toronto, the way she was pounding the spheriod last night.

SPORT SPICE—Bob Grove attained his goal of 300 major league pitching victories when he pitched the Red Sox to a 10-6 win over the faltering Indians. . . The Red Sox hit hard to give Grove that coveted one victory he needed to place him in the 300-win class along with Cy Young, Walter Johnosn, Eddie Plank, Christy Mathewson and Grover Cleveland Alexander. . . . Joe Krakauskas, former Canadian hurler, did not give the Red Sox a single hit for the first three innings yesterday, but he was drive to the showers with a two-run attack in the fourth. . . Joe and his fire-ball have been recalled from the minor by the Indians in their bid to overtake the Yankees, but the Bronx Bombers are rolling too hard . . yesterday they tacked up their seventh consecutive win for the week. . . Professional wrestling will open at the Hume Arena on Civic Holiday night when Tony (Dat Bum) Galento may be the third man in the ring; more later . . . Two blocks from the Yankee Stadium they've named a street "Lou Gehrig Plaza". . . . On the corners are crossed bats and baseballs. . . The Dodgers stumbled badly yesterday, losing two to the Pirates and dropping further behind the Cardinals. . . . It's too hot, even for that. . . .

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows were standing around the letter box argewing about different subjects such as why eating in resterants seems to be more fun when you're young and whether it would be a good idea to be a dog and never have to work if dogs lived as long as people and kept on feeling playfull and Sam Cross pulled a wallet out of his pocket and opened it and it was full of money, and he started to count it without taking it out of the wallet, saying, Six hundred and 50 dollers, that's right, I thought maybe I'd lost some.

Holey smokes, what're you doing with all that money? I said, and Sam Cross said, It's mine, that's what I'm doing with it, and the first thing I'm going to buy is a motor boat.

Aw go on, we know you, Puds Simkins said.

Meaning Sam Cross is the biggest liar around, being famous for it and Sam said, Well if it belonged to anybody elts what do you think I'd be doing with it? Who do you think would be crazy enough to leave me carry around 6 hundred and fifty dollers of their money? My uncle just left it to me in his will, you've all seen my rich uncle with 3 automobiles, haven't you? he said.

Sure, but what of it, I mean he's not dead yet so how can he be leaving you stuff in his will? Shorty Judge said, and Sam said, Easy, he always wants to get everything over with, so he decided to leave his money to people in his will while he's still alive, so nobody would care whether he was dead or not, he said.

Scotland Carries on With Unabated Courage

By Margaret Currie

Our Scottish cousin sends an intreseting letter telling of some of the conditions in bombed areas, and the effect they have on the people. She says:

"Material possessions have a curious instability, which changes their value altogether. We dare not hold onto anything Even things with sentimental associations seem to have become less valuable for no one knows what a single night may bring or what, if anything, may still be in existence tomorrow. Over and over again people are left with literally none of their possessions, except the clothes they wear at the moment, and sometimes even their clothes are blown off. Nothing, no matter where you stow it, is safe.

"It certainly teaches us the vanity of worldly possessions and gives them their true value. It is just no good treasuring or prizing any material thing in these days and I suppose it is a salutary lesson which we are learning. But we do value the two things which the old doggeral says 'stand like stone' — 'kindness in another's trouble, courage in your own,' and thank God, there is abundant measure of these. I wonder if things will ever take their old, untrue value again. Perhaps we must go through even greater ordeals before the lesson is learnt for good.

"It is very different hearing or reading of raids and being in them. It is not statistics we think of then but of human values — individuals killed or left homeless or bereaved. And it is horrible to listen to the waves of planes going over, to the crump of bombs and wondering who has got it this time. The silence afterwards seems so intense that it keeps many people awake. We just stay in bed as it doesn't much matter where you are if a hit comes. We lay out warm clothes, and make all our preparations for incendiary bombs and then just lie and wait for the glad sound of 'all clear'.

"I sometimes wonder what it will be like when the last 'all clear' has gone and we clear our houses of the clutter of sand-bags, pails of water, black curtains etc., etc.,—if the house still stands! At the end of the last blitz, I heard a German limping badly along and I thought to myself 'My lad, you're a long way from home,' partly glad and partly full of pity for those young lads, bred all their lives on hatred and lies, don't know any better. That is the saddest and most difficult part of it all.

Few Escape Bombings

"There seem to be few people who have not had some damage. Our walls are badly cracked and glass blown out but no serious injury to house, although I don't know how it would stand up to another bad raid. The first really bad raid in this area lasted 9 hours but the last was only 3 hours although it was of unusual ferocity. The Nazi airmen came over in waves and did as much damage in 3 hours as they do in some places in a whole night. Crowds of refugees from nearby places kept arriving at our church, one woman with a fort-night old baby for which she was glad to get a bath in the manor. Do you realize how many babies are born in shelters during air raids? In this town, a building with inflammable stuff was hit and set on fire and the burning liquid ran down the streets between the blazing houses. When the people took to the hills behind the town, the Germans swooped low and machine-gunned them. When homes and hospitals and churches are destroyed, we feel no resentment if we see that they were trying for legitimate targets but this machine-gunning of helpless people and of children in school playgrounds is not legitimate—it's just murder.

It Seems Incredible

"The other day I was working in the garden (we are growing for all we're worth, and among other things some Canadian seeds I was given are doing very well) when I thought I heard a German plane coming over very low and very fast, coming right for us and I thought how fortunate it was that I was the only one of the household out of doors and was in an angle of two walls and already on my knees so had not far to go to flatten out, if machine-gunned. It struck me later that if anyone had told me a couple of years ago that I'd be seriously preparing to be machine-gunned in my own garden that I would have thought it an idea out of a fantastic detective thriller, but we are getting used to incredible things in our daily life. One is especially sorry for invalids and for the old and helpless.

"I know one old lady of 84 who is bedridden and the doctor told her just to get under the bedclothes during a raid. In one of the raids she actually saw the window coming in and pulled up the bedclothes and though the bed was covered with glass in large jagged pieces she was not even scratched. She is a 'sportsman' if you like. During one bad raid, she started a sing-song and enjoyed it so much she forgot all about the blitz although seventy people were killed in the next street.

"Another woman told me of an extraordinary escape. She and her sister were living in a top flat. During the raid, she went to her sister's room after a loud bang and found there was no room left. The sister, still in bed, had gone down six stories and was not seriously hurt, while the other side of the flat, with my friend's room, was still standing.

"Another man, whose house was wrecked, was left suspended in his bed, and climbed out over the rubble in his bare feet. Such odd things happen that one can scarcely believe them.

"So many of these people are left without clothing, and now that we are rationed, it is increasingly hard to supply them, as we have already given so much that our stocks are low, but no one minds being shabby as Fashion died at the outbreak of the war, and we have enough to keep us warm. Also we have a new topic of conversation. Instead of the inevitable bombs and food, there are jokes about 'guns for butter and clothes for margarine' for in the meantime we are using our margarine coupons for clothes. One paper remarked 'Women's slacks cost 8 coupons. We don't think much of the Board of Trade's taste. They should have made the price 67 coupons'. Another says 'No doubt it was the fear of Scottish national sentiment that dictated the decision to require the same number of coupons for a kilt as for a pair of trousers.. Only make sure it is a good kilt of the standard national design. Then have it unpicked and have it made up again into three lounge suits with an extra pair of trousers each. If you are awful timid you can choose a shepherd's tartan (black and white check).

"Another advertised for 'an amiable fakir who might be induced to part with the recipe for hardening the soles of his feet while walking on broken glass and glowing coals.' So you see this new rationing has really cheered us up. The food rationing is different and rather exhausting, especially to older people, although we are promised an improvement, possibly two eggs a week, and 2 ounces of cheese, instead of one. At present we are short of vegetables (one and six was asked for one leek this week) but we have plenty of oatmeal, bread, carrots and tea. It becomes really difficult if you have any extra people for any reason, unless they bring their rations with them, which many do.

Fortitude

"Everyone is cheerful, however, and there is no complaining, even if we have, as we did recently, five disturbed nights in succession. Very often we wake before the alert goes. We seem to sense the approach of danger. Someone said we are getting an instinct like animals, 'pricking our ears' to catch the meaning of sounds — a fraction of a second's pause, although none outwardly takes any notice, and then we go on with what we are saying or doing. Over and over again I have heard people who have lost everything say 'what does anything matter as long as you have your life' — but how many lose this too! The children seem to adjust themselves astonishingly and small boys talk as knowingly about 'blasts' as they used to about cars and planes. The calm courage and optimism of everyone is simply astounding — it almost seems like a divine miracle. All those who work in the devastated streets after a raid speak of the cheerful patience of the most ordinary people, who never shed a tear or utter a complaint. It seems to me that this fortitude and the way they fly the Union Jack over the ruins are more touching than any tears.

"Both our boats are on Government service now. I wonder if we shall ever again knock about on 'blue days at sea.' I remember we were out sailing one day when we met the Hood, the pet and pride of the Clyde. We dipped our blue ensign to her and she returned our salute with her white one. I recall how we laughed when we saw a sailor rushing along the deck to do it—I suppose we were so insignificant we could hardly be seen. And now I think our little 'Ladybird' is still on service, and the Hood is gone!

"We are all still well and safe in our various duties. We have our instructions on what to do if the invasion comes and we are ready for any new deviltry the Nazi can concoct. Our small village recently raised £9, 650 for war to raise £2,500—we are all very proud of ourselves."

TED SCHROEDER IN TENNIS FINALS

Sea Bright, N.J., July 26.—(AP)—Ted Schroeder, the Jersey-born Californian, soon may have some singles trophies to add to the silver ware he and Jack Kramer have been collecting in doubles competition.

The 20-year-old youngster became a star in his own right yesterday as he entered the championship round of Sea Bright's 54th grass court tournament by knocking out Wayne Sabin in a great five-set battle. He also eliminated National Champion Don McNeill in the quarter-final round.

Riggs will be shooting for his fourth Sea Bright title—a feat never accomplished in this grass court classic.

"PETE" HASLIP BATTING STAR AS CORBINS WIN

Paced by the potent war-club of "Pete" Haslip, their starry first-sacker, the Corbins softball squad broke out in a batting rash last night at the Armouries, and swamped the blue-shirted Vikings under an avalanche of 24 safeties for as many runs. The best the Viking squad could do was nine.

The win did not change the league standing as the Corbin squad are still deep in the cellar. The defeat of the Viking team however, consolidated the Deacon team's hold on the third slot.

Haslip scintillated in a game, that saw base knocks of all calibres strewn over all parts of the abbreviated diamond. Her home-run, the longest of the season, rolled behind a car parked in the Post Office lot. For good measure she drove out three doubles and a single in a near perfect day with the willow.

Vikings scored four times in the initial innings but from that time on, aided by some sparkling fielding, Ev. Reid, Corbin hurler handcuffed the Viking sluggers. She let them down with five hits in five innings, and eased up as her teammates pounded twenyt-four hits off the offerings of Rita Rabbi. Maker relieved Rabbi in the eighth in a lost cause.

Corbins scored consistently being blanked on only one innings. They broke out 1 the third chukker and sent 7 runs across the plate and again in the sixth, eight Corbins galloped across the rubber. One each in the first and second, four in the 4th and three in the fifth completed the rout.

Vikings in addition to their initial four, were blanked for five innings, scoring three in the fifth and two in the eighth. Crouter and Blake contributed to the Corbin batting spree with homers, and two singles, each with If,and getting a double, a triple and tw osingles. Maker led the Viking attack with a trio of safeties.

Twenty Players Had Sub-Par Cards To Their Credit

St. Paul, Minn., July 26.—(AP)—The tournament which has become golf's annual battle royal— the $7,500 St. Paul open championship —headed into its second round at Keller Course today. with long shots tossing their challenge at some of the game's biggest and best known stars.

No fewer than 20 players had sub-par cards to their credit as they swung into the second program of the 72 hole event—a par busting total testifying to the low scoring which marked yesterday's opening skirmish in which a big part of the field was as hot as the 98 degree temperature which blistered the course and some 4,000 spectators.

On top were a veteran and two young professionals who have yet to make their mark in major tournament competition—Joe Coria of St. Paul's Municipal Phalen Park layout and Gene Battistoni, an assistant pro at Norwood Park, Ill. They had five under par 67s as did Jimmy Thomson of Chicopee, Mass., one of the game's greatest hitters and long a star in the sport's big time.

Only a stroke off the pace were two well-known veterans, Harry Cooper of Chicago and Ralph Guldahl of Rancho Santa Fe, Calif. Six others were bracketed at 69—Jimmy Hines, Lloyd Mangrum, Horton Smith, Johnny Bulla, Al Huske and Dick Metz while there were five players who shot 70's and four others who came in with one under par 71's.

LUCKY FOR LOVE

CHAPTER EIGHT

At the Blue Parrot

The Blue Parrot, most glittering of those exhibition places that mushroom in New York's Fifty-fourth street, blazoned far and wide that it was the fastest, most furious, most fantastic playground on this or any other continent. That was it's night side.

But the Blue Parrot had a day side too. A dreamy mysterious side, of dim lights and muted music. To a limited clientele who could stand the financial strain, the Blue Parrot offered a luncheon rendezvous.

Husbands who discovered it never mentioned their find to their wives. The publicity man for the Blue Parrot had no worries about getting its luncheon attractions into the paper. His worry was to keep them out of the papers.

At two o'clock in the afternoon, with the Parrot quarter sobbing on its strings, Clara Marsh raised a frosted glass to her lips and said:

"It's marv'lous of you, Mr. Hess, being so nice to poor little me. 'Specially after what happened last night. Al Martino was jealous that's why he acted so mean. Though why he should be, you can ask me. I'm sure I never gave him any encouragement. He's just supposed to be my guide, to look after me and see I get everything I want. You'd think he owned me, the way he acted."

"Never mind, girlie," he said. "We fooled him. We put one over on him." The bulky man laughed, or rather he rumbled. "How's the headache, girlie?"

"Then well have another glass of the medicine that cures little girls' headaches." He signaled a waiter and named a famous brand of champagne.

"Tell him to put a cherry in it, Mr. Hess. I love cherries."

Mr. Hess tried not to shudder.

"So you're the Beauty Queen," he said, leaning forward and covering Clara with avid eyes. "I'll say they sure picked the right girl. I bet they stole you off a magazine cover. Yes sirree. I'll bet if I introduced you to an artist friend of mine here in town, he'd beg you to let him paint you. I'll bet he'd say, 'Herman Hess, there is the little girl who is going to make me famous'. He would, so help me!"

"Oh, Mr. Hess—" (meaning go on Mr. Hess, don't stop please).

"Yes, he would, too. But I have a better idea. An idea that will make you famous—that is, even more famous than you are now. Why should we bother with an artist fellow when we have you? How would you like to go in the show business?"

Clara thought, "Don't let me faint. If I faint he might get scared and take back what he said."

She managed to say, "You mean—the—theatre?"

"Better than the theatre. The theatre is old-timey where we live, girlie—a lot of old-timers raring and ranting around the stage. Who wants to sit away out front and watch a lot of old-timers show off. No sirree. The live wires want to be on the stage too, having a good time with the actors and actresses. We want to talk to them, dance with them, buy them champagne, not just look at them. That's why you find all the live wires in the restaurants, in the night clubs nowadays. That's why all the stars are tromping over one another trying to get engagements in the night clubs. They know where to find the live wires. They know which side their bread is buttered on."

Herman Hess paused for effect.

"I guess they do," Clara said. "I guess they're pretty smart."

"Yes sirree." The effect was good. Herman swelled with pomposity. "Now you take the Blue Parrot. Best club in town. Best people. Celebrities. Why I've seen the nights here when you couldn't move without rubbing a celebrity's elbow. Where's the first place a big Hollywood star goes when he or she comes to New York? The Blue Parrot! If you want to be seen, if you want to be in the swim, go to the Blue Parrot."

"It's marv'lous here. Simply marv'lous."

"I'll say it is. That's what all the live wires say. So what happens? Every big name actor and actress in the show business wants to play in the Blue Parrot. I know. The proprietor's an old friend of mine. He tells me how the biggest stars on the stage, the biggest singers and dancers, drive him crazy beggin him to let them do their stuff in the Blue Parrot. He laughs at them. He don't want actors and actresses. He wants girls, beautiful girls. That's what live wires pay their money to see, beautiful girls. Get beautiful girls in a place and you have to lock the doors to keep out the crowd."

"It must be marv'lous to act—I mean play—in a place like the Blue Parrot," Clara said wistfully.

"Marvelous? It's a miracle. But miracles happen girlie. Yes sirree. Now that's where I come in, Herman Hess, the miracle man. What would you do if I got a spot for you in the floor show of the Blue Parrot?"

Now Clara was sure she was going to faint. She emptied her glass at a gulp. "Why Mr. Hess! I don't know what I'd do. I guess I'd just simply—fall dead."

"No, you wouldn't either. You'd call me Herman and you'd say, 'Herman, you're the best friend I ever had. Herman where do we go from here?'"

The wine of the grape and the wine of unbelieveable promise were spinning in Clara's head like a merry-go-round. She had difficulty focusing on Herman's pudgy face.

"But, Mr. Hess, there's nothing 'specially I can do—I've never played on the stage or in a night club—"

"A girl like you don't have to know the show business. All she has to do is be herself. Girlie, you're in luck. My friend, the proprietor, is putting on a beauty pageant in the Blue Parrot in a couple of weeks. He's putting on a beauty pageant, and he's putting you in his show."

"Mr. Hess—Herman!" Music and faces and glasses and Hermans were all jumbled together.

Saturday. In the Bon Ton Department Store, Millville, Marilyn Marsh waited on a customer in the book department.

She said, "I'm sure you will find this practical dictionary a friend. It's compact, so you can tuck it into any handy corner, and it is the most complete in the market, for its size."

"Did you say a dollar and fifty-nine cents?" the customer asked.

"Yes. A dollar fifty-nine. The regular price is one seventy-five. We're having a sale on books, so you've found a bargain. Could I interest you in some of our other books? We have a fine collection."

"Thanks. Not today. Here we are—the exact change. And much obliged for your advice."

Marilyn turned toward the cash register.

"Hi Sis," young Bill Marsh appeared from behind a pile of classics, his face moist with perspiration, his red hair tousled. "I got something for you. A letter."

"A letter?" Marilyn took the extended envelope from a grimy hand. "But couldn't it wait until I came home from the store? Bill, look at your hands."

"Aw gee, Sis, I'm sorry but I was playing ball and I came home to get a drink and the mailman brought this letter. He said it was special delivery and I'd have to sign for it. Mums wasn't home so I signed my name and I looked at the printing up in the corner of the envelope and I saw it was from the Clarco company that gave you all that money. So I beat it down here without stopping to do anything. I bet I smashed all the track records ever was."

"I hope Clarco hasn't made a mistake," she said. "Mixed the names on the jingles — changed their minds—"

"Aw, Sis! They couldn't do that. It wouldn't be fair. Put it back in the envelope. Pretend you didn't get it. Aw, gee, if I hadn't gone home for a drink—"

"Would that be fair, Bill? Is lying fair, is cheating fair? Besides you signed for the letter, so you see, the truth would catch up with us. It always does. Well now, let's see—" Marilyn scanned the page hastily, drew it closer, formed her lips into an "Oh" but was too overcome to voice it.

Former Belleville Doctor Heads 2nd Canadian Medical Hospital Centre in England

London, Ont., July 26—(CP)—Capt. Edward G. Kennedy, better known, perhaps, as "Kewpie" Kennedy who starred on the University of Western Ontario football team some years ago, has been appointed Commanding Officer of the 2nd Canadian Medical Centre Hospital in England, according to word received here. Born in Sarnia, Dr. Kennedy practised in Belleville, Ont., before going overseas about a year ago.

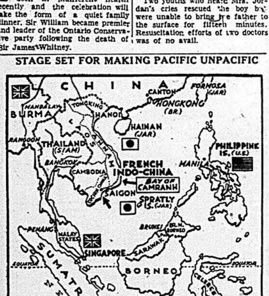
Father Drowned Diving to Rescue Of Young Son

Kitchener, Ont., July 26—(CP)—Thought to have suffered a heart attack when he dived into the water to rescue his eight-year-old son, Edward Jordan of St. Clements, Ont. drowned at nearby Wallenstein last night.

Jordan, branch manager of The Canadian Bank of Commerce, was sitting on the bank with his wife and three of his children when his young son, who had been playing on a raft, shouted for help. The father dived into the water but failed to come to the surface.

Two youths who heard Mrs. Jordan's cries rescued the boy but were unable to bring the father to the surface for fifteen minutes. Resuscitation efforts of two doctors was of no avail.

STAGE SET FOR MAKING PACIFIC UNPACIFIC



Successful in her demands for bases in French Indo-China last year, Japan made the usual follow-up of the totalitarian formula—a demand for more bases. It is reported that these demands also have met with success, giving Japan eight more bases, probably at Saigon and the Bay of Camranh (arrows). These new bases might be used as a spring for the eventual launching of the long-expected Japanese attack on the Dutch East Indies.

News of the Produce Markets

Toronto — Stronger prices ruled for butter and eggs during the current week's session of the Toronto open produce market. Poultry showed little change in quiet dealings.

C grades led advances of 1 to 2 cents a dozen on the egg market, the gains being the result of light receipts and good demand. The usual commitments went forward to Eastern and Northern points and also to the various military supply depots. Humid weather is affecting quality, and the Department of Agriculture advises that shippers are forwarding eggs by truck to emphasise the need of prompt delivery of such shipments.

Grade A. large were quoted at 32 1-2 cents, B. at 26 cents to 26 1-2 cents and C. grade at 22 1-2 cents.

Small receipts, reflecting the seasonal decline in production, and lighter offerings kept the butter market firm during the week. In the last two days the buying pace eased, but local demand was sufficient to keep supplies moving. No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids closed yesterday at 36 cents a pound, for a gain of 1-2 cent a pound on the week. That compares with the minimum level of 30 1-2 cents. Friday, two or three cars of the Western product turned over on the basis of 36 1-2 cents a pound.

While the week's receipts on the poultry market were not heavy, arrivals were more than local demand could absorb. Deliveries of fowl, however, were on the light side and the supply of heavy spring chicken was limited. Lightweight birds were fairly plentiful and these did not find a ready sale. Arrivals of broilers kept well cleared by outside inquiries, any surplus locally being packed for storage.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, July 26 (CP—Produce market prices here yesterday, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade solids, jobbing price, 36 1-2c; Quebec No. 1 pasteurized current receipt price, 36 1-8c; No. 2, 35 1-8c; No. 1 wholesale price, 36 1-2c; No. 2, 35 3-4c. Receipts, 319.

Eggs: Graded shipments selling at A large 34 1-2c to 35; A-medium 33c to 33 1-2c; B grade, 26 1-2c to 27c; C grade, 22 1-2c to 23c; receipts 1,402 cases.

Howe Believes Worst of Battle Of Atlantic Past

Shawinigan Falls, Que., July 26 —Munitions Minister Howe said Friday he believed that "the worst of the Battle of the Atlantic is over."

Speaking after he had inspected four plants in this industrial centre near Three Rivers, the Munitions Minister added that "now it is up to the manufacturers to produce so that we may bring an end to this struggle."

The losses of the navy and the merchant marine had been heavy, he said, and "we are obtaining raw materials and producing ammunition, but all of us have been worried as to whether boats would be available to take it to England."

"However, June and July have been among our best months" in the number of ships that reached England safely. He believed it was a sign that the Battle of the Atlantic had passed its worst stage for Britain.

Speaking of Canadian production, Mr. Howe said that at the beginning of the war "it was a case of getting orders to warrant a tooling-up in Canada. Later, it was a case of constructing additions to plants to take care of the flood of orders, but now we have passed the construction stage and have reached the stage of production."

The parade will march through city streets prior to attending the service, headed by the band. Squadron Leader Denton Massey will be in charge of the detachment.

Following the service the band will parade to the Fair Grounds where it will give a special band concert, the first of a series of performances to be given by guest bands of the district under the auspices of the Belleville Municipal Band. The concert will start in the vicinity of 8.30 p.m.

Daily Round T.C.A. Trip Toronto - London - Windsor To be Discontinued

Winnipeg, July 26 (CP)—D B. Colyer, vice-president of Trans-Canada Air Lines, today announced that effective August 1 the daily round T.C.A. trip between Toronto, London and Windsor, in Ontario will be discontinued.

He said the service reduction was necessitated because the Canadian government had requisitioned two T.C.A. planes. Other T.C.A. services also may be affected by the requisitioning, he added.

The aircraft requisitioned by the government are Lockheed 14's — huge silver machines which carry ten passengers and a crew of three.

HUN THRUST FAILS,

On the central front, Nazi planes were credited with carrying out a daylight raid against Moscow and scoring direct hits on railway facilities.

Residents of the German capital meanwhile experienced their first air raid in almost two months. The German authorities claimed, however, that no bombs fell within the city limits.

(The British Air Ministry announced heavy bombs struck in the heart of Berlin.)

Foresees Long Struggle

Dienst Aus Deutschland, commentary close to the German foreign office, left no doubt that Russian-German hostilities would continue for an indefinite time.

A gigantic battle with the Russians will reach a decisive position after current operations along the Stalin line are completed, the commentary said.

Right now a pitched battle is going on inside the Stalin line, the commentary stated, but it will be some days yet before complete results of the struggle can be reported.

Germans Meet Difficulties

One reporter described difficulties in storming certain Russian fortifications.

"Suited to the wooded, hilly land and cleverly camouflaged with cut stalks of grain, trenches and machine-gun nests dotted the terrain," he said. "One position was connected with the other.

"A furious fire broke loose against the storming Germans. The battalion broke through the wood, but only after bloody fighting. The Soviets resisted tenaciously."

A German radio claimed Vitebsk, a city of 127,000 and a bastion in the Stalin line, had been wiped out by the Russians before they retreated.

Nazis Have Experts Ready

On the economic and social front more than 1,000 German administrators, industrial, engineering and business experts headed by idealogical leader Alfred Rosenberg are awaiting the command of Hitler to move into occupied Russia and place it under Nazi administration.

With the title of Reich's minister for the occupied eastern areas, Rosenberg will be in charge of the Baltic states, the Ukraine and Russia proper. He will have no jurisdiction over Poland where Reich's Minister Hans Frank is firmly entrenched as governor-general.

BRITISH

Occupation of Indo-China would increase Japanese stocks of rubber, tin, rice, tungsten, coal and zinc, but Britain and the United States could cripple Japan by cutting off her imports of iron ore, scrap iron, pig iron, copper, nickel, aluminum, manganese, vanadium, mercury, cotton and wool, experts declared.

Britain already has scaled down to relatively unimportant quantities most of her exports to Japan because of her own war needs. But with American and Netherlands East Indies co-operation and British naval forces already in the Red Sea, Indian Ocean and the Atlantic, the blockade could be cheaply and quickly applied, it was held.

It was conceded that Japan has large supplies on hand built up during two years of large-scale buying, but with 2,500,000 troops in the field, the world's third-largest navy and an expanding air force to supply, it was believed she soon would feel the pinch of a blockade.

Answered Freezing Move

(Japan was reported to have answered the freezing move with similar action against the $50,000,000 United States assets and was expected to do likewise regarding the $200,000,000 British assets in Shanghai investments. To do so Japan first must take over the International Settlement, probably in the name of the Japanese sponsored Nanking regime.)

The Netherlands Government was expected to join Britain and the United States in the freezing action, which would affect important Japanese trade with the Netherlands East Indies, an official statement said the Government was in consultation with authorities in Batavia.

British sources called the joint action of the three Governments historic, since it was against "a country which neither is a declared enemy nor occupied nor controlled by a declared enemy. It was hailed as concrete proof that the policy of appeasement is completely dead.

"The reply of the democracies to Japanese aggression comes swiftly and united......appeasement has ended," write the News Chronicle.

A Restraining Influence

The Daily Mail said: "It is obvious that the United States is a restrainnig influence on Japan in the Pacific," and suggested the United States should have the preponderant voice in Pacific policy.

"With no loss of time, deeds in the form of a trade blockade and frozen assets are to supplement words of warning already spoken in London and Washington.... If Japan goes south to occupy Thailand—thus menacing Sinapore—or to thrust south to the Dutch East Indies we will be compelled to resist with every means," the paper said.

Reuters News Agency in a dispatch from Singapore said that "after months of continuous preparation Malaya—and indeed the whole of the British, American, Chinese and Dutch East Indies front in the Far East—feel they are now ready to meet any situation with confidence."

Ottawa, July 26 (CP)—In a move obviously intended as retaliation for Japanese moves toward French Indo-China, the Dominion Government has taken action to prevent withdrawal of Japanese assets from Canada.

One spokesman said it was his understanding such assets actually have been frozen for at least a week, but the formal announcement was timed to coincide with a similar London statement and one by President Roosevelt at Hyde Park.

At the request of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, freezing of Chinese assets also was put into effect but only to prevent any possibility of their falling into Japanese hands through the Japanese occupation of large areas of China.

Spokesmen made it plain that the freezing order would have all-inclusive effect on Canada-Japan trade and financial transactions of all kinds. It was taken for granted any Japanese ships which happened to be in Canadian waters would not be permitted to leave.

Official Announcement

The official announcement from the Department of External Affairs gave no details of the order. It merely said:—

"The Prime Minister announced tonight that the necessary steps have been taken to prevent withdrawal of assets in Canada belonging to residents of Japan.

"No financial transactions affecting residents of Japan can be undertaken without the specific permission of the Foreign Exchange Control Board.

"At the request of the Chinese Government a similar measure of control will cover the disposition of the assets in Canada of residents of China.

"It is understood that this measure will not disturb existing arrangements for the transfer of patriotic and benevolent remittance by Chinese residents in Canada.

Shortly after opinion was expressed here that Japanese ships in Canadian waters would not be permitted to leave, Vancouver port officials said they believe the Florida Maru, loading a cargo of logs across Burrard Inlet from Vancouver is the only Japanese vessel in British Columbia waters at present. None was reported on the East Coast.

Ships in U.S. Immobilized

Treasury officials said that while Japanese ships in United States ports or waters would be at least temporarily immobilized, a final decision would be made in the immediate future as to whether the vessels were "assets" under the order.

Maritime officials said four Japanese vessels were now in American waters and about 40 others flying the Rising Sun flag were hovering off the Pacific coast, hesitant to enter American ports until the question had been decided.

There was no immediate information available as to whether there were any United States ships—which might be seized in retaliation—in Japanese ports or waters.

Japan already has in force severe exchange control and other financial and economic measures which have greatly restricted utilization of American assets there and served as almost the equivalent of "freezing."

Edward H. Foley, General counsel of the Treasury, who signed the orders as acting Secretary in the absence of Secretary Morgenthau, said they "froze all trade between the two countries."

Under the order, it was explained, an American exporter must obtain a treasury licence before shipping oil or any other commodity to Japan, and an American importer must secure a licence before he can import raw silk or any other product from Japan.

Only Two Vessels Sunk by Enemy In Week of July 26

(By The Canadian Press)

The blackout on news of the war at sea continued in the week ended July 26, with only two vessels, the 3,174-ton British ship Malvernian and the 4,765-ton Norwegian steamship Vigrid, reported sunk.

Maritime circles in New York listed a group of six ships totalling 53,234 tons, including the 16,082-ton Netherlands liner Pennland, as sunk in April in the evacuation of Greece. It was the first information as to specific ships sunk in that battle, but the total tonnage was included in the British Admiralty's official summary for April.

Youngstown, N.Y., July 26 (AP)—Coastguardsmen reported today recovery last night of the body of Walter F. N. Windeyer, 69, Toronto sportsman and businessman who drowned July 19 when he slipped from the yacht Iolanthe.

The body, found five miles northeast of the mouth of the Niagara River, was three miles beyond the point where he drowned.

RECREATION CENTRE OPENED.

New York, July 26 (AP)—One of New York City's major recreational centres, a vast new park on the Flushing Meadow site of the World's Fair in 1939 and 1940, was opened today. The park's new swimming pool and amphitheatre will be dedicated tonight with Mayor La Guardia officiating.

GASOLINE CANS ARE PROHIBITED BY CONTROLLER

All Deliveries of Motor Oil and Fuel Must be Made to Tank of Vehicle After July 31

CASH BASIS ONLY

The Federal oil controller, G. R. Cottrelle, yesterday made public an order directing that on and after July 31, all motor fuel and oil sold to private car owners must be on a cash basis and further directing that delivery of gasoline to a passenger motor vehicle must now be made to the tank forming part of the vehicle.

The direction on cash purchases stated that the order exempts sales to licensed taxicab owners, and says dealers still may grant credit to operators of motor vehicles bearing commercial license plates.

Mr. Cottrelle's statement said that some motorists were seeking to evade the prohibited hours of sale by carrying cans and other separate receptacles in their cars. It adds that "dealers are now expressly prohibited from delivering gasoline to cans or other receptacles which may be used to supply a private passenger vehicle during prohibited hours of sale."

Delivery of gasoline must now be made to the tank forming part of the motor vehicle.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture has issued instructions to all members of the Department to tighten up on gasoline consumption, so as to fall in line with the Federal Government's oil and gasoline conservation program, it was announced at the office of Hon. P. M. Dewan, yesterday.

Problem of 'Gas' For Motor Boats

Toronto, July 26 (CP)—The Federal Oil Controller, G. R. Cottrell, eral Oil Controller G. R. Cottrelle tion is being given to restrictive measures for use of gasoline by motorboat owners.

Mr. Cottrelle said that an order yesterday directing that delivery of gasoline now must be made to the tank forming part of the motor vehicle, made no restriction to motor boat users.

He added that in the last week he had been "bothered" by lack of cooperation by motorboat owners and that consideration now is being given to this problem.

Bottle of Beer Found in Well After 40 Years

Vincennes, Ind., July 26—(AP)—Forty years ago Henry Barr of nearby Bruceville wanted a cold bottle of beer. So he took a bottle, tied a string around the neck and let it down into his well. The string broke. Workmen cleaning out the well the other day found the bottle. The beer still looked clear, Barr's wife put it on ice and said she'd write the brewers, still in business, to see if they wanted it for a souvenir.

Picton and District

Picton, July 26—Miss Ella Shannon has been ill at her home on Centre Street.

Mr. Clayton Gordon of Halifax, spent a few days with his family in Picton, having been called from Halifax, because of the illness of his father, Mr. Wash Gordon, who suffered a stroke at his home in Norwood. Mr. Sam Gordon of Toronto accompanied Mr. Clayton Gordon to Norwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Daubney and a party of young people enjoyed a sail down bay on Sunday. Later they had tea at Quinte Lodge the beautiful summer home of Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Smith and daughter Sally of Rochester, N.Y.

Dr. E. D. Fyffe visited the Boy Scout camp at Waupoos on Wednesday with a fine treat of watermelon for the boys.

The annual Anglican Sunday School picnic was greatly enjoyed at the Outlet on Wednesday afternoon. There was bathing early in the afternoon, followed by a programme of sports carried out by Rev. J. B. Creeggan, Mr. Gay Welsh, Mr. Ted Manlow and Mrs. C. G. Rutter. The children were then treated to ice cream and a candy scramble on the beach. Supper was spread on long tables at five o'clock.

Mrs. Jas. Inrig and family are preparing to spend two weeks at a cottage at the Outlet early in August.

In a Large Military Camp

It is Sunday evening in a large military camp in Eastern Canada. Our civilian duties have made it necessary for us to remain in camp during the week end.

Fron Monday until Friday evening we have watched these young Canadian soldiers hustle and bustle through the battle manoeuvres and have seen them participating in Athletic Games—enjoying Movies and Concerts. We have felt and seen the excitement of preparing for week-end leave by the fortunate ones but now it is Sunday and there are still thousands of men in the camp.

Sunday is a different day in an army camp, even when one is engaged in the grim business of war. A few restless fellows are wandering around, munching at chocolate bars or eating ice-cream cones, many are sitting around in small groups, relaxing and carrying on quiet conversations, but the majority seem to be engaged in that well-known pastime of letter-writing. Hundreds of letters on this particular Sunday will be written to mothers, wives, sisters, brothers, sweethearts and friends throughout the Dominion of Canada.

In spite of the extreme heat of a very warm July day many of the lads are enjoying a quiet game of ping-pong and the continual "ping" of the ball as it is rapidly passed back and forth across the net, is intermingled with the continuous hum of the electric fans. Yes, it is Sunday and the boys are thinking of home and loved ones.

Suddenly very quietly and softly from the open door of the chapel which seems to be a feature of all Y.M.C.A. huts, comes the strain of a very familiar hymn. Pens and pencils stop their steady flow across the pages, heads are raised from the writing desks, ice-cream cones and chocolate bars are hurriedly finished, the ping-pong balls cease reverberating against the bats half finished letters are folded and carefully placed in tunic pockets. With caps in hands the soldier boys start to file into the chapel and gather around the "Y" Supervisor at the piano. Quickly the chapel is filled to overflowing and someone suggests moving to the auditorium where many hiundreds more may be accommodated. Small groups of fellows who have been sitting outside the hut are attracted by the full-throated chorus and they, too, join the group in the auditorium.

A young, fresh-faced lad with the markings of a well-known Canadian Regiment on his tunic volunteers to play the piano, thus releasing the "Y" man to lead the singing. The young pianist later told us that he was organist in his home-town church and that his father served in France in the last war with the same regiment to which he was now attached. Like his Dad he hoped to win a commission in the field.

For one hour we listened to those clean-cut Canadian lads raising their voices in songs of reverence and dedication. A camp chaplain joined in the service and brought the boys a very appropriate message.

It was a real inspiration to us as we sat in that Y.M.C.A. auditorium on a beautiful Sunday evening and realized the fine type of young men that we had in our Canadian army, and the same would be equally true of our Sailors, Airmen and Merchant Marines.

No doubt the lads finished their letters to loved ones at the conclusion of the Sunday evening sacred sing-song but we are sure that during that hour they found an outlet for their inner feelings.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Ninotchka

Greta Garbo in "Ninotchka", her first venture into sophisticated romance of modern times, presents a new side of her many talents. "Ninotchka" (Do Not. Pronounce it. . . . see it) opens next at the McCarthy Theatre with the added feature Peter Lorre in 'Stranger on The Third Floor".

In "Ninotchka" Miss Garbo plays a Russian commissar who finds glamor and a great love while on a government mission to Paris. Brilliant comedy lines are contrasted with gripping dramatic moments. Ernest Lubitsch directed with his famous skill. Melvyn Douglas is suave as the gay French count for whose love Garbo outwits Ina Claire, playing the "other woman". Miss Claire plays her role with a skillful comedy touch. Garbo is gay, sings, dances to swing music, wears gorgeous Adrien creations, and in every detail presents an entirely new Garbo to her fans. A new discovery in comedy teams is the trial composed of Felix Bressart, Alexander Granach and Sig Ruman as the three philandering officials. Bela Lugosi plays his first sympathetic role on the screen and does it convincingly, as the chief commissar. For entertainment "Ninotchka" is one of the finest you'll be delighted with for a long time. 'Stranger on The Third Floor' is top-rated also. Latest world-wide McCarthy-Fox news events, round out this splendid show. The "Glasbake" ovenware piece to be given during the showing of 'Ninotchka" and "Stranger on The Third Floor", is the useful deep dish.

KEEN-EYED CANADIANS LEARN ANTI-TANK TACTICS

Young Business Men Conduct Insurance Firm

A. Bateman

Said to be the largest general insurance firm in the County of Hastings, Haig, McDougall and Bateman is one of the most flourishing concerns of its kind in this district. Headed by aggressive young business men, Messrs. McDougall and C. Arthur Bateman, the Front street insurance company enjoys the business and confidence of a rapidly growing clientele. The third member of the firm and one of its originators, Pilot Officer A. McLean Haig, is now an administrative officer with the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Established in 1934, the firm now engages in all types of insurance including fire, auto, burglary, bonds, liability, plate-glass and marine. At one time the company was the official representative of upwards of sixty companies, but this number has been reduced to give better facilities to the public.

A point of pride with the firm is the fact that it is the sole agent for the Halifax Insurance Company, the oldest firm of its kind in Canada. This company was established in 1809.

C. Arthur Bateman, the youngest member of the firm is a Hastings County boy and was born in the township of Rawdon. Born to the soil he worked on the farm for a period of six years after graduating from school. Ill-health forcing him to relinquish his agricultural pursuits, he attended the Ontario Business College. Upon graduation he immediately became associated with the firm of Haig Brothers. Later he purchased the interest of Mr. Jack Haig, who is now in England with his regiment.

The steady progress of the company is an indication of what a progressive young firm can accomplish with a policy of fair and courteous dealing with the public. It enjoys an enviable reputation among a large clientele, and is steadily establishing a name for itself in insurance circles in this part of Ontario.

The total for the first six months of 1941 advanced to $712,367,000 compared with $548,139,000 in the like period of 1940, an advance of 30 per cent.

Domestic exports to the United Kingdom in June totalled $62,752,000 compared with $53,894,000 in June last year, while the total for the first half of 1941 aggregated $317,509,000 as compared with $247,971,000 a year ago. June domestic exports to the United States were valued at $51,910,000 compared with $39,350,000 a year ago. The total for the first six months of this year was $255,416,000 compared with $191,849,000 last year.

Finest Grade Leathers Used By Dutton's

A. Dutton

Leather tanning was probably the first manufacturing process of primitive man used as clothing, shelter and armour. Leather has existed through all the periods of time of which we have records. Skins and hides were often used to designate the social, religious or professional rank of a person. High rank was designated by wearing the skin of a lion; less important positions rated the skin of a wolf, and so on.

The discovery of leather tanage was discovered partly through a warrior who lost his armour in a lake. Some weeks later it was found to be in a good state of preservation. This lake contained a high concentration of mineral salts which acted as a tanning agent.

Vegetable tanning was discovered through discarded skins being thrown away in water containing bark of trees and leaves and nuts.

When vegetable tanning was discovered, hides were stiff and hard and had to be softened by lubricants. This process was handed down through each succeeding generation during the last 100 years. Volumes have been written describing the investigation in the field of leather research.

Cow hides are the principal hides for sole leather. Calf, goat and deer skins are made into shoe uppers. Reptile and fish skins, horse hides and pigskins are usually made into gloves and mitts.

Years ago the tanning of hides was a very long process taking as long as six months but with improved methods of machinery. Leather is now tanned much faster. the same principle applies to modern shoe repairing. Years ago it took one hour to sew on a pair of men's soles . . . today with the latest shoe machinery a pair of men's soles can be sewn on within one minute.

Dutton's shoe repair, long established in Belleville, is equipped with the most modern machinery available to the trade. Finest grade leathers are used and expert workmanship is assured.

Business Factors Main Influence Of Economic Activity

The factors indicating the trend of economic conditions averaged higher in the first half of the present year than in any similar period since 1929. Business factors were the main influence in the expansion of economic activity. Accelerated by war demands, business operations were at a higher level than at any time in history. The advance was practically continuous since the early months of 1938. The marked gain in June carried the index of the physical volume of business to a new high point. The main factor in raising the business index last month was the heavy placement of contracts with the construction industry.

The advance in wholesale prices continued, a new high point since the early months of 1930 having been reached in June. Commodity prices rose sharply in the first four months subsequent to the outbreak of hostilities. A certain measure of stability in the general level was indicated during the first half of 1940. Since that time the advance has been continued and weekly indexes record that the pace was accelerated in the latest month.

Financial factors were inconclusive in June a minor recession having been shown in high-grade bond prices. Bank liabilities in the form of notice and demand deposits were fully maintained at the first of June. Heavy payments on the victory loan during the month under review probably resulted in a temporary reduction in notice deposits. Speculative factors including the price index of common stocks and the number of shares traded on the exchanges were at low levels during the first half of the year .

Dropping of Bombs Over London Seen As Retaliation

Some Casualties Reported Among Residents of Several Districts

FIRST IN LONG TIME

London, July 28 (CP) — German planes droned two hours over this capital early today and dropped bombs for the first time in almost two months, causing some damage and a number of casualties among raid-lax residents of several districts.

Unfavorable weather, for the second successive night, restricted British operations. One small force of bombers attacked docks at Dunkirk.

The majority of London casualties were persons caught in their own homes, and an air-raid precautions officer said "absence of raids in this part of the country for a considerable time resulted in people getting out of the habit of using shelters."

The attack was considered retaliation for the Royal Air Force sortie against Berlin Friday night.

Raids on Other Towns

Striking almost simultaneously, 10 high-explosive bombs fell in the middle of one suburban street or struck houses. At least six women and six children were killed and several others were injured, some seriously, it was reported.

Japanese Paper Assails Washington

Tokyo, July 29.—(Tuesday)—The Foreign Office-controlled Japan Times and Advertiser today described the United States as 'hostile' and the leader in an economic battle against Japan as the Japanese Press generally employed sharper terms in attacking Washington's economic measures.

Informed circles, however, said the action of the Netherlands East Indies in freezing Japanese assets —following the lead of Britain, United States and Canada, might produce far-reaching consequences.

Japan gets great quantities of oil from the Indies and shutting off of that supply, it was said, might bring about a drastic change in the far eastern situation.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, July 28 (CP)— The weather has been decidedly warm over the greater part of Ontario with thundershowers in many districts and thunder showers have also occurred in Manitoba and Saskatchewan while in Alberta it has been fair with moderate temperature.

NETHERLANDS E. I. SUSPENDS PACT

All Monetary and Commercial Dealings With Japan Placed on Special Permit Basis

Batavia, Netherland East Indies, July 28 (AP)—The agreement of last year whereby Japan was to receive 1,800,000 tons of oil annually from The Netherlands East Indies has been suspended and all monetary and commercial dealings with Japan have been placed on a special permit basis.

The extent of the economic measures was outlined early today at a session of the People's Council of this colony by H. J. Van Mook, Director of Economic Affairs, who has been the chief economic negotiator with the Japanese.

Japan's prospective intake of oil from the largely American and British owned properties here had been stepped up from 494,000 tons a year to the 1,800,000 figure by as agreement announced last November 13.

It was worked out among colonial officials, the oil companies, Ichiro Kobayashi, representing the Tokyo government, and Tadaharu Mukai, chairman of the vast Mitsui interests of Japan.

Kingston, Ont., July 28.—(CP)—It was announced today that the Pyke Salvage and Wrecking Company has been awarded the contract for releasing the Steamship Rapids Prince from the Lachine Rapids near Montreal.

The Rapids Prince ran aground several weeks ago.

JAPAN'S COUNCIL RATIFIES ACCORD WITH VICHY GOV'T

Encourages Government To Prepared to Cope With Any Developments

FREEZING OF ASSETS

Vichy, France, July 28—(AP)—It was announced officially tonight that Japan will occupy two points on the coast of French Indo-China and several points in the interior by agreement with the Vichy Government.

The inland concessions are in Annam, a coastal region running most of the length of the French Asiatic Colony, and in Cochin-China, at the southernmost tip of the Peninsula across the Gulf of Siam from Malaya.

Japanese troops, it was disclosed, also will have use of Indo-Chinese roads, and possibly railroads, to move southward to their new bases. Japanese forces already are based in Northern Indo-China.

Larger deliveries of rice to Japan also were exacted in the agreement between Vice-Premier Jean Darlan and the Japanese ambassador, Sotomatsu Kato.

Tokyo, July 28 (AP)—Japan's Privy Council, in the presence of Emperor Hirohito, ratified today the Tokyo-Vichy accord under which Japan is moving troops, planes and warships into southeastern Asia for further occupation of French Indo-China.

Members of the Council according to the Japanese News Agency Domei, further "encouraged the government to be prepared to cope with any situation which may arise in the East Asia co-prosperity sphere."

Domei said this exhortation, looking toward the need for still further action in the southwestern Pacific, was voted by the Council's investigation committee which recommended to the whole Council favorable action on the pact.

Alexandria, Egypt, July 27 (delayed) (AP).—A British submarine captain, just returned from Mediterranean operations, described today the sinking of an Axis convoy off Crete by "knocking them off like ducks in a shooting gallery".

Ordered to frustrate German and Italian efforts to reinforce Aegean islands, the captain came back with a "sunk" score of five caiques, two schooners, one big Italian tanker and one troop transport.

The captain was at sea about two weeks. His detailed account of action went something like this "Sliding througr the Aegean the submarine first came upon a convoy of two troopships escorted by a destroyer and an aircraft. The ships were loaded with Italian soldiers probably on their way to Piraeus, port of Athens.

"We immediately fired torpedoes at each of the ships, one about 4,000 tons, the other 2,500 tons. We hit and undoubtedly sank the largest, which I believe, was the City of Tripoli. The destroyer depth-charged us for nearly an hour as we rapidly submerged, but their 'ashcans' didn't fall close enough."

(Lloyd's register lists no City of Tripoli, but there is a 2,933-ton passenger vessel named Citta Di Tripoli.)

Using her four-inch deck gun, the submarine later sank a caique aboard which there were 30 Germans, the captain said.

Peering through his periscope about two days later, the captain sighted a large caique and a schooner, both flying the swastika and loaded with troops. Coming to the surface the submarine opened fire and shelled for six minutes, setting both ships ablaze. About 100 German soldiers leaped for rubber boats.

Some time later the submarine ran into her first night action. A convoy of three caiques and one schooner was sighted between the Greek mainland and Crete carrying troops, fuel oil and ammunition, the captain said.

"We sank them one by one, knocking them off like wooden ducks in a shooting gallery by gunfire under brilliant early-morning moonlight," the captain said. "There was some light fire from a gun aboard one of the caiques, but all their shells burst miles from us."

The submarine moved alongside one of the caiques before sinking her.

One of the submarine officers boarded the caique. He spoke German. While he asked questions one German soldier attempted to hurl a hand grenade but he was shot dead. Another German raised his rifle and he, too, was shot down. The Germans were ordered to abandon the caique and then clambered into a rubber raft.

It was after this encounter that the submarine intercepted an Italian tanker of 5,000 tons. She was sunk by a torpedo, the captain said.

BLAST DESTROYS 350,000 BUSHELS OF CORN

This spectacular picture was taken just as a billow of white hot flame blew off the top of a United States grain elevator at Chicago, during a $300,000 fire of mysterious origin. More than 350,000 bushels of corn were destroyed. Furnace-like heat seared surrounding territory for blocks, melted steel girders like butter, and repeatedly drove back firemen working to control the blaze.

PARALLEL PATROLS IN N. ATLANTIC GUARD LIFELINE

British and American Ships Says Harry L. Hopkins Have One Object in View

'OCEAN JOINS US'

London, July 28. — (CP)—The British people had the assurances of Harry L. Hopkins, President Roosevelt's Lend-Lease co-ordinator, today that United States and British ships in the North Atlantic "are patrolling on parallel lanes with only one object in view—to guard the world's lifeline".

Hopkins' statement was made in a broadcast address last night in which he also pledged all possible American Aid —"and immediately" —to Soviet Russia, in the war against Germany, and to China.

"President Roosevelt, speaking for the people of the United States, is rendering more than lip service", he declared.

"Even now as I speak sleek grey destroyers flying the American flag are plunging their bows into the waters of the North Atlantic.

"Once upon a time this mighty ocean separated us. Now it joins us".

At North Bay the general superintendent of the Algoma District of the C.P.R., B. J. Quilty, said investigation into the accident still is under way and will not be completed for a few days. He would not comment on the cause of the wreck nor the monetary loss.

JAPANESE TRADE WITH BR. MALAYA AT STANDSTILL

No Japanese Ships Have Been in Harbor at Singapore Since Saturday

FREEZING OF FUNDS

Singapore, July 28 —(AP) — Japanese commerce with British Malaya has been brought to a standstill by the freezing of Japanese funds but the Japanese Consul General, Ken Tsurumi, said the question of shipping was under consideration.

Japanese freighters have been carrying annually a million tons of ore and 20,000 tons of Manganese from Japanese owned and operated mines on the Malaya Peninsula. No Japanese ships have been in harbor here since Saturday when the freezing order was issued.

Tsurumi said Tokyo had not ordered removal of Singapore's 2,000 Japanese.

Relatives Anxious About Friends on Japanese Liner

San Francisco, July 28—(AP)—Anxious relatives of United States citizens abroad the Japanese liner Tatuta Maru sought in vain today for any hint of the whereabouts of the ship which turned about a few miles off the Golden Gate and steamed out to sea when President Roosevelt ordered freezing of Japanese assets in the United States.

The Tatuta, with 247 passengers including Americans, Europeans and Japanese, was due in last Thursday.

War Jitters Increase Noticeably in Philippines

Manila, July 28 (AP)—War jitters increased noticeably in the Philippines today as the Japanese rapidly consolidated their gains in French Indo-China, and the United States, preparing for any eventuality, unified troops in the Philippines under command of Lt.-Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Gen. MacArthur, former chief of staff of the United States army and newly appointed by the war department to the command of 75,000 United States and Philippine army troops in the islands, conferred with his staff at Fort Santiago and later with Commonwealth President Manuel Quezon.

Orders to Customs at Shanghai

Shanghai, July 28 (AP)—Orders have been issued to the Japanese-controlled customs office here to halt all future exports by United States and British firms, an unofficial, but usually trustworthy, Japanese source said today.

The throttling of American and British export trade will be accomplished, the source said, through the refusal by customs officials to issue export permits.

No formal regulations banning such exports will be issued, he said, and should either Washington or London protest, the Japanese will refer them to the Nanking puppet government on the grounds that Shanghai is in occupied territory under the jurisdiction of that Japanese-controlled body.

Strange Rumors

A series of rumors alarmed Shanghai financial circles this afternoon causing a sharp drop in the stock market and a sudden reversal of foreign exchange rates which sent the Chinese dollar upward in relation to the United States dollar.

The rumors, entirely without substantiation, included reports of a Japanese-American clash and a Japanese blockade of Hong Kong and prospective blockade of Shanghai.

Following apprehension over the possibility of direct retaliatory action by Japanese here, such as the expectation that the international settlement would be taken over, the rumors caused near panic among traders.

By The Canadian Press

Japan's "new order" armies were reported moving toward both Indo-China and Siberia today as the Japanese Privy Council, meeting in the presence of Emperor Hirohito, ratified the Tokyo-Vichy accord giving Japan new air and naval bases in the south.

A reliable source at Saigon said Japan would land at least 24,000 troops in Southern Indo-China at a point within easy range of Thailand (Siam).

Chinese Intelligence officers in Chungking reported that Japan has increased her forces in Manchoukuo and Korea to 17 divisions, and they were in position for a drive into Siberia if Japan should decide conditions were favorable on the Russo-German front.

In Shanghai, a flood of rumors swept the Stock Exchange, creating near panic among traders. These rumors, wholly unsubstantiated, included reports of a Japanese-American clash, a Japanese blockade of Hong Kong and prospective blockade of Shanghai. Traders were further alarmed over the possibility that Japan would take over the Shanghai International Settlement. Leading shares on the Shanghai Exchange dropped from two to 10 points, with buying scarce.

Gradual Swing To Offensive By Reds Forecast

New Verdun Faces Nazis Held to Standstill in Smolensk Sector

RED AIR-FLEET BUSY

By HENRY CASSIDY

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, July 28—(AP)—The Red Army appeared today to be taking the initiative on several sectors of the Russian-German front—a 2,000 mile fight zone along which Soviet spokesmen earlier declared the Nazi Blitzkrieg had broken down to siege tactics.

A communique reported "Fighting actions of our troops" throughout the night in the directions of Nevel and Smolensk, in the central region, and at Zhitomir, in the Ukraine.

This was a variation from the wording of previous communiques which mentioned only stubborn battles or fierce fighting, indicating that the Russians now are undertaking more than defensive operations.

The Red air fleet as well as ground troops were reported to be gradually swinging into the offensive.

German Threats at Germans

The communique cited several specific instances of Russian thrusts against the Germans, ranging from a local raid on the invaders' lines to a large-scale counter-attack.

One detachment was reported to have attacked the German-garrisoned city of "Z" and driven out the Nazis in street fighting with bayonets and grenades, inflicting 200 casualties.

Other units were reported to have raided German artillery batteries (commonly placed behind the infantry) and routed a German motorized column.

Germans Reported Burying Tanks

These significant references to Russian activity followed a report in last night's communique that Germans were burying tanks for use as stationary pillboxes because of a shortage of fuel.

All evidence on this side indicated that the German drive against the Russian lines was draining the German army's strength and that its progress was coming to a halt in the sixth week of the war.

Hamilton, July 28.— (CP) — The most spectacular fire Hamilton has seen for years raged today in the plant of the Hamilton Colortype Limited and despite efforts of the Hamilton fire department, who poured tens of thousands of gallons of water on it, spread to the Hamilton Heating and Plumbing Supplies Works next door.

Vast clouds of black smoke and flames which sometimes leaped 100 feet into the air poured from the blazing buildings, both of which were destroyed in little more than an hour.

No authoritative estimate of the damage has yet been given but it was believed that it might exceed $100,000.

One firefighter, Lieut. Joseph Marshall was overcome by smoke. He was taken to the hospital where his condition was said to be satisfactory.

Chinese Funds Frozen At Request of Chinese Government

London, July 28 (CP)—Britain announced today the freezing of all Chinese assets at the request of the Chinese government.

(This completes the parallel of American and Canadian economic action in the Far East crisis. The action against Chinese assets was explained in Washington and Ottawa as designed to keep the Japanese from realizing on those which are owned by residents of Japanese-occupied territory.)

Nazi Command Makes Usual Claim Of Satisfactory Progress on Front

REPORTS ENCIRCLEMENT

Berlin, July 28 (AP)—The German news and propaganda agency, D.N.B., claimed today that some units of the German army had penetrated to Volosovo, 45 miles southwest of Leningrad, although the high command retained its customary reticence on the position of Nazi forces, now in the 37th. day of their invasion of the Soviet Union.

D.N.B. hastened to add to its claim an utterance to the German public that operations "cannot be finished between dawn and dusk."

(This was presumably to offset an assertion at the beginning of the attack on Russia that the Germans would be in Moscow in six weeks.)

Says Russians Trapped

At Volosovo (which the Russians did not admit was captured), D.N.B. said the Germans found a Russian division commander's report in a captured Red Army staff car disclosing that the 41st. Russian Division had been trapped by the Germans for several days.

With the high command claiming only that operations were proceeding satisfactorily along the entire Baltic-to-Black Sea front, semi-official reports told of another important action in the vicinity of Mogilev, on the south side of the Smolensk sector before Moscow.

It is Up to People How Gas Control Will Work Out

Toronto, July 28 —(CP)— G. R. Cottrelle, the Federal Oil Controller, said he is satisfied with the slight reduction in week-end traffic but warned that motorists must realize "the gasoline isn't here and we can't get it."

Hoverer, he added, "some persons seem to think the restrictions don't apply to them, that they can go running around burning up fuel as they did mefore . . . The regulations can't prevent people using gasoline.

"It is up to the people how this thing works out. If what we are doing doesn't reduce the consumption of gasoline, something else will have to be done."

Cottrelle said that charges by an American tourist that he was charged $10 for five gallons of gasoline at North Bay after the closing time will be investigated.

Nazi Propaganda Radio "Explains" Slow Progress

New York, July 28 (CP). — The German propaganda radio was heard today explaining the slow progress of the German army in Russia. It said territorial gains "actually would be a disadvantage" at the present stage of the fighting and that an advance on Moscow would "serve no useful purpose" as long as the Red army's fighting power remains.

Knights Hold Annual Picnic at 12 O'Clock Point

The second annual picnic of the Belleville Knights of Columbus was held on Sunday afternoon at Twelve O'Clock Point with over 300 members with their wives and families and members from outside points present. Lunch was served in the old-fashioned barbeque style at five o'clock while soft drinks, ice cream and pie added to the bountiful "eats".

In the cool of the evening a sports program for both young and old included races for boys and girls and different types of ladies' married and single men, the seerk races. In a tug-of-war between diets proved victorious. The single men reversed the decision in a keenly contested softball game however, although it was claimed by the losers that Umpire Maurice Callaghan favored the winners.

The late Mr. Morgan, who was in his 76th year, was born in London, England, being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Morgan. For the past forty-eight years he resided in Huntingdon Township, being engaged in farming. In religion he was an active member of St. Paul's Anglican Church at Roslin and was well esteemed in the community. Fraternally he was an honorary member of the Loyal Orange Lodge No. 251, Halloway. Kenneth A. Johnson; Picton, Is Sentenced on 52 Charges

Magistrate Lloyd Sentences Man on 22 Charges of Forgery and 30 of Issuing Worthless Cheques

Kenneth A. Johnson, Picton, was sentenced to five years in the Portsmouth Penitentiary by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in city police court today. Johnson had pleaded guilty to 49 charges of forgery and fraud in Friday's local police court, at which time he was remanded until today for sentence.

Today Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., read three more charges of issuing worthless cheques to Johnson and in each case the accused man pleaded guilty, bringing the total number of convictions up to 52. The latter trio of charges were preferred by Chief C. J. Hayes of Tweed.

Magistrate Lloyd sentenced Johnson to five years on 22 counts of forgery, while on the 30 charges of issuing worthless cheques, to wit fraud, Johnson was given six months on each count, all sentences to run concurrently. "As I figure this out that is a total of 125 years, if the terms had have been consecutively," remarked Mr. Donnan.

"There is absolutely nothing in this man's favor. He deliberately planned to defraud the public despite the fact he had already served three years in the penitentiary. No doubt he saved the Province thousands of dollars by facing all of these charges in one court here, and I might say this is the greatest number of charges I ever experienced facing one man at one time," added His Worship.

Crown Attorney Donnan introduced Johnson's list of previous convictions, which totalled nine. "On the 22 forgery charges Johnson could be given life terms 22 times," remarked Mr. Donnan, as he asked for severe penalty to be imposed against the accused.

Fire in Woodpile Damages Sheds, Kitchen, Roof

Damage estimated at approximately $200 was caused to a duplex residence at 301 Pinnacle Street shortly after the noon hour on Saturday when fire breaking out in a woodpile in a shed at the rear of the house swept through, two sheds, damaged a kitchen and fired the roof on the main part of the house before being brought under control by the local fire brigade.

The fire started in a shed attached to the rear of the north half of the dwelling tenanted by Mr. Chas. E. Arnold and family but before being noticed had spread to the adjoining rear shed of the duplex tenanted by Mr. H. Williams. The fire, however, was concentrated in the Arnold part of the residence with firemen bringing into play over 800 feet of master hose in order to bring the blaze under control.

In addition to fire damage in the Arnold residence, considerable water damage was effected to decorations and furnishings of both tenants. Origin of the fire was undetermined.

Airmen Attend Divine Service At Christ Church

Headed by the Royal Canadian Air Force band, one hundred members of the personnel at the Trenton base of the air service paraded to divine service at Christ Church last night. Showing evidence of months of intense training the flights paraded through city streets a few minutes before seven o'clock en route to the service. The splendid appearance, despite the heat of the evening, drew many laudatory comments from the crowds of spectators that lined the pavements.

The flights marched from the Armouries to Pinnacle to Victoria Avenue, thence to Front, along Bridge and to the church. They followed the same route after the service, being dismissed at the Armouries.

Squadron Leader Denton Massey was in charge of the parade. The Rev. G. G. Wright, rector of Christ Church, officiated at the service.

Students on Farms Return to School Later Than Others

Belleville school students helping on farms this summer will not be required to return to school until October 1st, according to a memorandum issued by the Department of Education. The schools, however, will be opened, as usual, on Sept. 2nd.

School principals are authorized to mark the students working on farms on the school registers "as if present during September on the presentation of certificates from the employers which show they have been engaged in farm work during the period of their absence from school."

The memorandum says "It is the wish of the acting minister that these pupils be encouraged to continue their help on the farms during the month of September. These pupils are doing valuable war work and are worthy of special attention when they return to school."

ANGLICAN CHURCH AT MONEYMORE STRUCK BY BOLT

Building, However, Does Not Take Fire — Barns Struck in Fierce Electric Storm

TREES FELLED

Accompanied by a gale-like wind and deluging downpours of rain, one of the severest electrical storms experienced in years in this district struck savagely at the area surrounding Roslin and Thomasburg yesterday.

Driving diagonally across the county, the storm continued unabated over the Mohawk Reserve where it brought down trees and scattered grain sheaves in fields like chaff.

In the Roslin area the Moneymore Anglican Church was struck by lightning, while the barn of Thomas Emerson, near Thomasburg was also hit by a bolt. Both structures were damaged but no fire resulted.

The church steeple and chimney were torn away while a shed near the structure was demolished. Nearby a large tree crashed down across the road. A barn belonging to Stanley Weir, situated near the church was blown down. In Roslin, trees brought down by the force of the gale fell across hydro wires disrupting service for hours.

Selby village near Napanee, in the path of the storm, was cut off from service until this morning when emergency power was established.

County and provincial highway workmen in that district are clearing the mass of uprooted trees and limbs that littered the west road leading from the village and which completely cut off traffic for two hundred yards.

Striking suddenly from the northwest, the miniature tornadoes levelled fences and brought down trees in some parts of the districts. Sideroads were blocked in some places while cattle strayed at their leisure over wide areas where fences had been brought down.

Rain fell in torrents. At times it was so dense that it resembled a driving fog. Motorists caught in the storm went to seek shelter in farm buildings or by the roadside. Traffic was entirely at a standstill while the storm was at its height.

In the city heavy windsqualls preceded a light shower. On the bay, however, the squalls struck heavily driving boats to the lee of protecting landpoints or to the harbors. Two boats were reported to be driven across the bay. Jack Allin's boat is said to have been stripped of some of its sails and halyards while William Pinkle and Elwood Wickerson reached the lee of the shoreline with their boats before the storm reached its peak.

"I christen you Andrew Holt and may you prove as stout-hearted in action as the magnificent people who made you—good luck," Maj. Holt said.

He is a son of Sir Herbert Holt, Montreal financier.

MARKED DECREASE IN SUNDAY TRAVEL SEEN ON HIGHWAYS

Motorcycle Patrol Members Notice Lowering of Speed by Motorists

MOTORISTS STRANDED

On the first week end under the new Canadian gasoline restriction laws a marked decrease in the conventional Sunday pleasure touring trips of Ontario motorists was noted by members of the Ontario Motorcycle Patrol.

"The decrease in the number of motorists touring the highways over the week end was quite noticeable. Not only were there not as many motor cars on the highways, but we also observed that those out driving were diminishing their driving speed to a marked degree over that of say a month ago", Motorcycle Patrolman J. H. Hatch told The Ontario Intelligencer today.

Several touring motorists from outside the Belleville area were stranded in the city until seven o'clock Monday morning when their motor cars ran out of gasoline when some considerable distance from home. Making the best of an unfortunate situation these stranded motorists remained over Sunday night in Belleville. "Gosh, I thought I had enough gasoline to get at least to Kingston", complained one Toronto pair, who ran out of gas en route easterly on Sunday.

3,000 ATTEND CONCERT PLAYED BY R.C.A.F. BAND

Forty-Piece Organization Renders Fine Program at Fair Grounds

Positive proof that Belleville and district residents are definitely "band minded" was demonstrated at the Belleville Fair Grounds on Sunday evening when upwards of three thousand music lovers congregated to hear the Trenton R.C.A.F. Band, guest artists at the regular fortnightly band concert staged under the auspices of the Belleville Municipal Band.

Hundreds of motor cars forming a deep semi circle about the band stand and along Yeomans Street attested to the large crowd attending the concert while band lovers congregated on the well-kept grounds of the agricultural park as the various program numbers were presented by the 40-piece band, under the baton of Sergeant E. Hancock. From the opening number, "O Canada", until the final strains of the National Anthem floated away on the evening air, the performance gave rise to many complimentaary remarks from attending music lovers.

The concert by the Trenton Air Station Band was made possible by the kind permission of Group Captain T. A. Lawrenec and of Squadron Leader Webber, Administration Officer of the Station. Bandmaster Fred Jobson of the Belleville Municipal Band welcomed the visiting bandsmen and expressed gratitude for the fine program presented. Mr. Jobson also thanked the bowling club for the use of seats which added greatly to the comfort of listeners.

WOMEN TO ENLIST ON SAME TERMS AS MEN RECRUITS

Flight Officer Kathleen C. Walker First Woman Appointed to W.A.A.F.

By GLADYS ARNOLD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 28—(CP)—Flight Officer Kathleen C. Walker of Ottawa, first woman appointed to the Canadian Women's Auxiliary Air Force, said today that recruits in the new branch of the service will enlist on the same terms as men who join the Royal Canadian Air Force.

"Recruits on enlistment must be willing to be sent on Active Service anywhere in the world," she told The Canadian Press in an interview.

"Women in the C.W.A.A.F. will be subject to the same rules and regulations which govern airmen. They will be a real section of the military forces of the Dominion."

Although patterned along the lines of the W.A.A.F. in the United Kingdom, the Canadian Service will be especially adapted to fit conditions in Canada and fill the specific needs of the R.C.A.F., Flight Officer Walker said.

Entrance Education Requirement

Recruits must have a minimum of Grade Eight or "Entrance" education. Officers will be drawn from the ranks as good officer material is discovered, and all recruits will have an opportunity to rise through the ranks.

Recruiting is likely to begin within two months but in the meantime there are hundreds of details to be settled, she said.

However, decision on the uniform has been reached. It will be very similar to the British women's uniform, although the cap will be "a little fuller with a smooth crown" and the skirt will have a kick pleat in front. It will be of air force blue.

Plans for training the women at a school near Toronto have progressed to a point where some official announcement may be expected soon, she added.

Improvement of Social Life In Camps

Aside from the valuable work women can do, Flight Officer Walker suggested, their presence in Air Force camps would improve the social life of the camp as far as men of the R.C.A.F. were concerned. As in Britain, airwomen would be allowed to entertain at certain times, hold social evenings at regular intervals and make life in the camp "generally more agreeable."

Flight Officer Walker was Commandant of the Ottawa Red Cross Transport Corps before her present appointment.

She was born in England near Liverpool but came to Montreal with her parents as a small child and was educated at Sacred Heart Convent there.

POLICE COURT

Percy H. Smith, Ottawa, was arraigned in city police court, held today before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook, charged with unlawfully obtaining $25.00 from a local bank by means of a worthless cheque.

"I would ask to have this man remanded in custody until Aug. 5th., during which time I propose to have him examined by the government psychiatrist," explained Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., who told the court Smith had been arrested in Belleville after cashing what the authorities considered a worthless cheque. Upon his initial apprehension Smith was held on a nominal charge of vagrancy until court opened today. R. A. Pringle, local barrister, represented Smith.

Mrs. Ann St. John, Toronto, appeared on a charge of assaulting her mother-in-law, the charge being preferred by one Linsley St. John, who asked the court to have the charge withdrawn.

"That suits me, but some person has to pay the costs in this case," spoke up Mr. Donnan. Mr. St. John stated he would pay the costs at a later date. "Enlarge the matter until the costs are paid," replied Mr. Donnan, the costs being set at $16.25.

Three inebriates appeared and after pleading guilty to a charge of intoxication, paid ten and costs.

POLICE BLOTTER

Mischievous boys at play are reported to have trampled a garden at a Station Street address. The woman who personally planted the private garden, told police that six boys had made it a practice to run across her garden plot, causing considerable property damage to the young plants. The names of the lads were given police and attention promised.

Traffic Officer Doug Ellis answered a call to the lower end of Pinnacle Street early Saturday night where a man was found lying in an alleyway. Apparently the man, who later was identified as Denis Mondeville, St. Paul Street, had fallen and struck his head on a large stone. He was bleeding profusely about the forehead when to the hospital in Martin's ambulance.

Three inebriates ran foul of the long arm of the law Saturday night and were placed in the local bastille until they were in fit condition to return home. A charge was later preferred in each case and a minimum fine imposed.

THE WAR TODAY

(By DON GILBERT)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Predictions that Britain would supplement her aerial offensive on the continent by landing raiding parties along the German-occupied coast have not, in the sixth week of Russo-German hostilities, been fulfilled. Whether anything is planning in that direction for the coming weeks naturally is not known.

Sir Gerald Campbell, who returned from Britain over the week-end to resume his duties as information chief in the United States, expressed the opinion that it would be another year "before we can really indulge in any great adventures over there." For the present, he said, Britain continues to concentrate on home defence.

Reinforcements to Middle East

It became known definitely on Saturday, however, that Britain is sending heavy reinforcements to her army in the Middle East while Germany is occupied on the Russian front. Moreover, she is sending them not around the Cape of Good Hope, but through the Mediterranean.

Since Greece and Crete fell into German hands, the eastern Mediterranean has been an unhealthy zone for convoys, and the fact it is now being used again indicates the Russian war has drawn off a sizeable proportion of German air strength in southern Europe. The Italians together with what remains of the German air force received rough handling at the hands of the fleet air arm and the fleet's guns. The destroyer Fearless was sunk but only one merchantman in the large convoy was damaged.

Shipload of Supplies a Day

For several months now supplies for use of the Middle East forces have been arriving in the Red Sea direct from the United States at the rate of one shipload a day. Other equipment from Britain and America has been ferried across Free French and British territory in Central Africa, while Australia and India have played their part in supplying the Middle East from the other direction.

With the arrival of fresh troops, it is a fair assumption that the Middle East command, under its new leader, General Sir Claude Auchinleck, will soon be in a position to tackle the German armored divisions which since the Spring have stood on the Egyptian-Libyan frontier as a menace to the Nile Valley and the Suez Canal.

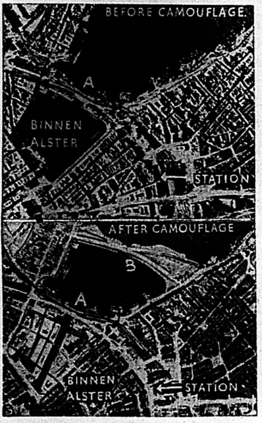
British Show All Initiative

Already the British and Imperial forces are showing all the initiative both from the frontal positions in the western desert and from Tobruk, whose indomitable Anglo-Australian garrison daily sallies out to harass the enemy's rear.

Yesterday's communique issued in Cairo spoke of the "increasing extent to which the enemy's nerves are being frayed by the relentless and gallant activities of our patrols."

It may be that when a new Libyan offensive starts the British and Imperial forces will find the Germans greatly reduced in number. Persistent reports, originating in Russia and Turkey, claim these armored divisions have been called back to Europe for service in the Russian campaign. One report said the bulk of the force had already arrived in Bulgaria en route to the front.

R.A.F. PIERCE NAZI CAMOUFLAGE



Germany went to great pains to camouflage oft-bombed Hamburg, but the R.A.F. took these before-and-after photos and unmasked the deception. To conceal Binnen Alster the basin was covered with huge rafts to represent a built-up area, and to divert attention from Lombardsbruecke (A) a wooden replica (B) was erected 600 yards north of the original.

Hanson Visits In Penticton, B.C.

Penticton, B.C., July 28 (CP) — Hon. R. B. Hanson, Conservative leader in the House of Commons, arrived here yesterday on his Dominion tour which has taken him as far west as Victoria and as far north as Alaska and the Yukon Territory.

After arriving here Mr. Hanson drove to Kelowna, a distance of 40 miles, for tea and luncheon at the home of Hon. Grote Stirling, Conservative member of parliament for Yale, B.C. He returned here last night to meet Conservative party leaders and leaves today for Trail, B.C.

$2,000 IN JEWELRY STOLEN

Windsor, Ont., July 28 (CP)—Jewelry, valued at $2,000, was stolen from a Windsor jewelry store on Saturday night by two unidentified men. The men, one colored, entered the store during the evening rush hour and while one conversed with a clerk, the other walked out with three trays of jewelry.

NO DECISION REACHED

RUSSIAN OFFICERS COMING TO U.S.

Will Aid Two Generals Who Are Members of Military Mission on War Supplies

Washington, July 28—(AP)—Additional Russian army officers are expected here soon to aid two Soviet generals, members of a special military mission which will supervise procurement of war supplies for the Red Army.

While Lt. Gen. Filip Golikov and Engineer Repin resumed their conferences with government officials, word came from London that Harry Hopkins, Lend-Lease co-ordinator, had pledged all possible United States Aid —"and immediately"—to Russia and China.

Hopkins' pledge, made in a broadcast address last night, followed President Roosevelt's announcement that the United States would make every effort to aid Russia compatible with its own defense requirements and commitments made to Britain and other nations.

'Parallel Lanes' of Ships

Another phrase of Hopkins' speech, that British and United States warships in the North Atlantic "are patrolling on parallel lanes" attracted especial attention here in connection with a speech by Admiral William H. Standley, retired former Chief of Naval Operations.

In an address prepared for broadcast under auspices of the committee to defend America by aiding the Allies, Standley called yesterday for the use of United States ships, guns and planes, if necessary to protect the delivery of supplies to Britain.

"This will cost us ships or planes or lives as we must certainly pay if we are called upon alone" to combat Nazi commercial infiltration and possible military invasion.

Half of Fatalities In Quebec at Weekend Due to Drowning

(By The Canadian Press)

Quebec's lakes and rivers were responsible for half of the dozen violent deaths reported in the province during the week-end. The six drownings were scattered from Chicoutimi to Hull but none occurred in the Montreal district.

Of the other fatalities, three were the result of automobile accidents while a fall, a suicide and a fire claimed the remaining victims.

The only week-end mishap taking more than one life occurred at Beauharnois where two workmen were drowned yesterday in the Beauharnois canal while divers searched its floor for possible victims of a week-old highway bridge collapse.

Italian Claim

Rome July 28 (AP)—The Italian High Command claimed today its planes bombed the British naval base at Valetta, Malta, last night for the third consecutive night.

The daily war bulletin declared British planes raided the Axis Libyan supply port of Bengasi and said British attacks out of the Tobruk encirclement were repulsed.

Canberra, July 28 —(CP)—Reuters)—The United Australia Party meeting here today gave Prime Minister R. G. Menzies, its leader, a vote of confidence by an "ovedwhelming majority." However, the five-hour party meeting was described as "stormy."

Following criticism of Prime Minister Menzies by some members of the United Australia Party, larger of the two government parties in the Federal Parliament, including the suggestion that there be a change in government leadership, Mr. Menzies convened a meeting of the party.

Twenty-eight members out of a total of 40 attended the meeting.

New Westminster, B.C., July 28 (CP)—Temp. Sgt. E. C. Williams of Regina, a Royal Canadian Air Force flying instructor, and his pupil, Lac. H. P. Officials at Elementary Flying Training School No. 18 at Boundary Bay, B.C., 50 miles south of here, said neither flier was critically injured. Officials at the school said the plane was on a routine training flight when it apparently stalled and dived into a wooded bog about ten miles east of the school.

PLANE MAKES FORCED LANDING

MINERS AWAIT McLARTY'S REPLY

Delegates Still Committed to Policy of Curtailment of Production in Cape Breton Mines

By JOHN LeBLANC

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Glace Bay, N.S., July 28 (CP).—Still committed to a policy of production curtailment in ten Cape Breton coal mines, delegates to a convention of United Mine Workers of America members awaited today reply from Labor Minister McLarty to their latest request for a tri-party conference on the district's labor troubles.

After failing to obtain the minister's collaboration in a conference under present conditions, the convention telegraphed him yesterday that the slowdown would continue "unless you change your attitude". Mr. McLarty had told the group its grievances could be considered only when and if the men went back to full production.

His communication, read to a resumed session of the 50-odd delegates yesterday, was an answer to a request for a conference of Labor Department, company and convention representatives on the delegates' claims for higher pay scales.

Besides looking for greater pay, the delegates from eleven N.M.W. locals in the North and South Cape Breton coal fields also have been seeking resignation of their union's district executive, claiming it has not pressed hard enough for improved wages. The executive itself labels the convention "outlaw".

With a district split in the union threatening over the ssue, the convention yesterday took the first direct steps toward setting up a new organization in the event, delegates said, they should be "forced" from the U.M.W. They ordered the convention's policy committee to report at the next meeting on the proposed set-up of such an organization. No date was set for the meeting.

REPORTED KILLED IN EAST

Brantford, Ont., July 28 (CP). — Gunner J. R. Harrington Bremner, 28, Brantford, has been killed in action in the Middle East, according to word received here yesterday by his foster-parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Bremner.

Bremner went overseas in 1938. He enlisted in the Coldstream Guards and was later transferred to the Royal Artillery. He was wounded in the Norway campaign and saw service in France before being moved to the Middle East.

WHERE FOUR WERE KILLED IN BRITISH COLUMBIA TRAIN WRECK

Four trainmen died and 22 persons were injured in this railway crash near New Westminster, B.C., when two passenger trains crashed head-on in the early hours of the morning. This picture shows how the giant locomotives were completely wrecked by the collision, with the boiler of one engine tossed up on a pile of debris. Casualties would probably have been heavier had the passenger coaches left the tracks. All remained upright and on the rails.

BLACKED-OUT SERVICE STATIONS

Virtual blackouts about service stations in Belleville and in every other settled part of Canada from seven in the evening until seven in the morning with the long elimination of purchasing from Saturday night to Monday morning, are constant reminders to those who drive that Canada must conserve oil.

The places which were always the bright lights now appear as dark spots on landscapes of cities, towns, villages and hamlets. Sight of them on Saturday evening where all around were light and movement of business brought one up with rather a shock as it dawned on the passer-by that there is no business at these places at nights. In time the people will accustom themselves to it but it is well that there is this darkness about these stations for he who drives or passes by on foot is constantly reminded by these many blackouts that conservation of gasoline and oil is in the nation's cause.

He would be dull of understanding who did not feel the implication of this. Every individual must conserve gasoline so that the saving may be fifty per cent. But not only must there be a conservation of oil and gasoline but also economy in the war cause in many other respects, as in buying of side bacon and other products, because of the great need of Britain for bacon, cheese and other foods for which she has become more and more dependent on Canada since Europe became disorganized through Hitler.

There must too be an economy which means saving of those things which we are so accustomed to throw away. There is wealth, especially in wartime, in rags, paper and scrap metals, the value of which can make a real contribution to the war effort. The old adage still holds true with special emphasis today, "Waste not, want not," and it is so much more true in times of stress.

These blacked-out service stations are a sign which the patriotic public can understand. They might symbolize what but for the magnificent fortitude of the British navy, air force and army might be known in Canada in reality—the blackout. The blacked-out filling stations are symbols to all of restraint and saving, the limitation of personal pleasures for the higher pleasure of standing resolute guard over one's self for the good of country.

IN THE PARK

One has only to look at any one of the parks of the city in the summer months to see how the park has a real attraction for the city dweller. Many more persons now pass through them in a day or stop and rest for a while than most people have any notion of.

When benches and also tables are provided the tourist often drops in and has his meal. For the citizen there is the attraction of the meal al fresco, or the meal in the open air, which in summer is particularly enticing.

Those who look after the city parks have a good notion of what the people want and have provided for their pleasure.

The park visitor is one who has learned the art of resting and recuperation. The park visitor can well be a knitter of socks or of other supplies for the war services. The time spent in the park is not lost time, for it means stored up health and a means of refreshment. In the case of persons employed in factories, the park, if nearby, has a very real value as it provides opportunity for rest before returning to labor.

Belleville is quite well provided with parks. And parks will perhaps be more patronized by those who are making their war contribution by saving of gasoline. Instead of driving on the roads they can walk into the parks and refresh their minds on scenes with which, strangely enough, they are not too familiar and can feast their minds while meditating on nature.

Some people are inveterate park visitors. Others probably rarely enter one, perhaps because they do not know how to relax, for the park if it does anything inculcates relaxation.

To be free from evil thoughts is God's best gift.—Aeschylus.

CALLING ALL CARS

This is the voice of Canada, all cars she's calling NOW,
Planes and tanks need gasoline, she must have more somehow;
So cut down on your driving and save where e're you can,
She asks co-operation from every decent man.
Drive slower on the highways, there's seldom need for haste;
Fast driving is expensive and causes needless waste.
Overhaul your engine, attend to grease and oil,
Clean your valves and spark plugs, don't let the water boil.
When you're stopped by traffic lights, avoid jackrabbit starts,
Your tires need attention, keep the pressure right;
Never race your motor, let it slowly warm;
Be watchful of your timing and keep it up to form.
On drives to work be neighborly, share with friends your car;
For shopping or the movies, walk if it's not far.
Each saving is important when many thousands drive,
By care you'll help the Empire keep liberty alive.

—S. Blumenthal.

AN EASY DECISION

The recent appeal of Oil Controller Cottrelle, and the restrictions on Sunday and night sales of gasoline has brought motor car drivers of Canada face to face with the fact that the airmen of the Empire need this vital fluid which Canadians have been using for pleasure purposes.

Since the Hun hell descended on Britain it has been the fervent wish of every loyal Canadian that the young flyers from the Dominion, with their brother fighters in the R.A.F., could pay back ten-fold the unspeakable horrors which Nazi airmen have unloosed. The hour has come when we have the opportunity to shake the morale of Hitler's aerial fiends. Now finally the wings of hundreds of Empire planes are casting their shadows over Germany and Italy.

Fuel, the Stark Need

But as each new flight of aeroplanes streak in to battle, and as the Empire increases its raiding groups from a handful of attackers to waves of machines which are counted by the hundreds, fuel for these fighting ships stands out as the stark need of the hour.

From London comes the urgent cry, "Give us all the gasoline you can spare."

The Dominion cannot turn over all her gasoline. That product is vital in our huge production of war material. We need large quantities for the hundreds of air training ships across the country, for the navy and the convoys which touch our shores, for the transportation of war goods. But there is one way in which we can supply more and more gasoline for the fighters—by refusing to use up gasoline unnecessarily in private motor cars.

Millions upon millions of gallons of gasoline are spent in private cars every year for purposes which may be considered unnecessary in the light of the urgent need across the Atlantic.

If our fighting forces are to get any help from Canada at all, insofar as gasoline is concerned, fuel experts declare, then owners of private motor cars must reduce their consumption of gasoline by at least 50 per cent.

Armed with this knowledge who of us is going to refuse to co-operate?

The decision is an easy one.

In this campaign to conserve gasoline and oil for the sake of the bombers overseas, an opportunity is presented to the humblest of our citizens to become a leader. If a man leaves his motor car in his garage for four days a week and proudly announces the fact to his friends in the community, he will be rendering a service to his country of no mean value.

If motor car drivers of this country cut down the consumption of motor fuel by 50 per cent, of their own free will, the achievement will stand out as a triumph for our way of living.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

The Spirit of England

London, July 28.—There was an uneasy feeling of suppressed but persistent apprehension about visiting England during this war. Perhaps that was why I postponed it so long—because of that inhibited, almost unconscious fear of being disappointed. All American correspondents told heroic stories and I believed them, yet always there was the realization that I wanted to believe them, that I was hearing what I wanted to hear. So many things have not been as we wanted them to be, nor as we believed them to be.

There was, for instance, France. We had been told previous to a year ago last spring of the immortal vigor of France, of the unconquerable army, of the imperturbable morale. But the other truth was there for any candid eye to see before the German armies blasted their way through Holland and Belgium, cutting through France as if it were overripe cheese.

Those armies had not yet moved on May 1, 1940, when I revisited France after a three-year absence. Officials were brightly confident. One noted their words for the meticulous reports. They spoke assuredly; surely they could not be wrong.

But something was wrong. One felt it rather than realized it. Something was wrong with the people. Their faces wore a sullen, furtive expression. Soldiers going off to the front departed in a silence that was not reticent but ominous.

No one there seemed to notice it. Perhaps other observers had become accustomed to it and found it normal. No one seemed to notice that waiters in restaurants and sales-people in shops were irritable. Courtesy had departed from them. They were overwrought and their nerves were snapping.

As though it had some profound significance I observed that the grass in the gardens had not been cut. They have given it up already, I thought, before a bomb has fallen, and put resolutely out of my mind what I could not put off my nerves. That was on May 1, 1940, and before I had departed on May 23 it was all over really.

Perhaps I thought, I would find something like that in England. People had written, "England has changed." Yes, but how? There were things one would like to see changed in England. But something else was in England, something flowing, imperturbable, deep like England's unturbulent rivers, something continuous, unchanging, strong.

Had the bombs, the insufferable clamor and the insensate tumult of the skies exploded that deep, quiet stream, throwing upon its surface all the sediment and hidden scum? Perhaps that had happened. Better not go, I thought—better trust and believe and have faith, but do not see.

I saw first the port at which my plane put down and then the faces of those who came to meet me. Homely faces. Merry faces. The people must have thought me a little overwrought from the flight when I began to laugh—a laugh of sheer relief.

The port was terribly scarred. Street after street of obscene ruins of houses caught off guard and all their intimacies revealed in the wreckage. Shops, factories and great stores which represented someone's lifework, someone's pride, were now dumps into which no one could burrow for salvage.

There were bits of pathos. A sign told me in prim, clean letters that a dolls' hospital had moved to another street. The firm intention to continue to patch up dollies was absurd but in that absurdity was the will to live.

I watched faces, looking hungrily for confirmation, looking bravely for repudiation. People walked briskly past. Girls with stout legs, men bent on their business. They ignored the ruins. They did not avert their eyes from them; they overlooked them.

"Rather grim" was the only comment of my companions. And then our car swept off into rural England, into the eternal, beloved landscape of cumulus clouds in the ever-changing English sky blowing cattle, unruly haycocks that combed and brushed and lovingly tended the land—a shy country, gentle and retreating.

Boys and girls peddled bicycles on the road and soldiers passed, walking and on bikes. They did not look quite like soldiers. They were too casual, too at ease. Yet I had the feeling that they were watching, that everyone was watching in an unostentatious way as though unwilling to pay too great a tribute to the enemy who was dangerous, but still contemptible.

"I have 750 sulphur bombs sunk in my lily pond," I heard someone day. "They don't disturb the lilies, just for the moment they invade."

"Is this war time?" I thought in the pub, with its dark, beamed ceiling its faded cretonnes, its fillets of fish and its beer. It was dark when we came to London. The driver proceeded slowly, but surely as one walks through rooms of one's own house when the lights have gone out.

The sky was wanly gray. There was no moon. Only as my eyes became accustomed could I see that I was moving among ruins by the ghostly outlines of gaping walls, by the vague contours of a broken arch, by the sihtless eyes of a building that was all front and no rear, and the sky graying through it.

But the porter at the desk took my name and gave me messages as he did in other days before all this began. A little more warmth and friendliness to those who came from beyond the fortress, from the other world, that other world of people who did not know. And then the next day and the next.

Why was it that I should feel so comforted, so secure, so safe in this heart, that has become the heart of the world? Perhaps the enemy will come over again and drop destruction and twist form into chaos. Still I should feel safe. I should feel safe because I have found what Walt Whitman described as "a city invincible to the attacks of the whole of the rest of the earth ......The new city of friends."

I have not seen a sullen face nor heard an angry word since my arrival in England. Out of what depths I wonder do these people draw upon inexhaustible reserves of nerves? There is no stridency, no clamor in the people. Nobody brags, but everybody is proud in a secret way. That is it.

These people have a secret—a secret understanding, I think, each with the other. An unspoken love affair with England. As a man has no fear when he fights to protect his love so these people, loving, have utterly lost fear

One has a curious feeling of this began. A little more warmth kind. Still one is an outsider. There is something these people have in common that I cannot share. It is to have looked reality full in the face and to have ceased to be afraid.

That, I think, is what it means to be free.

Do not try to break these people, Germans. You will do more than break your weapons. You will break your hearts.

PLIMSOLL'S MARK

President Roosevelt recently approved a law relaxing the loadline requirements on oil tankers and other coastwise ships during the national emergency.

A load line, in nautical parlance, is a line on the outside of a ship indicating the depth to which she sinks in the water when properly and safely loaded.

The purpose of the new American load-line act is to enable tankers to carry larger cargoes of oil than they are permitted to carry under the standard regulations.

This action is based on the theory that the peace-time load-line restrictions are more severe than are required for safety and that these restrictions may be relaxed somewhat in a time of fuel shortage without endangering the ships or their crews.

Plimsoll's mark consists of a disk and letters painted in white on the outside of a British ship's hull to indicate the limit to which the vessel may be loaded at various seasons in salt and in fresh water.

Some other nations also use Plimsoll's mark to show the load line, and the ships of nearly all countries are required by law to bear a line of some kind on the outside of the vessel to show the depth to which it should sink when loaded properly.

Plimsoll's mark was named for Samuel Plimsoll (1824-1898), a British statesman noted for his load-line reforms.

He was known as "the sailor's friend" because of his untiring efforts to get the British Parliament to enact legislation for the protection of seamen.

The reforms of Plimsoll were directed particularly against what he called "coffin ships."

In those days, before there was any effective load-line legislation, many unscrupulous ship owners, protected by heavy marine insurance, were willing to risk cargoes and the lives of the crews by sending them to sea in overloaded and unseaworthy vessels.

The distance on the side of a vessel between the water line and the deck is known as the "free board."

Under the new act Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones may permit vessels in the coastwise trade to adopt "lesser free board within the limits of safety" than the old load-line regulations allow.

AUTO ACCIDENTS CLAIM 6 LIVES

Soldier Unreported Since Starting 3-Mile Swim—Piano Falls and Kills Man

(By The Canadian Press)

Traffic accidents held the lead as Ontario counted its fatal accident victims for the week-end with automobiles claiming six of the 11 lives lost. Two drownings were reported, one man died in an airplane crash, another was killed by a train and another by a falling piano.

A soldier, Private William Font, Royal Canadian Army Transport, is believed drowned since he is unreported since setting out alone Saturday night on a three-mile swim to Wolfe Island in the Kingston district.

Three tourists visiting from Detroit are listed in the total. At Strathroy, 17 year old Maryette Beart of Detroit, was killed and three others injured in an automobile accident Sunday. On Saturday night Harry Bedor, 65, also of Detroit, was killed when his automobile left the highway seven miles east of Chatham. Lyle Brewer, of Detroit, was caught in the undertow off Pelee Point in Lake Erie Sunday and dragged to his death. His companion was rescued in an unconscious condition.

Two Children Killed

Two children were killed in automobile accidents at Hamilton. They were Mary Geroux, seven, and William Gerula, 10. They were killed in separate accidents but in both cases it was claimed that they darted into the paths of on-coming vehicles giving the drivers no opportunity to avoid them.

At Listowel the body of Gladstone McKay, 20, was discovered in the bottom of Listowel swimming pool. The youth was not missed by his companions until swimmers reported touching the body in nine feet of water.

Soldier Killed by Train

Gunner Herbert J. Avey, 102nd. Battery, was killed by a train early Sunday morning while walking in the Canadian National Railways yards at Brantford.

Thousands lining the East End Beaches in Toronto Sunday afternoon, saw Kaara Moe, 24, a student pilot in the Royal Norwegian Air Force, flutter to his death in Lake Ontario. The plane fell into the lake following contact with another plane while engaged in formation flying.

At Prescott, Mrs. Florence McIntosh of nearby Cardinal, was fatally injured Saturday when she apparently suffered a heart seizure and her car went into a ditch.

Freak Fatal Accident

The week-end's freak accident claimed the life of Albert Manchester, 27 year old piano mover at Leamington. While assisting to move a piano which had been placed on a truck, the piano came loose, knocked him from his position on the rear end of the truck, and landed on his head, killing him instantly.

Marie Evans, 12, of Kingston, died in hospital after being struck on the head by an overhanging load of lumber which swung over the sidewalk while the truck was making a turn.

Mobile Canteens Refresh Firemen And Defence Workers

By HAROLD FAIR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 28 — (CP) — Many a British fireman or civil defence worker, exhausted after hours of battling among falling bombs, gave thanks during this island's months of ordeal by air bombardment for mobile canteens from Canada.

Canadians donated 26 of these neat, compact kitchens on wheels since last September and they were sent to some of the most severely-damaged areas where food and hot drinks were welcomed as Heaven sent.

Heavy Contributors to Fund

Already heavy contributors to the Lord Mayor's Fund for Air Raid Distress, Canadians gave this further evidence of sympathy and admiration for their British brothers by sending money to purchase the made-in-Britain canteens.

Leader in the movement was the Guelph Daily Mercury's fund which already has been responsible for placing 12 canteens in such widely-separated places as the London east-end boroughs of east and west Ham, Glasgow, Plymouth, Hull, Sheffield, the Mersey Timber port of bootle and blasted Coventry.

The Atlantic war fund, with headquarters in Halifax, donated canteens to Liverpool, Bootle, Coventry and Clydeside while Manchester, South Shields and Greenock obtained canteens from the Order of the Eastern Star.

JAPAN'S COUNCIL

"Joint Defence"

Japanese call the agreement one for "joint defence" of the French colony. (Japan's new bases there are expected to be in the southern part, chiefly Saigon and Camranh Bay, bringing Japanese forces hundreds of miles nearer Singapore and the rich Netherland East Indies.)

The government meanwhile took further retaliatory economic measures against countries placing Japanese assets under economic blockade. It announced freezing of assets of Canada and Northern Ireland and stated that Manchoukuo, Japanese puppet state in north China had followed Japan in freezing British and United States assets.

Says Japan Has Reserves

These actions followed a statement to the Japanese press yesterday in which Matasune Ogura, newly-named Finance Minister, claiming Japan has sufficient human and material resources to proceed with her plans for a "greater East Asia order" despite economic pressure by Britain and the United States.

Ogura, an industrialist, told the Japanese press yesterday the British-American action "had been surmised beforehand."

"Furthermore," he predicted, "the reciprocal measures taken by Britain and the United States eventually will prove painful to the two countries so long as Japan's economic resources remain sound and strong."

Batavia Opposes

(One big phase of Japan's greater East Asia "co-prosperity sphere" program blew up during the weekend, Reuters, News Agency indicated today in reporting from Batavia that the Netherlands East Indies was clamping control on Foreign Exchange transactions with Japan.

(All exports to Japan, Manchoukuo, China and French Indo-China will require special licenses, it said.

(Japan sought unsuccessfully for months to reach an agreement with the Indies Government providing for an increase in exports.)

Ogura declared, however, that he considered it "imperative and necessary to perfect the war-time system at the earliest moment possible in order that the National Economic Power may be most effectively displayed on a well-planned basis."

1,900 Jap Trucks Arrive

Saigon, French Indo-China, July 28—(AP)—Members of the Japanese military mission to Indo-China disclosed today 1,900 Japanese military trucks have arrived in Saigon from Hanoi to transport incoming Japanese troops to nine bases in Southern Indo-China.

The vanguard of Japanese forces for these bases was believed aboard four transports and four destroyers expected here Wednesday.

Tokyo, July 28—(AP)—The Netherland East Indies notified the Yokohama Specie Bank today it was abrogating a monetary agreement which became effective last January 1.

(Reuters News Agency, reported from Batavia that the Netherlands Indies suspended all Foreign Exchange with Japan).

(Far Eastern military developments were reported centering on Japanese troop movements toward Indo-China and Siberia.

(A reliable source at Saigon reported Japan would land at least 24,000 men in southern Indo-China at a point within striking distance of Thailand. This source said preparations were underway to house 12,000 Japanese soldiers at Saigon and another 8,000 at Phnompenh, near Thailand's border.

(Just what Japanese troops already have been landed in the French territory still was a military secret.

(Chinese intelligence operators reported at Chungking yesterday that Japan had increased her forces in Manchukuo and Korea to 17 divisions and that they were in position to be moved into Siberia should the Japanese decide conditions on the Russian-German front favorable.)

The newspaper Hochi said in an editorial today that American-born Japanese should go back to the United States.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Villian Still Pursued Her."

If you have laughs in your system, prepare to give out when you see Harold B. Franklin's new idea in screen comedy, "The Villain Still Pursued Her," now playing at the Capitol theatre. Only a confirmed grouch will be able to resist the superlative hilarity of this screen version of one of the most successful melodramas in the history of the American stage.

Hugh Herbert, Anita Louise, Alan Mowbray, Buster Keaton, Joyce Compton, Richard Cromwell, Billy Gilbert, Margaret Hamilton, Diane Fisher and Charles Judels comprise the featured cast, and prove to be an aggregation of mirth-provoking talent.

In the mid-Victorian era the play was received in dead earnest by thrilled audiences. But viewpoints have changed, and today it emerges on the screen as one of the funniest comedies ever to come out of Hollywood.

The story depicts the vicissitudes of one Edward Middleton, a young man who becomes a victim to strong drink and in time arrives at the brink of suicide. It's all a fiendish plot on the part of the unscrupulous villain of the piece, who seeks, by undermining the morals of the hero, to gain possession of the latter's fortune as well as to posses his sorrowing wife, a fragile creature of pristine purity and noble virtue!

Audiences, for the first time in motion picture entertainment, are invited to hiss the villain and applaud the noble characters.

This invitation is extended by a master of ceremonies (Billy Gilbert), who steps upon the stage before the gas-lighted foot lamps and in the fashion of masters of ceremony of the old era, describes the play about to be presented to the audience, and invites it to give vent to its emotional reactions. And the audience responds; it hisses, applauds, boos, cheers, whistles; in short, it has the time of its life!

Alan Mowbray, portraying the most loveable, hateable villain that ever foreclosed a mortage, came in for most of the hissing, which of course, was a tribute to his swell performance. Anita Louise, delightful as the heroine; Hugh Herbert at his "woo woo" best as the temperance crusader and philanthropist, who gives the "Healy cure" to unfortunate inebriates; Buster Keaton reminiscent of his Keystone Comedy days in his portrayal of the staunch friend of the family.

"The Mad Doctor"

Detective, mystery and "crime club" fans have a treat in store for them when Basil Rathbone, Ellen Drew and John Howard are seen in Paramount's latest melodrama "The Mad Doctor" which opens at the Capitol theatre. In a story that is replete with thrills and chills Rathbone adroitly portrays a brilliant medical man driven insane by the actions of an unfaithful wife. He becomes obsessed with a phobia for the annihiliation of all women. The lovely Miss Drew comes into his life as an extremely wealthy girl possessed with a complex that is slowly driving her to self-destruction. The story progresses until the murderous Rathbone is rejuvenated thru falling sincerely in love with her. It is at this point John Howard, the spurned fiance of Miss Drew, an enterprising young newspaper reporter, sets out to expose the wily doctor as a charlatan. The tense quality of the story is relieved by laughs cleverly injected by capable Barbara Jo Allen, known to millions of radio fans as the very funny "Vera Vague." Ralph Morgan, Martin Kosleck and Kitty Kelly competently assist director Tim Whalen in turning out a very finished production.

The same programme includes an interesting short subject, "Going Places."

REV. D. CHATREAU ANNOUNCES HIS RESIGNATION

Rector of Emmanuel Church Will Leave in August to Enter Field of General Evangelism

At the service of evening prayer in Emmanuel Church last evening formal announcement of his resignation from the pastorate of Emmanuel Church was made by the Rector, the Rev. D. R. Chatreau.

In informing his congregation of his decision the Rector intimated that he felt called to a more aggressive and evangelistic ministry than is possible under the circumstances of parochial routine and that he was therefore leaving the parish to enter the field of General Evangelism. Mr. Chatreau has had several years' experience in this work prior to coming to Emmanuel Church.

Rev. Mr. Chatreau said, further, "I am anxious to make one matter as clear as possible. The most general conclusion when a minister resigns from a church after only a short term of service is that he is the victim of untoward circumstances, party strife, or something of the sort. But I am happy to say that there has been no trouble of any kind in this church during my incumbency. And, though I am very well aware that my ministry has been no more popular here than it will be anywhere so long as the spiritual state of our country is as it is, yet I would relieve any questioning mind of any anxiety on the point I have mentioned. My position is that I feel definitely called to pursue a strongly evangelistic ministry, and it is in response to that irresistible call that I shall shortly bid farewell to you here."

Mr. Chatreau's farewell message will be delivered at the evening service on August 10th. He will enter immediately upon his travels which involve special engagements with churches of various denominations. At the moment he has appointments booked to the end of November.

Beauharnois, Que., July 28 (CP)—Body of Philippe Page, 22 year old Valleyfield, Que., resident, was found Saturday in the St. Lawrence River near here and police expressed belief he may have been on the Beauharnois bridge when it collapsed early last Monday morning.

Nazi Slogan Backfires in Hitler's Face

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON)

Washington, July 27 (AP)—It is much too soon to conclude that Hitler's big parade to the East has definitely bogged down in mud and blood in Western Russia. There can be no doubt, however, that the Nazi propaganda slogan, six-weeks-to Moscow, has back-fired in its author's face.

There was never much warrant for believing that the Nazi high command itself actually had set such a time table. Distances involved were too vast, road and rail communications too meagre and difficult; Red Army man-power too great and the traditional elan of the Russian people, fighting on their own soil, too well proven in history for German army realists to have so misjudged the scope of their task.

Yet German propagandists emphasized that six-week schedule and as the last week of its opens, it is glaringly obvious that the Germans have badly miscalculated somewhere. Probably it was the technical proficiency of Russian staff work that they underestimated, misreading the portents of the Russian-Finnish war in that respect.

Learned Their Lesson

The Russians won that war, blasting their way across the Karelian Isthmus by sheer weight of numbers and at terrible costs in casualties. There was every evidence of faulty Russian staff work in the early stages of that fight. The courageous stand of the outmatched Finns stirred the admiration of the world.

Ultimately, however, the Russians learned their lesson. Their staff work improved and Finland surrendered.

Contrasting events of the Russo-Finnish War with those of the first five weeks of the Russo-German conflict, the Red Army staff seems to have achieved military miracles. Whatever the final outcome, the Russian retreat from western buffer outposts to the Stalin Line is likely to go down in military history as a victory rather than a defeat.

The bulk of the Red Armies deployed in buffer territory from the Baltic to the Black Sea made good their escape, great as were their losses. They fell back on a front 1,000 miles long and effected a retirement averaging 300 miles or so in depth in order to right again.

Staff Work Good.

There is no parallel in military history for a successful retreat of that scope. It speaks volumes not only for the morale of Russian soldiers, amply proved by German accounts of "fanatical" resistance; but for Russian staff work.

It met and mastered the most tremendous retreat problem an army staff ever faced. It nowhere permitted the German panzer units to break through on a scale to match the French disaster on the Meuse. And it slowed the pace of the lunging German attack all along the vast front sufficiently to permit Russian reserves by the million to come up for a stand on the Stalin Line.

Moreover, the last two weeks of German battering at the Stalin Line have not yet produced a dangerous dent, except at Smolensk. Even that bulge is of dubious strategic consequence. It is too narrow at the base and too great in depth to be of itself a formidable threat to the critical centre of the Soviet defence lines before Moscow.

A third-phase Nazi offensive, reshaped to meet obstacles encountered, must come to light soon, if indeed it has not already started. That it could develop within a week on a scale to make good the six-weeks-to-Moscow propaganda slogan seems beyond the range of possibility. The Nazi vocalist who coined the phrase probably would like to forget he ever uttered it.

ON PARLIAMENT HILL

Knifing through the darkness, a searchlight beam operated by a Canadian soldier on Parliament Hill catches the top of the Canadian War Memorial and illuminates the figures which stand in memory of Canadians who died in the last world war. There is 800,000,000 candle-power in this beam of light.

Dorothy Lamour has two sweethearts to whom she's true—Bob Hope and the rest of the army. Her three khaki knights, Lyn Overman, Eddie Bracken and Hope, make life interesting for her in "Caught in the Draft," Paramount's merry hilarity now on the Belle Theatre screen.

'Louder and Funnier'

Hollywood, we are informed by Variety, which keeps a sensitive finger on the peripatetic pulse of the infant film industry with an ear ever cocked for symptoms of colic, gas pains or regurgitation, is in for a new cycle of low comedy.

"Low Comics Up Film Biz," Variety proclaims in a first-page headline. Collectors of quaint Americana will recall that Variety called the turn on the fade-out of the bucolic drama—circa 1938—with the epic headline, "Sticks Nix Hix Pix". So when Variety's mugs assert that subtlety and sophistication are on the skids, and that "low" on the screen means "up" at the B.O., we can rest assured that we are in for a revival of the good old days of physical comedy — a recrudescence of the golden era when no bathing beauty's callipygian protuberance was immune to the menace of a swift kick from the brogans of Ford Sterling, Chester Conklin or Ben Turpin.

The cinema triumphs of the rowdy team of Abbott and Costello, and the kudos accorded the callithumpian efforts of the Messrs. Olsen and Johnson in their crusade to save the legitimate stage by the device of making it impossible to snatch 40 winks during a performance of "Hellzapoppin", have, it seems, given the Hollywood moguls an agenda for meditation.

Maybe, they reflect, this guy Mack Sennett had something on the ball after all. Maybe the sight of a gent blissfully unconscious of the fact that he is slowly losing his pants is still as funny as it was when Cain first snipped Abel's suspenders. Maybe a juicy blueberry pie in the phiz is still the one infallible stimulus to the risibilities. Maybe a closeup of a comedian teetering precariously on the ledge of a skyscraper, and unknowingly about to put his foot down on a banana peel, is still the ultimate in hilarious suspense. Maybe the good old-time pratfall down an interminable flight of marble steps into Lady's Day in the swimming pool is still socko B.O.

Maybe so. It always has been —Chicago Daily News.

The flower girls, little Miss Sylvia Van Steenburgh and Miss Sally Howitt, were pretty in frocks of pink organdy, with garlands of roses in their hair. Mrs. Harold Denison sang, and Mrs. J. E. Madden was at the organ. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Mr. Robert Howitt of Ottawa. The ushers were Mr. George Howitt, Mr. Grant Belloway of Ottawa, Sergeant William Howitt of Petawawa and Sergeant Instructor Douglas Exley of Gananoque.

BURGOYNE—HOUSTON

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. J. F. Houston, 98 Dundas Street West, on Saturday evening, at five-thirty, when Doris Venard, daughter of Mrs. Houston and the late Mr. John Finley Houston, was united in marriage to Lieut. William Clifford Burgoyne, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Burgoyne, 96 Dundas Street West. The Rev. Dr. James Semple officiated.

Flowers and ferns made an effective background for the ceremony. Wedding music was played by Mrs. F. E. Houston, aunt of the bride.

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. R. E. Houston, the bride looked charming in a dress of baby blue tulle and lace over taffeta with a shirred waist and sweetheart neckline. The shoulder length veil was of matching blue tulle. The bride's only ornament was a small strand of pink pearls. She carried a bouquet of pink Briarcliffe roses and blue dephinium.

The bride and groom were unattended.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. Jas. Goldie of Peterboro, sang 'Beloved It is Morn'.

Immediately following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served during which a very fine address was given by the Rev. Dr. James Semple.

Mr. and Mrs. Burgoyne then left for Baptiste Lake.

Out of town guests were Mrs. Benson Molyneux, Picton Dr. and Mrs. P. T. Bowlby, Tweed; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Rath, Harry and Betty Jane, Sulphide; Mrs Borden Rollins, Montreal, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Goldie, Peterboro

PARM—CORBY

A pretty wedding took place Saturday evening at Holy Trinity Church, Shannonville, at eight o'clock, when Ivy Muriel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Corby, Belleville became the bride of Richard Albert Parm, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Parm of Cannifton Road, the Rev. C. P. Heaven officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a street length dress of sheer orchid chiffon with white accessories and a corsage of roses and carnations.

Miss Violet Hopkins, Belleville, was bridesmaid, and wore a turquoise blue chiffon street length dress with white accessories and a corsage of roses. Miss Hazel Corby, sister of the bride, in powder blue taffeta, was also in attendance.

Mr. William Parm, brother of the groom, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at St. John's Mission, Herchimer Avenue, by the ladies of the Guild. Mrs. Corby in powder blue sheer and white accessories with Mrs. Parm in a navy and white redingote ensemble with white accessories, received the guests. Several out of town guests were present from Toronto.

Later the happy couple left on a motor trip to the Muskoka district, the bride travelling in a blue and white flowered dress with white accessories.

PENNYCOOK—PALMER

Foxboro United Church was the scene of a pretty mid-summer wedding at four o'clock, on Saturday, when Miss Rebecca Frances Palmer of Peterborough, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jermyn Palmer of Foxboro, became the bride of Neil Robert Thomson, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Pennycook, Toronto. Rev. E. M. Cook performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her bridal gown, her own design, in white satin and lace, with finger tip veil. Her bouquet was of red roses. Miss Mary Elinor Palmer was her sister's bridesmaid, wearing pink taffeta; she carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. William Drummond, Toronto, was groomsman.

A reception was held at Rene's White House, Brighton. Mr. and Mrs. Pennycook will reside in Toronto. The bride chose for travelling a jacket dress of navy and white printed silk with matching accessories.

Don't Get Wrinkles Reducing!

Alice Marble believes in exercise for keeping the svelte figure.

By HELEN FOLLETT

THAT woman who is coquetting with the idea of going on a reducing binge to restore the svelte, youthful shape must keep in mind one fact; six or eight pounds are enough to shuffle off the feminine frame in a month's time. Reduce at a faster pace than that and the face will develop lines. And wrinkles are usually with you the rest of your life.

It is not wise to follow the suggestions of the woman next door who has heard of a freak diet, stuck to it, and given the bathroom scales the laugh. She may have a more robust constitution than you have. Also, she may be a lazy one, not given to the strenuous life, may be able to live comfortably without much food for some time. Women who are active, especially if they do housework, must have a certain amount of energy-producing groceries.

The wise woman will drop in and see her family doctor, ask him if it is all right for her to cut down on fats, sweets and starches; they build adipose tissue. Most of us have more than we need of these good things of the table. As the digestive motors reject them, they form fat cells, are stowed away in the body.

The reducer can have lean meats, fish, poultry, all vegetables that grow above ground, fruits, buttermilk, cottage cheese. She must slow up on cereals, candy, sweet desserts, cream, butter, potatoes, pastries. Tea and coffee should be taken clear.

Following such a diet it is not necessary to take strenuous exercise, nor even always wise, especially if one is no longer young.

"SENSORY GHOSTS" BRING PAIN TO AMPUTATED LIMBS

Almost everybody knows that when a human being has a leg or an arm removed or indeed, almost any other portion of the body there is for a long time a sensation as if the part were still there. It may be said that a man may actually suffer pain in a leg that he does not have.

These strange and weird sensations may so disturb the mind as to lead to mental breakdown, drug addictions or suicide. Dr. A. A. Bailey and F. P. Moersch of Rochester, Minn., point out that Weir Mitchell, physician and specialist in diseases of the nervous system, called this type of sensation a "sensory ghost."

In the Clinic at Rochester there have been 55 cases in which people came to the Clinic specifically to be relieved of pain or disturbances in part of the body that had been amputated. In most of the cases the arm was the part of the body involved; in the remainder, it was the leg. Usually the person complains that he becomes conscious of a sensation of the presence of the lost limb, and that the pain which is related to that limb soon becomes unbearable. The pain is described as burning, aching, cramping, crushing, grinding or tingling. In some instances, it is described "as if a tight wire band was around the limb."

Following the removal of an arm, patients have said that they felt that the fingers were being twisted out of shape or that the thumb was being pushed too hard against the palm of the hand. One man said that he felt as if the fingernails on the hand that was removed were being lifted from the nail beds. Some stated that the pain was worse on days when they were excited or fatigued. Some who had become addicted to alcohol stated that they took alcohol so that they would forget the pain in the amputated area.

Obviously it is difficult to treat a condition of this type. The condition is not wholly a mental one because the nerves are actually involved. Further attempts are made to apply both mental treatment and direct treatment to the nerves. Some fifteen different forms of treatment have been applied, including injection of alcohol into the nerves at the point where the limb has been removed, to block any sensation; also, injection of local anesthetic mixtures, alcohol or salt solution into the nerves, high up, with a view to blocking the passing of sensation.

A second operation on the stump has been tried with the idea that there might be some factors present which constantly pressed on or irritated the nerve endings. In some cases the application of heat or cold to the end of the stump has brought about temporary relief, but in other cases has failed to produce any relief.

Study of these cases has emphasized more and more the fact that no single theory explains this condition. Pressure on the nerves brings about temporary relief, but in one case the cutting of a nerve failed to bring the desired effect. In several instances in which people have been born without an arm or without a leg studies have been made. These people never have the feeling that has been described as that of phantom limb or "sensory ghost."

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Small, Informal Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My wedding will be both small and informal. We will have only two attendants — bridesmaid and best man.

1. If a bride carries a Prayer Book, with markers of ribbons and lilies-of-the-valley, should she also wear a corsage?

2. At a church wedding when does the bride slip the glove from her left hand?

3. When the bride and bridesmaid wear floor-length dresses, shouldn't the bride's mother and sisters wear floor-length dresses also?

4. What type of ties should the bridegroom and best man wear if they wear business suits?

Bride-to-be

1. No, the bride does not wear a corsage if she carries a Prayer Book.

2. If the bride wears gloves (and she usually doesn't, at a summer wedding, and especially when the men are wearing informal attire) she takes off her left glove just before the ring part of the ceremony.

3. Yes, the bride's mother and sisters and the groom's mother and sisters wear floor-length dresses when the bride wears a floor-length dress.

4. With business suits the men wear four-in-hand ties, usually with a blue background and with white or gray stripes of small pattern.

Do Attendants Get Invitations?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper to send wedding invitations to the attendants (bridesmaids and ushers)? Isn't it taken for granted that they will naturally take the invitations for granted?

2. I have a very large family of cousins, all married and living at separate residences. Would it be proper to send the invitations to my aunt (their mother) adding "and family" to her invitation, or is it necessary to send each member an individual invitation?

P.N.

1. Wedding invitations should be sent to all wedding attendants.

2. It is necessary to send individual invitations to these cousins, each invitation addressed to Mr. and Mrs. It is not good form to add "and family" when addressing any kind of invitation.

Invite Minister?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Should the minister who performs the ceremony be invited to the wedding reception?

Frances

That depends. If the wedding reception is to be a large one, naturally the minister (and his wife, if he has one) is invited. If the reception is a small one, with only the members of the immediate family and perhaps a few close friends, usually the minister is not invited, and he would not expect it. However, even if there are to be only a few invited to the reception the minister (and his wife) is invited, if he is a very close friend of the family.

AT THE BELLE

"Caught in the Draft"

When Paramount's comedy version of conscription's lighter side, "Caught in the Draft" opened at the Belle Theatre Saturday it sounded more like an audience contest to see who could laugh the loudest. For Bob Hope is the dizziest, busiest rookie in the whole army. It's hard to imagine anything funnier than the fresh army gags that come out of the mouth of Hope.

Co-starring with the ever-popular great radio and screen comic is another great favorite, Dorothy Lamour. Starting off with a bang when the gun-shy Bob discovers that a pistol he uses is really loaded and won't stop shooting, the gags keep coming faster and faster without a stop, and so does the audience laugh. Lynne Overman and Eddie Bracken do their bit along with Bob—three musketeer rookies who change "squads right" to squads riot.

Hope plays the part of a movie actor who lands in the army through a practical joke which backfired on himself. He's in love with Dotty, the colonel's daughter, who won't say "yes" until he proves himself a hero. Lynne Overman, Bob's show business agent, is in the army to protect his 10 per cent. The third defense doughboy is Bob's latest stooge, Eddie Bracken, who makes everything in khaki go wacky.

They take a crack at every job in the camp from parachute jumping, driving a tank, peeling potatoes and softening up the hard-boiled "sarge" to improving the manual of arms. They take part in some war games that top anything the old Keystone comedy cops ever did for laughs. In the end, Hope turns his stooge's military tactics from disaster to laughter and wins himself a hero's fame.

Catchy new tunes sneak in and out of the rib-tickling situations. You'll get your money's worth of mirth when you see America's number one rookie get his cookie in "Caught in the Draft."

The popular Belle News of the Day and a funny Popeye cartoon, "Olive's Sweepstake Ticket" are shown on the same program with a very interesting Crime Does Not Pay story, "Respect the Law."

Greta Garbo and Ina Claire in a scene from Ernst Lubitsch's gay comedy "Ninotchka," now showing at the McCarthy Theatre in addition to Peter Lorre in "Stranger on the Third Floor," the seasons top screen thriller.

LIT-TLE OLD SOD SHANT-Y ON MY

One of Favorites in Songbook

It's loads of fun, when your friends get together, to warble cowboy songs—especially with a songbook to remind you of the best verses!

Remember "The Little Old Sod Shanty," about the bachelor who longed for some kind-hearted girl to share his humble home?

"Oh, the angel, how I'd bless her if this place her home she'd make,
In the Little Old Sod Shanty On My Claim."

And "Goin' Down To Santa Fe Town," with its catchy tune?

"Oh we saddle old Paint and away we go,
We're goin' down to the rodeo,
We'll rope all day and dance all night,
And in the morning we'll look a fright."

Then what about the sad, but oh so romantic "Border Affair"? Even strong silent men join in:

"I still hear her tender tone,
'Adios, Mi Corazon!'" (Goodbye, My Sweetheart!)

In our cowboy songbook you'll find these among 18 favorites everyone loves to sing. Gives words, music, piano accompaniments; some songs have guitar diagrams. Includes "Home" On the Range," "Good-Bye, Old Paint," "The Texas Song," "Red River Valley."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Interested in Girl of Another Nationality

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Recently I met a very lovely girl who interests me very much and I've been taking her out occasionally. However, I've just found out that she is descended from a nationality which I have always hated. Do you think this would cause unhappiness, should it turn out to be a serious affair? Should I try to find someone else, or overcome this feeling?

Uncertain

Have you ever made a study of the people of this nation that you hate? I suggest you do that, and that may give you a different opinion of the inhabitants. Sometimes we let our thoughts centre on some historical happenings and lose sight of the great mass of the people, living peacefully and simply in these nations that we think we dislike.

Go to your public library and read everything you can about these people and then see if you do not feel differently. If you cannot overcome this prejudice, I believe it would be best for you to give up this beautiful girl and try to forget her.

Won't Let Stepdaughter Turn on Radio

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Four years ago I married for a second time. My husband is 17 years older than I am and has a son of 26. I have a daughter of thirteen.

His son lives in an apartment over our garage which my husband built, and although he is working steadily, he pays no rent or expenses whatsoever. My husband is also employed.

I've always had to earn the necessaries of my daughter's and my own wants, as I'm working too. Recently, my husband has been finding fault with everything my little girl does — won't let her listen to the radio, takes the paper away from her when she's reading, and many other things.

I've told my daughter I'll buy her a radio for her room, but she says she's beginning to hate her stepfather because she doesn't have the home life other children her age have. I'd rather move out and forget the whole deal than have so much quarrelling.

Donna

Thank goodness you've got a job and are able to earn your own and your daughter's living. So many women without the ability to earn a penny feel obliged to put up with a situation like yours. Why not have "a good straight talk" with your husband and tell him that you'll have to make other arrangements if he doesn't treat your daughter better.

It seems from what you've written, your husband doesn't know when he's well off.

Problem With Parents

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 17 years, in love with a boy of the same age. My parents don't want me to go with him, because of something his parents did, but he can't help that. I see him quite often away from home, but I'd rather my parents would allow me to bring him to the house, so they could become acquainted with him.

He gave me a wrist watch for my birthday, but I have never taken it home; I keep it in my locker at school. I'd like my parents to know I have it, but how shall I go about it

I'm not the type of girl who likes to do a lot of running around, but am so anxious that my parents meet this boy and allow me to have him at the house. He's the most sensible boy I've ever met. Works in the daytime and goes to school at night, preparing for his profession.

Please tell me how I can put all this up to my parents.

B. H.

When parents will not allow their daughters to see their boy friends at home, I always beg them to stop look and listen! So many of the tragedies which come to me from what is known as girls "in trouble" have had their origin in meeting on the sly.

Half the fascination of this type of love affair may be put down to "stolen sweets," and the other half to standing up for a boy or girl who seems to be unjustly accused of something.

It would be so much better if this girl felt sufficient confidence in her parents to tell them about the watch, even though they might tell her that such a gift from a school boy was not quite the thing and beg her to return it. But to surround this young man with a halo of opposition is to give him the best chance in the world of winning the girl's affection.

A man may be a pie-faced villain, and get away with it—but he may not be a pie-throwing villain and get caught in the act by the minions of the law (the besmeared ones)—as is Lawyer Cribbs (Alan Mowbray) in this shot from RKO Radio's laughable novelty, "The Villain Still Pursued Her," now playing at the Capitol. Buster Keaton (top hat) and Richard Cromwell are the other two. The pie-battle is said to be one of the merriest high-spots in this take-off of the old American melodrama—which was produced by Harold B. Franklin. On the same program the added feature "The Mad Doctor" stars Basil Rathbone.

British Officer Tells Story Of Woman's Heroism

From an officer aboard a British merchant vessel comes a tale of a woman's heroism unmatched by anything heard yet.

The story described with true British calm the work of an English woman, a Miss Drummond, who served as second engineer on his freighter.

"She was sent here by the Ministry, who couldn't get another engineer to take on the job. She, as well as the chief engineer, self, and Sparks are all ex-B.I. (British Intelligence). She was at one time third engineer of the Mulbers, and has a very good job on shore in London, but gave it up to come back to the sea for the war and served at Dunkirk and everywhere nasty you can think of," the seaman wrote.

"In appearance, she reminded me of a horse—about the ugliest woman I ever saw, and the most courageous. She seems to be without fear or nerves. Her inside must be composed of steel wire and copper wire and catgut. She is very good at her job and has an uncanny power over the engines, for which I once thanked God. She gets from one-half to three-quarters knots more out of the ship on the same fuel in her watch than any of the others. I once asked her how she did it.

Talks to Engines

"She said, 'Oh, I just talk nicely to them. You can coax or lead engines to do what you want; you must never drive them.'

Which, of course, is as clear as mud."

The officer described the British technique of avoiding bombers in an unarmed vessel. His boat carries no armament — "not even a shot gun"—but is protected by steel and concrete shelters and a conning tower from which operations are directed.

When the German bomber came over them, "We met each rush in the same way, by keeping on a steady course and letting him get almost into bombing position and then at the estimated time of release pushing the helm if possible to swing the ship at the second when he pulled the release. The scheme was so successful that three times he couldn't get into bombing position at all . . . The bombs were most alarmingly close and the noise and concussion frightful as the guns (he had two in two turrets, ahead and astern) kept going till near the end, when apparently they ran out of ammunition, or seized up with heat.

Like Miracle

"When it was all over and the black abomination had disappeared to the eastward, I, for one, felt dazed — it was so like a miracle. There was the same lovely cloudless sky and the summer blue sea. The ship was still plunging along to the westward. Only the shattered splinters and rubbish showed that something had been doing. Besides Almighty God we have to thank the coolness and skill of the captain, who had to judge every order in terms of seconds and never once made a mistake; but perhaps, even more, that very noble lady, the second engineer.

"She took charge and in ten minutes had 'talked' to those engines to such good purpose that our miserable top speed of nine knots had risen to 12-and-a-half and was still going up when she eased down at all clear.' That speed had never before been recorded in all her 18 years. I just heard what happened down below in that ghastly half-hour.

"She was talking to the chief engineer and me on deck in her Sunday best uniform after breakfast, when the alarm gongs went. She went at once and took charge below. After the first salvo, which flung her against the levers and nearly stunned her, she realized that there was little hope. She told the engineers to open up the fuel injectors and to start others, and began opening the main steam injectors (throttle) bit by bit.

"Then calling to the engine-room and stokehold staff, she gave them the last order—pointing with her long arm to the ladder—'Get out.'

Face Was Ghastly

"It must have been pure hell down there alone. Two cast-iron pipes were fractured, electric wires parted, but her iron body and mighty heart stood it. The main injection pipe just above her head started a joint, and scalding steam whizzed past her head. With anyone less skilled down there that pipe would have burst under the extra pressure, but she nursed it through the explosion of each salvo, easing down when she judged from the nearness of the plane's engines that the bombs were about to fall, holding on for all she was worth to a staunchion as they burst and then opening up the steam again.

"If the pipe had gone we would have stopped and it would have been all over.

"I saw her once during the action when I had to dodge along to the wireless room, and looked down the skylight, hoping to be able to shout a few words of cheer to her. She was standing on the control platform, one long arm stretched straight above her head and her hand holding the spoke of the throttle control as if trying by her touch to urge another pound of steam through the straining pipes.

"Her face, as expressionless as the bulkhead behind her and as ghastly white in color, was turned up towards the sunlight, but she didn't see me. From the top of the forehead down her long face, completely closing one eye, trickled a wide, black streak of fuel oil from a strained joint. That alone must have been agony. She had jammed her ears at first with oily waste to deaden the concussion and then in a panic tore it out again for fear she would not hear some vital order from the bridge, not knowing that all connection with the bridge was cut.

"She was about all in at the end, but within an hour was full of beans and larking about picking up spent bullets and splinters. All round her, by the way, the platform was littered with bullets that come down from the skylight. . ."

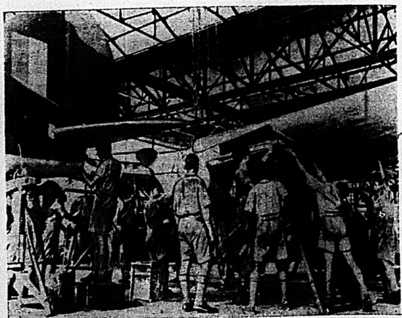
BEE HIVE IN SINGAPORE



British Royal Air Force experts are swarming about a Brewster fighting plane, assembling the craft after its arrival at Singapore, crated from the United States. These planes have been arriving at the British stronghold in a steady stream and are now an important part of Singapore's defences. Named "Buffalo Fighters" they are credited with great performance in the air by R.A.F. men who fly them. They will come in very, very handy if Japan goes through with her drive to the south. Present demand for bases in Indo-China is believed to foreshadow the long-expected attack on the Dutch East Indies.

Japanese Ships Clear U. S. Ports

San Francisco, July 28 — (AP)—San Francisco branches of Japan's greatest business firms feared they would be obliged to close their doors today as commerce between the United States and Japan virtually ceased.

President Roosevelt's order freezing Japanese assets in this country came as a smashing blow to this centre of Japanese-American business. The order was received here while business houses were still open, and its effect was electric.

Japanese stood anxiously in long lines at bank windows during the day, withdrawing their funds in anticipation of the order. The Yokohama Specie Bank which handles most of the Japanese-American finances, was swarming with near-panicky Nipponese.

One Japanese observer commented that business houses were hopeful of getting permits to carry on regular trade, "but they are all worried, most naturally."

Head for Open Sea

Japanese ships in United States ports headed to sea at full steam, and some 40 hovering offshore or marking time at sea gave no indication of their next move.

The huge new Japanese tanker Nisshin Maru sailed from San Pedro at midnight with 95,000 barrels of oil, 20,000 short of capacity. This departure cleared west coast ports of Japanese ships.

With full steam up, the Yamasimo Maru and the Kyoko Maru headed to sea with full cargoes from Pacific northwest ports last night.

A number of other Japanese ships are on the high seas with valuable cargo consigned to the United States. The Asama Maru is due at Honolulu today with a $4,000,000 silk cargo. It was doubtful these vessels would put into an American port and risk seizure of both ship and cargo unless some special guarantee of safe conduct were granted. And there was no word of such guarantees from Washington.

Pipe of Peace

From the Timmins Advance

The Ottawa Journal sponsors in a half-hearted way, a story to the effect that at Calgary, Hon. Mr. King, Premier of Canada, smoked a pipe of peace with some Calgary Indian braves. The Journal seeks to buttress its story by asserting that it saw the thing in a photograph passed by the censor and sent out by the Director of Public Information. The Journal even goes so far as to attempt to prove its story that Premier King actually smoked a pipe by quoting from the Toronto Star, which appears something like Ananias calling upon Sapphira to back him up in his story....

The Ottawa Journal pretends to feel saddened at the thought of Mr. King smoking a pipe, believing that all through the years he has been a non-smoker. Just one question to the Ottawa newspaper; "If Mr. King never uses a pipe, where on earth does he get all his pipe dreams?"

Instead of being alarmed at Mr. King taking up smoking, The Ottawa Journal—and all Canada—might well be overjoyed. No sturdy pipe smoker would ever be as much of a politician and as little of a stateman as sometimes seems the case. If Premier King would only cultivate a taste for a strong old pipe and a few round oaths, and a few other human traits, he might be able to clean house at Ottawa, and get things really going in helping win the war.

Both The Journal and the Director of Public Information assert that the tobacco smoked by the Premier on this truly historic occasion was genuine "tabac Canadien", a brand more scientifically termed by knowing smokers as "Canada Shag". If Mr. King actually smoked that, he need have no fear of an ocean voyage.

Frankly, the Advance fears the whole story too good to be true, though some plausibility is given to the tale by the naive remark of the Toronto newspaper that the pipe was simply borrowed for the occasion. By the same token, it is likely that the tabac Canadien was palmed and some mullen leaves, or other more savory stuff, substituted.

Perhaps, with this practice affair in the West, the Premier of Canada may now be all ready to come to Toronto and smoke the pipe of peace with one of his lieutenants who was some time ago created one of the Big Chiefs of one of the Ontario tribes of Indians.—Reprinted in the Ottawa Journal.

DIZZINESS — CAUSES AND TREATMENT

When a feeling of dizziness occurs, there are many who feel that this is one sign of heart disease and rush to their physician or call him to their home. Dizziness is not a sign of heart disease; the first symptom of heart disease is getting out of breath easily.

The cause of dizziness is usually some disturbance of the liver or the ear. The sluggishness of the liver itself or the slow emptying of the gall bladder or both is a common cause of dizziness. Eating a couple of slices of bacon or a large cube of butter is often sufficient to cause a complete emptying of the gall bladder and freedom from dizziness.

A cold in the head extending to ear or the presence of too much water in the tissues, including the balancing canals in the ear, can cause dizziness, sometimes accompanied by nausea and vomiting (Meniere's disease).

That a common ear condition — wax in outer ear canal—can cause dizziness is stated by Dr. J. De Swiet in Medical World (London). Other causes mentioned are hardening of the ligaments which hold the little ear bones together so that these three bones become as one solid bone; the use of quinine or salicylates; and inflammation of the middle ear — otitis media.

When, therefore, dizziness occurs and you have not, or have not recently had, a cold, nor eaten too much rich food, these other ear conditions should be remembered.

First, wax should be removed. Wax is usually removed by putting hydrogen peroxide and water, equal parts, into the outer ear (some physicians put in olive oil) letting it remain there for four or five minutes. The wax then can be removed by use of hot baking soda solution (sodium bicarbonate), a teaspoon to a pint of water, driven into outer ear by means of a large powerful syringe. As most homes do not have a powerful syringe, it is usually better to go to your physician or to an ear specialist to have the wax removed. Once or twice a year is usually sufficient.

Many cases of dizziness are due to Meniere's disease (dizziness, nausea and vomiting). Avoiding salty foods such as salt, canned, preserved meats and fish and others and avoiding or cutting down on table salt usually brings relief from symptoms.

In severe attacks of dizziness, morphine may be necessary to stop the attack.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows were standing around the letter box talking and arguing about different subjects such as whether we would rather have our houses struck by a medium earthquake or a exter big shot of lightning if we had to take our choice, and Puds Simkins said, Well look look who's here, it looks just like a midgit.

Meaning Shorty Judge just coming up, and Glasses Magee said, Well I'll be darn, a real live midgit, I wish I had a sideshow to put him in, I could make some money.

And everybody started to say different funny things about midgits, and Shorty Judge said, Aw go on, you're all jelliss.

Being the best answer he could think of, and I said, How much do you way, midgit, about 2 and a half pounds?

And we all started to pick him up at the same time to prove how light he was, and Shorty turned upside down in the excitement and a bunch of money came out of his pants pockits and started to roll around, including quarters and dimes, and us fellows quick ran to pick it up for him and handed it back to him polite, Puds saying, G, Shorty, we didn't want to make you lose your money.

Sure, Shorty, we were only kidding, what's you going to do with it all, Shorty? I said, and Glasses said Sure, Shorty, dont mind all that stuff about midgits and stuff. Holey smokes some midgits are smarter than a lot of giants, he said.

Sure, even Napoleon was only as big as about 2 midgets, Puds said, and Reddy Merfy said, Anybody that says anything against midgits better not say it around me.

Wich just then Shorty's mother came to the front door, saying, Howerd, come in here immeeditly with my change before you lose it.

Proving whose money it was, and us fellows started to call after him, Come back here, midgit, I want to stick you in my jockit, Hay Midge, how's the weather down there, and different things.

Proving money isn't everything.

Wobbly Dodgers Drop Pair To Pirates Who Gain in Race By Winning 9 of Last 11 Games

Bruised Brooklyns Have Lost Seven of Last Nine Games Played

YANKEES SPLIT

Athletics Win Two From Detroit to Advance on Chicago

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Brooklyn Dodgers are wobbling on the edge of a precipice—and everybody is wondering whether they will get pushed off, or just fall over of their own accord.

They dropped another double header to the Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday, 4-3 and 8-0, to fall two full games behind the St. Louis Cardinals in the struggle for the National League pennant.

A crowd of 40,903 that overflowed behind ropes all around the Forbes Field outfield encouraged the Pirates.

For seven innings, in the opener, portly Fred Fitzsimmons the veteran Brooklyn knuckleballer, exerted his jinx over the Pittsburghers but finally had to retire because of the 90-degree heat. Then in the ninth Maurice Van Robays exploded a double with the bases loaded against Curt Davis and won the game.

In the nightcap, Truett (Rip) Sewell pitched a five-hit shutout and the Buccaneers blasted out eight runs in one big fifth-inning during which Van Robays again doubled with the bases filled and Vince Dimaggio hit a homer with two on.

The Dodgers now have lost seven of their past nine contests, while the Pirates, who squeezed back into third place by a single percentage point, have won nine of their past 11, and 23 out of 31.

Reds Split Pair

The Cardinals were not especially impressive yesterday in dividing a double-header with the Boston Braves. They lost the first, 12-10 and took the second, 8-6.

Cincinnati split a pair with the Phillies in a "Paul Derringer Day" program. Derringer won the opener 2-0 with five-hit pitching but the Reds made only four hits themselves and both runs were scored on a wild pitch by Boom Boom Beck, who hasn't captured a verdict this year. John Podgajny then held the Reds to four hits in the nightcap and triumphed 8-1.

The Chicago Cubs stopped the New York Giants in a single tilt, 9-2. Vern Olsen and Jake Mooty held the Terrymen to seven hits.

In the American League, the New York Yankees finally were beaten after winning nine in a row. They took the first half of a double-header from the Chicago White Sox, 9-5, but lost the second, 7-3, to Lefty Thornton Lee. This still left them 11½ games in front of the Cleveland Indians.

Cleveland salvaged a 4-0 decision out of its Boston series with Joe Heving holding the Red Sox to six support.

The big noise in the junior circuit, however, continued to come from Philadelphia, where the Athletics swept a double bill from the Detroit Tigers, 8-1 and 7-0, to advance into an almost exact tie with the White Sox for fourth place.

The A's have won seven of their past eight encounters.

Washington advanced out of the cellar at the expense of the St. Louis Browns, whom the Senators trimmed twice, 4-3 and 5-3. Sid Hudson permitted only two hits until the ninth inning of the first game. In the nightcap Dutch Leonard produced a steady seven-hit job.

Tony Galento to Appear in Belleville

The biggest wrestling news for Belleville fans in a long time was announced today with the signing "Two Ton" Tony Galento, the notorious heavyweight fighter, who will come to Belleville to referee at next Monday's big wrestling show. Galento was sought out and signed when it was learned that he was in Toronto in connection with his proposed bout with Tommy Farr in that city in the near future. The colorful New Jersey bartender agreed to come to Belleville next Monday on his way to Montreal and local wrestling fans are looking forward to seeing the rough and ready slugger in the ring with the heavyweight wrestlers. A strong card of heavyweight bouts is being up with arrangements to be made for two of the continents outstanding men to meet in the main bout. Galento states that he has refereed wrestling matches before this and has a rugged system for making the big unruly matmen behave. "Two Ton" Tony is burning up over the fact that he has been sidetracked, temporarily anyway., by Lou Nova, in his efforts to secure a return match with world's champion, Joe Louis. Galento beat Lou Nova last year in a big boxing up-set and naturally resents being passed over for Nova. Having knocked the champion off his feet with one of his smashing, ham-like fists the roly-poly Tony fully expects the repeat when and if he catches up with Louis. As a referee Galento makes no bones about his ability to handle any man anywhere, anytime and referring to the grapplers Tony says, "Dose guys better act good or I'll molder dem."

KINGSTON SPLIT INTERPROVINCIAL BALL GAMES

Ponies Lose to Smiths Falls, but Win 6-3 at Hull

Right now the team to beat in the Interprovincial baseball league is Hull B and B. The Quebecers have lost only three games in 15 starts for a percentage total of .800, and are three full games ahead of second-place Kingston Ponies.

B and B won their only start of the past week in Hull Sunday when they defeated Royal Canadiens 3-0 behind the effective six-hit pitching of Dominic (Lefty) Barbaro. Andy Broder, on the mound for Royal Canadiens, Limited B and B to only four hits but he walked seven men and this, coupled with three errors by his teammates, gave B and B all their runs.

The lowly Buckingham Club—in the cellar since the start of the season, surprised the fans by winning two games last week. Wednesday they edged out Royal Canadiens 4-3 behind the masterful pitching of Theo Chartrand and Sunday they outslugged Smith's Falls Railroaders to win 11-5. The double win during the week left Buckingham 8-2 games behind Hull but within striking distance of Smith's Falls in fifth place.

Railroaders went on a slugging spree in Smith's Falls Saturday when they amassed a total of 27 hits for a 23-4 victory over Kingston.

Royal Canadiens double loss during the week dropped them from second into third place. Kingston gained the half-game advantage by defeating the fourth-place Hull Volants 6-3 in Hull Sunday.

ROYALS-BISONS BATTLE FOR SPOT IN 'INT' LOOP

Bisons Advance by Beating Chiefs Twice; Leafs Lose Two

There at least still is a fight on for second place in the International League, it is revealed in the standings as of today.

Buffalo-Bisons, for the moment at least, own the distinction of being the nearest in pursuit of Newark Bears, having climbed into the runner-up spot with a double victory over Syracuse Chiefs Sunday 7-0 and 7-5.

This put Bisons a half-game in front of Montreal Royals, who got slugged by Newark twice 3-1 and 1-0, and now probably have a pretty good idea how their parent club, Brooklyn Dodgers, feel these days.

Jersey City battled 11 innings before subduing Toronto 4-3 in their first game, but took the second handily, 4-0. Johnny McCarthy's double scored Gibby Brack from second to break up the first tilt.

Lefty Ed Wissman allowed only three hits in pitching Rochester to a 7-2 win over Baltimore Orioles. He started shakily, throwing a home-run ball to Al Flair in the first inning with one on, but for the next eight frames he was invincible.

In Saturday's games Syracuse won the series from Montreal in a night game 5-3 despite the fact the Royals outhit the victors 11-8. Toronto epened the series with Jersey City with a 5-3 victory on Porter Vaughan's nine-hit performance.

Eric McNairs' home with two on in the eighth carried Buffalo to a 6-4 victory over Newark. Rochester downed Baltimore 8-4 in ten innings in the first game of a double-header, but the nightcap ended in a scoreless tie, held to six innings to allow Rochester players to catch a train.

HOW TO SWIM

Arm coming out of water

Middle position of arm

Arm entering water

Left arm about to enter water

ARM MOVEMENT

In Lesson Two, which you should master completely before continuing with this, you learned how to do the face-down float with the flutter kick. And now you approach the most difficult part of the stroke, arm movement. It will be easier for you if you remember the importance of rhythm and train yourself to do each movement smoothly.

Before you attempt to do the arm strokes while lying in the water, stand in water waist deep and practice these movements:

1. Lift right arm up, elbow crooked and pointing away from your body.

2. Straighten your arm, forward, with the hand slightly cupped, fingers together.

3. Pull arm straight down in a sweeping quarter circle stroke stopping the arc when the hand is opposite your hip.

Then do the movements alternately and co-ordinated with both arms.

As the right arm comes out of the water, the left should be poised ready to enter the water. Both hands and arms are never in the water at the same time.

Practice these movements many times. You can practice them out of the water by lying, stomach down, on a pillow placed on a small, sturdy stand.

It may take a week or two before you acquire the necessary rhythm to do this stroke properly but with practice you will succeed.

After you think you have practiced sufficiently, get into the water and, staying in water not more than chest deep, assume a position for the face-down float; push off and perform the arm strokes, with the kick.

Now you have almost started to swim the crawl.

NEXT—Breathing.

STARRY FIRST SACKER

"Pete" Haslip, veteran first baseman of the Corbin Lock girls' softball team in the Belleville Ladies' Softball League, who hit a home run, two doubles and two singles in her last league game. Mrs. Haslip will doubtlessly be selected as one of the players on the two Belleville "all-star" girls' teams to play the heralded Sunday Morning Class senior girls team of Toronto at the Armouries lawn in Belleville on Civic Holiday. The entire proceeds of the games, afternoon and evening, will be given to the Red Cross British Bomb Victims' Fund.

The appearance of the Sunday Morning Class team will mark the first time a senior girls' softball team from Toronto has appeared in Belleville in over a decade. Two "all star" teams from the Belleville Girls' Softball League will oppose the S.M.C. with batteries being reversed to assure the softball patrons of the district one of the outstanding sport programs of the season.

38,000 Aluminum Caps to Stockpile

El Paso, Tex., July 26.—(AP)—Mexican whiskey bottle caps—38,000 jigger-sized aluminum pieces from across the Rio Grande—went into the United States defence stockpile today. They were contributed by J. M. Gomez, proprietor of a Juarez distillery who for 20 years had been having the caps. United States customs authorities waived formalities to permit the 350-pound contribution to cross the International Bridge.

H. SMITH WINS ST. PAUL OPEN GOLF TITLE

Horton Smith is Acknowledged to be Greatest Greens Player of Era

BY EARL HILLIGAN
(Associated Sports Writer)

St. Paul, Minn., July 28. —(AP) — The most phenomenal putting touch in golf today belongs to Horton Smith—a player apparently destined to go down in the records as the greatest greens player this era has produced.

There is little argument among the stars with whom he plays that the 33 year old Smith is the best putter golf has seen in years. There was no argument yesterday on that point among the 7,000 spectators who saw the Pinehurst, N.C., professional turn his wizardy into a great final round 63 that brought him the St. Paul open championship and its $1,600 first money on a 72 hole total of 276, 12 under Keller Course's par.

Ralph Guldahl, twice National Open Champion and long one of the game's great finishers, could get only a birdie at No. 18—finishing a Strome back at 277. Smith's four rounds were 69-74-70 and 63, the last being nine under par. Guldahl's rounds were 68-71-69-69. Smith's finish pulled him from far back at 54 holes to first place at the finish.

Jimmy Thomson of Chicopee, Mass., finished third at 279 on final rounds of 68-71. Ben Hogan carded 280, bringing to 52 the number of consecutive tourneys in which this game's leading money winner has finished in the cash.

In all, twenty players smashed Keller's par of 288 for the route.

Winnipeg Sculler Wins Henley Singles

Port Dalhousie, Ont., July 27.—(CP)— A French-Canadian salesman from Western Canada and a collection of husky steel-mill workers from Buffalo split top honors at the 59th Canadian Henley which closed out a three-day stand Saturday.

After years of trying Theo Dubois of Winnipeg captured the Canadian Singles' Sculling Championship on the Welland Canal Course to clinch his claim to be called No. 1 sculler on the contingent.

At the same time the hard-driving muscle-men who row so vigorously for Buffalo Westsides amassed 107 points to win, without hardly any opposition, the aggregate championship for the second year in succession.

With Joe Burk, his nemesis of other years in retirement, Dubois ran into another equally redoubtable in Joe Anayal this year but the big French-Canadian managed to edge the Brooklyn fireman in the final test. Dubois covered the mile, 550-yard course in eight minutes, ten seconds to beat Angyal by half a length.

The race, strictly a two-man affair despite the presence of three other competitors, was a duplicate of the affair at Minneapolis the previous week when Dubois defeated Angyal.

Toronto Argonauts, the only Canadian Club capable of giving Westsides a battle for aggregate points, matched the Buffalo Club the first day but dropped behind from then on as their ranks, thinned out by army enlistments, found the task too great. Argos finished second with 61 points with Ecorse, Mich., Detroit and Hamilton Leanders trailing well back.

Try again, Sarge

The sergeant raged as his squad of recruits turned left when they should have turned right and vice versa. Private Higgins was the greatest offender, and the sergeant going up to him, bawled in his ear:—

"Haven't you ever drilled before in your life?"

"Yes, sergeant," replied Higgins. "I once drilled for three years."

"Oh, indeed . . . and where?" snapped the sergeant.

'In a quarry," grinned Higgins.

Now that Joe DiMaggio's consecutive game hitting string is history, it might be interesting to review his feat of hitting safely in 56 consecutive major league baseball games. Ironically the Cleveland Indians were in on both ends of the string. On May 14th last Mel Harder held Joe hitless, the next day he started his record-breaking streak against Chicago's Edgar Smith. Fifty-six games later it was Bagby and a Cleveland Smith that stopped DiMaggio.

Joe broke two records during his sensational spree, passing George Sisler's modern major league mark of 41 set in 1922 and Willie Keeler's 1897 record of 44. His deluge of base hits inspired the Yanks to victory in 36 of their last 41 tussles.

In the 56-game period, the Yankee star went to bat 223 times and made 91 hits for 160 bases. He had 16 doubles, four triples, 15 home runs and batted in 56 runs while scoring the same number himself.

His average for the epochal string was .408. His mark for the season was .371 at the time.

Upon learning that M. J. Rodden had taken up residence in Belleville and would be engaged as coach of the Reliance Hockey Club, Kingston Sport Scribe Bill Walshe had this to say: "Mike Rodden, former Canadian champion football coach, ex-star of Queen's football, N.H.L. referee, sports writer and sports authority, has accepted a position in Belleville and will probably coach the Redmen in hockey next winter. Kingston should see more of the aggressive M.J. next winter and from reports he is not moving to Belleville alone. Apparently Kingston Combines will have to battle a little harder next year to retain their hockey laurels. This department welcomes Mike back to the eastern sports wars."

Do you remember when Philadelphia Athletics of the American Baseball League scored four runs in the 11th inning to defeat Detroit Tigers 9-5 and stop Buck Newsom's winning streak at 13 games a year ago today. It was the first time Newsom had lost since the season's opening game.

That must be quite a baseball league the Kingston Ponies are in. Last week the Ponies, beg pardon, we mean the Combines, walloped the Smith's Falls "railroaders" by a score that sounded something like 25 to 6. Last Saturday Smith's Falls beat Kingston 23 to 4.You figure it out.

Howard Jones for the past 30 years one of the top football coaches in the U.S.A., is dead at 55. Jones coached at Syracuse, Yale, Ohio State, University of Iowa and Duke before going to Southern California in 1925. His lifetime coaching record includes 120 victories, 36 defeats and 13 ties as his squads won or tied for the Pacific Coast Conference eight out of the 16 years Jones was out on the coastal region.

Although they've sold $368,000 worth of baseball players to other major league clubs within 15 months, the St. Louis Cardinals are still favourites to win the National League.

The Yankees divided with the White Sox and Joe DiMaggio hit safely in his ninth consecutive game in his new drive on hitting safely consecutively....Joe hit his 23rd home run and has hit safely in 66 of the last 67 major league games he has played....Ah, beautiful rain.

Rome Comments on Situation

Rome, July 26 —(AP)— The newspaper Il Popolo Di Roma declared today that freezing of Japanese credits in the United States would not halt Japan's march toward the south.

The newspaper said Japan had decided to "break up once and forever all Anglo-American influence and intrusion which today is absolutely intolerable."

Detroit Baseball Benefactor Dies

Detroit, July 27.—(AP)—William A. Pungs, 92, whose $18,000 cheque kept the Tigers in Detroit when Buffalo attempted to purchase the baseball club in 1902, died at his home here Saturday.

Pungs was a pioneer in the motor car industry with his two-cylinder Pungs-Finch car. It was introduced in 1901 and later passed out of existence as the industry developed.

As president of the old Central Savings Bank, Pungs was approached by Jimmy Burns, then president of the Tigers, who told him Detroit was about to lose the team's franchise to Buffalo because of lack of financial backing.

The bank president, an ardent baseball fan, wrote the check that kept the Tigers in Detroit.

As Flying Fortress Left On "Fantastic" Raid

This series of photos was made July 24th, as one of the huge Boeing B-17 four-engined Flying Fortresses obtained from the United States, left an undisclosed British airport to join other bombers of its type in a raid upon the damaged Nazi pocket battleship Gneisenau at the French (occupied) port of Brest. The British air ministry reported direct hits upon the vessel from a height so "fantastic" that the scream of the bombs was probably the first warning the Germans had of the attack. Hits were also scored upon the Nazi vessel's sistership, Scharnhorst, which had been moved to another French port, La Pallace, 240 miles southward, when daily R.A.F. raids over Brest repeatedly undid attempts to repair earlier bomb damage. In the ABOVE, the top photo shows two of the ship's crew, probably pilot and navigator, going over a map with a ground officer. The middle photo shows the crew entering the plane and the BOTTOM picture shows the take-off. The Flying Fortresses easily operate at heights of 35,000 feet and upwards. These pictures were radioed from London to New York.

Ashes of Grenfell Buried Under Boulder

Fisherfolk Attend Last Rites in Northland for Doctor-Missionary

St. Anthony, Newfoundland, July 28 (AP).—As several hundred fisherfolk stood silently on the steep hillside, the ashes of Sir Wilfred Grenfell were buried yesterday beneath a great granite boulder in the familiar northland that he served for nearly half a century as doctor-missionary.

Fishermen whose fathers and grandfathers had welcomed Dr. Grenfell upon his first visit to the Labrador coast gathered with their families for the simple services.

They came on foot from the outposts and by motorboat from across the Straits of Labrador to honor their hero and benefactor.

Sir Wilfred's ashes were buried beside those of his wife on Fox Hill Farm which overlooks the mission, headquarters for his work in the north. It was a wish he expressed before his death at his Vermont home last October.

American Tourist Given Gasoline by Considerate Police

Stranded when out of gasoline for his motor car many hundred miles from his home, an American tourist arrived at the Belleville police station on Sunday seeking to replenish his petrol tank. "I'm sorry, but all gasoline dispensing places are closed in Canada on Sunday in accordance to a recent gas restriction law," explained Traffic Officer Doug Ellis, who was on duty at the time.

After some enquiries, however, members of the Ontario Provincial Police heard of the incident and three of these men siphoned six gallons of gasoline from their own personal automobiles and gave it to the stranded American tourist, who was most grateful for the consideration.

The tourist stated the gas so graciously given him would be sufficient to take him over the Ivy Lea International Bridge into the United States, where gasoline can be obtained on the Sabbath.

"Wicky" Ruttan Lands 60 Pounds of 'Lunge

Wilfred A. (Wicky) Ruttan, 12 Jones Street, proved his ability as an angler of note over the weekend when he landed two fine specimens of maskinonge from waters of Muscote Bay. "Wicky" was fishing with a "pumpkin seed" plug on both occasions. On Saturday he landed a 35-pound "muskie" and yesterday added to his angling prowess by taking a 25-pound lunge from near the spot he hooked the first one.

"Yes, and Doug Storey was with me on Saturday and hooked the largest 'lunge I ever saw. Unfortunately when we were about to gaff him, the big fellow leaped into the air and tossed the plug and hooks out of his mouth," added Mr. Ruttan, stating the fish would have easily tipped the scales over 50 pounds. However, Mr. Ruttan brought home 60 pounds of maskinonge, which isn't bad fishing, he contends. The 35-pound 'lunge was on display in Green's butcher shop window.

Purchaser of Famous Hope Diamond Dies

Baltimore, July 28 (AP)—Edward B. McLean, former owner of The Washington Post, died of a heart attack at a Baltimore suburban sanitorium yesterday. He had been a patient at the sanitorium for several years.

He was the purchaser of the famous Hope diamond. His chief prominence however, resulted from his connection as intimate friend of Albert B. Fall, with the oil scandals which rocked the country in 1924-25-26.

CHAPTER NINE

Good News, and Bad

"What is it, Sis? What is it?" Bill Marsh implored. "Do they want their money back? Do they?"

"No, Bill no!" Marilyn found her voice again. "I can't believe it. Bill, it can't b etrue. It just can't. Pinch me, Bill—"

"What can't b etrue? Why should I pinch you? Hey, Sis, stop acting like you're goofy. I brought you the letter, didn't I? Seems like you could tell me what's in it."

"Bill," Marilyn put her arm around her brother's shoulder, looked straight into his eyes, "can you keep a secret?"

"Sure I can keep a secret? I'm a boy, ain't I? Bosy don't blab like girls do."

"Then listen. The Clarco Company is offering me a position. A position on their promotion staff."

"What's a promotion staff?"

"It's—telling people about Clarco, how good it is, why they should buy it—make them want to buy it. Sort of like advertising."

"You mean they want you to work for them, not just write another jingle—work every day in their office?"

"Yes, Bill, in their office in New York."

"But Sis ,you won't do it, will you? You won't go away from Millville and leave me, leave Mums and Dad, and the house all fixed up like it was a new house, just when things are going along swell for us——"

"I don't know." Mariiny's gaze was fixed on far horizons. "I dont know. It's all so sudden—so breathtaking, but don't you worry, Bil,l yo uan dI are going to be pals, always. Nothing can change that."

"You bet your boots it won't. But gee, Sis—"

"Pals don't 'gee' their pals. Here comes a customer. I must get busy. See you at supper. And remember, I have your promise. This is our secret."

"You could skin me alive and I wouldn't snitch. 'Bye, Sis. Make it snappy getting home. Apple dumplings for supper."

Marilyn, hurrying toward the shabby gray house now turning into a spotless ivory, thought, "It's incredible. A few lines can change a person's whole life."

Passage of the letter danced before her in the late afternoon sun. "Your completion of our jingle showed originality, sales sense, and liveness, and we believe you have possibilities which might prove useful in our promotion department. Such ,for example ,as originating slogans and catch lines. We have decided to offer you a position on our staff, and the opportunity for advencement should make it desirable. We hereby extend to you an invitation to join our staff at a salary of fifty dollars a week ($50), the company to pay all expenses of your move to New York. Please let us know your decision at your earliest convenience——"

Fifty dollars a week! Why that was more than the teller of the Millville Bank earned ,more than the manager of the Bon Ton earned, more than she, Marilyn, had dreamed she could ear nin a month—two months, even after she finished her new course at the academy.

Entering the half-gray, half-ivory house, she felt an air of depression. She was more sensitive to it by reason of the contrast to her own exultant spirit. She found her mother in the kitchen, sitting b ythe table, rocking back and forth nervously.

"Baby," she moaned, "I thought you'd never come. It's Clara. They telephoned from New York—that young man from the theater—Al, she called him. He wants that we should get Clara to come home, or else we should come to New York and take charge of her. That's what he said, 'take charge.' He said for you to call him at the Metropole Amusement Company—I wrote down the number—and to reverse the charge. Call him, Baby. Call him. Oh my poor little girl ,my poor Clara—"

• • •

"New York calling Miss Marilyn —Miss Marsh—all right New York."

Marilyn's heart was behaving like a trap drum.

"Hello. Hello, H.B. Stands for Heartbeat, in case you've forgotten. Are yo ulistenin'?"

"Hello, Al." It was good to hear the familiar patter that was Al's idea of humor. His news couldn't be too bad if he could adopt this nonchalant tone. "Please tell me at once. Is something wrong with Clara?"

"Not yet. But she shows signs, angel. That's why I callde."

"Al, she's ill—she's been in an accident—oh please, tell me the truth. All of it. Mother is frantic."

"Calm yourself, little one. What that blond sister of yours has bene doing is no accident; it's just a whale of a lot of mischief. The big town is too big for her. She's trying to swallow it and such can't be done. Her stay with Metropoie ends tomorrow. We made all arrnagements to send her home but she says she's not going. She demands the price of her fare and expenses instead."

"Al! You're not giving it t oher!"

"Fat chance. We're not paying girls to go ga-ga in the big city. She got pretty noisy about it, but a ticket home is all she's getting. She says she's staying anyhow."

"Ridiculous. How can she stay? She has no money."

"Maybe not, but she sure has a system. She says she has a job in a night club. She's pulling that Beauty Queen stuff all over the lot. If her family can't persuade her Millville is a garden spot for gals like her, one of you had better run over here and snap on the handcuffs."

"You're sure she wasn't just being—difficult. You're sure she means to stay?"

"If I was as sure you miss me as I am that Blondie means business, I'd be the happiest man in heaven."

"I do miss you, silly. Al, I do appreciate your calling I don't know what we can do about Clara. I'll have to talk with Mother and Dad. I'll let you know as soon as we decide. Tonight or tomorrow at the latest."

"Tomorrow will do. That'll give you time to get the old think cap on straight. Count on me for anything you want done. I'd have grabbed her wrists and dragged her toyou only the law wouldn't like it. She's free, white and twenty-four, you know. How's Bill? "

"Better than ever. He has a fresh crop of freckles sprouting in between the regular ones."

"Don't raise a temperature now, H.B. I'll keep Clara in hand—or else—until we run her into the corral. I guess I'd better sign off. Hearing your voice puts me on the verge of a breakdown."

Mrs. Marsh was waiting and rocking, fear twisting her bloodless lips.

"Mums," Marilyn rushed to her mother, lifted the stricken woman's trembling chin. "It's all right. You misunderstood. Clara just wants me to come to New York, to join her there. She asked Al to call me—she was busy, on her tour, you know. Look at you, all this worry for nothing—"

"But the young man said we should get Clara home, or come to New York and take in charge. I'm sure that's what he said'."

Marilyn forced a laugh, even put a semblance of mirth into it. She said:

"Oh, Al — he's always talking double. He thinks it's funny. Half the time I don't know what he's saying. Mother, I'd like to go to New York."

Mrs. Marsh was limp with relief.

"It would be nice for you," she said. "You could meet Clara. The two of you could go sight-seeing together, be chummy like sisters ught to be. It would cost a lot of money though—of course you have your own money—if you think you wan tto spend it on a nice vacation. I'd feel easier about Clara if I knew you were with her."

Cheese Gradings Gain 2.11 Per Cent

Recent Rains in Ontario and Quebec Benefit Production

Ottawa, July 28 (CP). — Ontario and Quebec cheese gradings for the week ending July 26 were 61,540 boxes, a gain of 2.11 per cent over the comparable week for last year, the Agriculture Department said today.

The benefit of recent rains in increasing production after a period of dry weather is still to be observed, officials said. They continued confident that requirements of the United Gingdom market for at least 112,000,000 pounds of Canadian cheese before the end of March next year will be set.

"The increases in production as shown by gradings are not very impressive at the moment, but this year our supplies for shipments are enlarged to the requirement which makes all Ontario and Quebec cheese available for export."

Hot Weather Affects Markets

Toronto — Prevailing light offerings gave modest improvement to butter prices on the Toronto open produce market Saturday, while eggs closed out the week on a firm tone at previous levels.

Although trading was not active, fresh supplies of the Ontario product were kept moving on the butter market. No. 1 grade, Ontario creamery solids traded at 36 cents to 36 1-4 cents a pound, with offerings at the lower figure about cleaned up near the close of the market. Receipts arrived in very small quantities, mirroring the trend of Ontario production, which is not only showing the seasonal decline, but also as a result of the hot weather, is currently falling behind the year ago output. For the week ended July 19 the Ontario Creamery Association reports production in this Province off approximately 12 per cent at 1,131,461 pounds, compared with 1,285,632 pounds in the like week of 1940. Saturday, the odd car of Western butter sold on the basis of 36 1-2 cents a pound, and some dealers were asking 36 3-4 cents before the close.

No change occurred on the egg market. Receipts continued light, and these cleared well under good inquiry. Prices in both sections of trading held firm with Friday's quotations.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, July 28 (CP)—Produce market prices here Saturday, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture follow:

SAY IRAN WARNED BY GREAT BRITAIN

Ankara Dispatch Says British Authorities Regard Iran as Hottest Spot in Middle East

(By DANIEL DE LUCE)
Associated Press Staff Writer

Ankara, Turkey, July 27 (Delayed)—The British government was reported authoritatively today to have pointed out ot the government of Iran (Persia) dangers which might result from activity of German agents in Iran.

According to one semi-official foreign estimate, 2,500 Germans described as "an officers corps for a future Fifth Column" are operating out of headquarters in the Iranian cities of Teheran and Tabriz.

Anti-British and anti-Russian sentiment, it is said, is being capitalized by the Nazis.

British sources stoutly deny that Iran's sovereignty or independence is threatened by the Anglo-Russian alliance but it is acknowledged that the Nazis have won considerable influence there with such claims, especially among army commanders who have relied on German armaments in recent years.

The British authorities are understood now to regard Iran as "the hottest spot in the Middle East."

It was learned that the British Minister has called Iranian official attention to the infiltraton methods used by the Nazis in European countries before their conquest and has drawn a significant parallel with what might happen if the Germany army smashes through the Russian Caucasus to Iran's frontier.

British sources reported discovery last week of a German plan to raise revolt in Soviet Armenia with grandiose promises of a greater Armenia after the war, including some Turkish territory south of the Caucasus. This campaign is said to have originated near the juncture of the Turkish, Iranian and Russian frontiers.

This was considered a prize catch, but a day later Forrest landed a pickerel which tipped the scales at 11 1-2 pounds.

C. J. BURCHELL AT AUCKLAND

Auckland, N.Z., July 8 (CP). — Charles J. Burchell, K.C., Canadian High Commissioner to Australia, arrived here today on his way to Canada prior to taking up his new appointment as Canadian High Commissioner to Newfoundland.

SGT. MURPHY ROSS MEMBER OF R.A.F. AWARDED D.F.C.

London, July 28.—(CP Cable)—Sgt. Murray Hugh Ross, Nova Scotian member of No. 29 Squadron, Royal Air Force, today was awarded the Distinguished Flying Medal. He was born at Sydney, N.S., in 1906.

Award of the Distinguished Flying Cross to Sqdn. Ldr. D. L. Widdowson of Winnipeg was announced officially today. The award became known unofficially July 24 when the story was told of how the Canadian bomber pilot flew a blazing Wellington safely back to England after a raid on Muenster, Germany.

Pola Negri Weeps Refused Entry to U.S.

Jersey City, N.J., July 28 (AP)—Pola Negri, famed Polish actress, was refused entry into the United States today when she arrived from Lisbon on the American export liner Excalibur. Immigration officials said her papers were not in order.

Basil Rathbone seems terribly upset as he grabs Ellen Drew by her hair when he is about to be exposed as a charlatan in Paramount's latest detective mystery thriller "The Mad Doctor," now showing at the Capitol with the added comedy "The Villain Still Pursued Her."

Huge Fish Seen In Niagara R. Say Fishermen

Fort Erie, Ont., July 28—(CP)—The Niagara River had its own Ogopogo problem today as three reports from fishermen in the last 24 hours said a huge fish of undetermined type had been sighted near the Peace Bridge.

Old time fishermen laughed at reports the huge fish was a shark. They maintain sharks can't live in fresh water for any length of time.

They also scoffed at reports it be a muskelonge, as the biggest muskie ever caught in the Niagara River was 59 inches long and one group of four men insist the present monster is at least 22 feet in length.

Walter Fix and Edgar A. Haunz of Buffalo saw the fish. "We saw a peculiar thing that appeared to be flapping along the surface of the water," said Fix. "I thought it might be a huge sturgeon. We chased it in our outboard motorboat and saw a huge fin pop up above the surface. We couldn't get close enough to make up our minds."

The party of four who reported the fish to be 22 feet long, said they prodded it with a boathook and then tried to ram it with their motor launch. The launch struck a heavy blow but the monster got away—as monster fish usually do.

Man is Blown 75 Feet When Kitchen Torn Away by Wind

Gore Bay Ont., July 28 (CP) — Swept by a gale from the northwest, accompanied by heavy rain and thunder and lightning, Barrie Island and Gordon Township farms suffered heavy damage last night.

A number of barns had roofs torn off by the fury of the storm while one resident of Barrie Island, Alan Phalen, suffered a severe shaking up when he was blown 75 feet when his kitchen was torn from his farm home. He is in hospital here but his condition is not considered serious.

Phalen's small frame kitchen addition went rolling over the ground for 75 feet under the force of the wind. In the kitchen at the time, Phalen was badly bruised.

Several barns were badly damaged when the wind tore the roofs off. Niels Saul, Alan McDonald and Percy Reynolds had their buildings ripped apart by the wind. The Bell tower on the Gordon township school was torn off while numerous trees were uprooted.

How Your Pots and Pans Reach the Smelter

The ex-cooking utensils and other scrap aluminum that you donate to the national aluminum kitty to help build armaments looks like this when it arrives at the smelter. This collection was photographed in Cleveland at the plant of the National Smelting Company for Uncle Sam is also gathering up his aluminum reserves for war purposes. The scrap is sorted out into various bins as workmen estimate the amount of purity. Incidentally, the aluminum from your pots and pans is probably too impure for use in airplanes, but it will be substituted for pure aluminum in industrial use, releasing the pure metal for aircraft.

—AND THE DRIVER GOT UP AND WALKED AWAY

GRADUAL SWING

ernment spokesman's report as the war entered its sixth week said:—

1. The Nazis were faced with a new Verdun—held to a standstill after days of costly effort to break through the Smolensk sector toward Moscow and the Zhitomir front toward Kiev.

2. Detruction of two German divisions, one of them perhaps in the Smolensk salient where the Red army was credited with putting up a fight "that will be studied many years."

3. A fierce defence of Moscow and Leningrad that frustrated repeated German aerial attempts to burn out the two big cities of Western Russian during the past week.

4. Red Army forays and approaching counter - offensive against the Germans in some sectors of the land front, timed with increasing Red air-fleet operations which caused the German air force to fall back upon bases far to the rear.

5 Destruction of two German torpedo boats, two tankers, a submarine and several patrol boats in a Red air-fleet sweep over the Baltic.

Blitz Called 'Washout'

"The blitzkrieg is a washout," said S . A. Losovsky, foreign vice-commissar. It was he who described the war as a "new Verdun" with the Nazi and Red Armies locked in a battle on a scale unequalled in military history. He minimized the German ground gains, declared giant Russia could afford to lose the territory, and said what was more important was that the Red Army held its front unbroken from the Arctic to the Black Sea.

Russian Raids on Rumanian Oil Centres

After five night raids last week central Moscow showed no great effects of bombing. The Russians said 53 German planes were destroyed in attacks on Moscow and 41 in twelve raids on Leningrad.

(Delayed dispatches from Turkey last night outlined in detail a purported German plan to offer Britain a "painless peace" and divide European Russia if Nazi arms drive the Soviet forces east of the Urals.

Purported Nazi Plan of Peace

(The plan purported Germany to be ready to cease hostilities with Britain, leaving Britain's empire intact, if Britain would recognize the Reich as the master of Europe. Western Russia, under this scheme, would be divided, with Germany controlling the Ukraine and other territory apportioned to Turkey, Rumanian and Poland.)

The Soviet information bureau reported in detail the defeat of one of two German divisions reported during the week-end to have been wiped out.

"According to preliminary reports 4,000 German officers and soldiers found their graves on the field of battle," the bureau reported. "Our stretcher-bearers picked up about 3,000 wounded. A large number of prisoners were taken.

NAZI COMMAND

Annihilated

German military leaders claimed there they had completed an encirclement movement, annihilated two Russian divisions and started 23,000 prisoners back to prison camps. Booty captured was listed as 61 cannon, 80 anti-tank guns and 750 vehicles.

Semi-official accounts told of Nazi wedges driven through the Red Army lines farther to the south and the high command claimed the air force Saturday night pounded the Soviet capital with 250,000 pounds of high explosives and countless fire bombs.

Says Russians Pour in Reserves

Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter in an article entitled "Gigantic Battles" said that despite tremendous losses inflicted on the Soviets they still were feeding reserves into the lines.

"Even if these ever-oncoming replacements are not completely trained," it went on, "still one after another must be bitterly and bloodily fought to the ground."

2 Ambulance Drivers Escape From Huns To Serve With De Gaulle

Jersey City, N.J., July 28—(AP)—Two British-American Ambulance Corps drivers who escaped from German guards by diving from a train window and tramping four days through France on a diet of bread and water returned to the United States today—and promptly volunteered for service in Africa with another corps unit.

Within an hour after they arrived aboard the American export liner Excalibur the two—James W. Stewart, 35, Oneonta, N.Y., and Thomas O. Greenough, 30, Proffit, Va.—had signed up to sail for Suez Aug. 20th to serve with Gen. Charles De Gaulle's Free French Forces.

Stewart and Greenough said their break for freedom was made partly from pique at overhearing German guards aboard the train, which was carrying them and 19 other Ambulance Corps who had survived the sinking of the Egyptian liner Zamzam, ridicule the possibility of escape.

DROPPING

German planes also were reported over other towns in England during the night, but a joint Air and Home Security Ministries communique said the Nazi activity "was not on a heavy scale."

At least three German planes were said to be downed.

In the raid on London some fires were started.

The night was the first since July 17 and the fourth since the great bombing offensive began in which the R.A.F. did not visit Germany. It was assumed bad weather was the cause of the recess.

Many Nazi Planes Lost in Week

An official announcement said the Axis lost a counted total of 85 planes in operations on the Western and Middle East fronts during last week.

Increasing importance was attached to operations of the great four-engined "flying fortresses" built in the United States and flown to this country by a ferry service. It was such aircraft that carried out the first midsummer bombing of Berlin Friday night, letting down great missiles which sent flashes into the air from the heart of the German capital.

Friday's main bombing exploit, however, was centred on Hamburg and Hanover, while an attack on Emden was delivered by a solitary flying fortress of a reconnaissance flight.

Bombers in 'Sub-Stratosphere'

The four-motored bombers were believed to be operating almost exclusively in the sub-stratosphere. Authorities would not talk about the altitude from which Berlin was bombed, but they previously had said attack on Brest by these craft was delivered from a height well above 35,000 feet.

Nine aircraft failed to return Friday night, but their types were not included in the official announcement.

In the total war against the Axis the Royal Air Force counted its own losses at 75 planes. Of these 65 were lost in hostilities against Germany which resulted in the downing of 69 Nazi planes. The rest were lost in the Middle East.

Germans Caught Between Two Hostile Camps

Hopkins pictured Germany as caught between two hostile camps supplied by American War Industries. He asserted the United States program of turning out bombers for Britain is "far advanced and Hitler will not be able to move his factories far enough to the east to escape their devastating power of destruction".

The Presidential Emissary said he was here to find out exactly what Britain needed for her war effort and added:—

"I have found out that there are certain things which you need in order to fight this war for the democracies. I am confident American can supply them".

He then recounted that:

U.S. Planes By Thousands to Britain

In the past several months United States made planes "numbering in the thousands" have been flown or shipped across the Atlantic.

Several hundred tanks have been provided, with more on the way.

Freighters and tankers have been transferred and food supplies provided along with "a thourand miscellaneous articles all important to the war effort".

"No enemy action can stop the ceaseless tide of ships coming here daily, this time laden with something more substantial than hopes and sympathy", he added.

"You are not fighting alone. Your Prime Minister asked us for the tools. I promise that they are coming . . . . ..

More Than Lip Service

"President Roosevelt promised me that he will take steps to insure delivery of goods consigned to Britain. Our President does not give his word lightly. . . .

"We have not neglected the food question. America will never allow the people of Britain to go hungry".

Of aid to Russia and China, Hopkins asserted:

"Nor do we forget to look towards the east where China is battling valiantly against forces which menace democracy. Neither are we forgetful of the magnificent fight which the people of Russia are putting up in defence of their homeland.

"We in America are determined to give all possible aid to China and Russia—and immediately".

You have cut it out and put it away to show your grandchildren. With it, a way of living as you knew it, has passed forever.

Tonight you will want to see a movie. You drive up to one—saw that last week. At another, but no—you don't like so and so's acting. Let's go home. It's too much gas and time to waste on a show. Next month half the theatres will close. Poor attendence.

Tomorrow you will want some groceries. You will go to the nearest grocery store and buy some. Rib roast perhaps, and lima beans. You won't hear until tomorrow night at the bridge table that the store just next door had a special on the very thing you bought. Pretty soon your husband will wonder why the food bills are so high.

CHURCHILL WARNS NAZIS MAY TRY INVASION

RUSSIANS CLAIM TIDE TURNING IN THEIR FAVOR

Land, Sea and Air Actions Indicate Turn to Offensive

Moscow Turns Back Sixth Night Air Raid—Nine Raiders Destroyed

NAZI VESSELS SUNK

By HENRY F. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Editor)

Moscow, July 29—(AP) — Russian counter-attacks against Hitler's invading legions were reported today to have spread to all major sectors of the front in one of the greatest battles of all time. The Soviet atmosphere was one of calm confidence.

Germans are still trying to push forward, particularly in the Smol[illegible] sector of the central zone, military observers said, but both there and in the Zhitomir region of Ukraine are "breaking against the firmness and stubbornness" of the defenders.

Nazi losses were described as heavy.

Authoritative advices as late as yesterday said that the battered rail and highway centre of Smolensk, 230 miles west of the Soviet capital, was still in Russian hands after 12 days of bitter fighting.

Modified Trench Warfare

A modified form of trench warfare was reported in the northern sector, about Porkhov, with the Germans meeting stiff resistance.

At sea also the tide of war was declared to be turning in favor of the Russians and a communique reported that Moscow's fighter patrols and anti-aircraft gunners had repulsed an attempted mass raid of from 140 to 150 German planes overnight.

Only four or five planes got through during the 5 1-2-hour alarm, the Russians said and nine of the raiders were reported shot down against no Russian aerial losses.

"A small number of casualties" and fires were announced.

"The central and southern fronts appeared to be the zones of greatest activity in this sixth week of the conflict.

Overnight, the Soviet information bureau reported, fighting continued in the long-contested Nevel-Smolensk sector and on the Zhitomir front in the Ukraine. The communique said there were no operations of importance elsewhere on the battlefront.

Turn Toward Offensive

Indications that the Russians were swinging more and more to the offensive were seen in a communique on yesterday's fighting which reported the big German pushes toward Moscow and Kiev stopped.

In addition, the Red air fleet was credited with shooting down 100 German planes Saturday with a loss of 36 Russian aircraft, and coastal defence guns and the Russian Baltic fleet were said to have sent two patrol vessels and a torpedo boat to the bottom. Loss of one Russian torpedo boat was acknowledged.

Air Plan Grows—

By September it is anticipated 83 schools will be operating under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, July 29 (CP)—Thunder showers have occurred in many parts of Ontario, and it has become somewhat cooler in the Lower Lake region. It has been moderately warm in the Prairie Provinces with thundershowers occurring in a few districts.

URGES ARMY OF FARM WORKERS AS EMERGENCY

Oxford County Federation of Labor Favors Number of Suggestions

FARM LABOR SHORTAGE

Woodstock, Ont., July 29—(CP)—The Oxford County Federation of Labor met here last night in an effort to devise ways and means of meeting "an ever-increasing shortage of farm labor" in Canada.

A brief passed at the meeting will be placed before the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and co-operation of other counties of the Province will be sought in placing it before Prime Minister King. An effort to obtain co-operation from Provincial Federations throughout the rest of Canada will be made.

The brief included suggestions that key men, experienced in farming, be exempted from military training for a period of one year at a time; that agriculture be represented on exemption boards by capable men who understand farm operation; that where insufficient help is available for seasonal periods, trainees fully experienced in farming be released for the emergency.

The brief also suggested that an army of farm workers be mobilized as a war emergency and moved from place to place as required and that these workers be subsidized by the Government in addition to the standard wage paid by employers in the district.

Some county farmers at the meeting said they were preparing to cut down their herds and to seed many acres now under crop because of uncertainty of the future.

German Prisoners Taken by Patrols On Libyan Border

Cairo, July 29— (AP) —Capture of German prisoners in patrol fighting of increasing intensity on the Egyptian-Libyan border was announced today by the British Middle East Command.

"Local conditions", presumably weather, curtailed activity in the Tobruk sector, the daily communique said.

NOT JUST LIP SERVICE

Hollywood, July 29. (AP)—Paulette Goddard has started an individual campaign to collect old aluminum pots and pans for the United States Defence program by offering a kiss to the male winner which she guarantees will knock him back on his heels. "He can be assured that it won't be just a little lip peck", she promised.

SOLDIERS, PICKETS CLASH IN MELEE AT STEEL PLANT

Soldiers Act on Own Initiative—No Serious Injuries Reported

PICKETING RESUMED

Hamilton, July 29—(CP)—Pickets marched outside the National Steel Car Corporation plant peacefully today, after an early-morning clash with uniformed soldiers, while plant and union officials gave conflicting statements as to the effectiveness of a strike called by the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee.

"The plant is operating effectively and on a much greater scale than last night," said A. F. Gill, Deputy Government Controller, but union officials claimed the only workers entering the corporation grounds were about 300 inspectors employed by the British Supply Board.

Two workers in the picket line required hospital treatment after the soldiers and pickets scuffled and swung fists. Ray Shea, 37, suffered a dislocated jaw and Hugh Cameron scalp lacerations. Hospital attendants reported their condition as satisfactory.

The soldiers, from the Army Trade School in Hamilton, said they acted on their own initiative and were under no orders. Officials at the school said they were considering what action was to be taken against the soldiers.

Within an hour after the steel workers' organizing committee had announced a strike at the plant the soldiers, 300 strong, marched up and charged the picket lines.

Placards and signs were torn from the pickets' hands and trampled. Scuffles broke out and the picket line was dispersed. It reformed and again the soldiers charged.

From the uniformed men came shouts of "What are you holding up war production for? How would you like to earn $1.30 a day?" As the fighting broke out officers from the school arrived and started to round up the uniformed men.

There was no indication of trouble as the men on picket duty formed up outside the plant. Employees who wished to work were not interfered with.

Tonsil Operations Suspended in Manitoba Because of Poliomyelitis

Winnipeg, July 29.—(CP)— All tonsil operations in Manitoba today were under suspension following an announcement by public health authorities that practitioners in the province had been advised to postpone such operations until the province's growing epidemic of infantile paralysis is over. Statistics show that cases in which the patient has had his tonsils removed within the past month tend to be more serious.

Since the epidemic began two months ago 23 cases have been reported but only five have proven fatal.

RAF Bomber Crew of Four Rescued After Spending Nine Days in Dinghy

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 29—(CP)—Exhausted and with their lips cracked and tongues swollen, four members of the crew of a British bomber joined hands and sang "Auld Lang Syne" as a rescue plane signalled them "Help coming" after nearly nine days in a dinghy in the English Channel.

The Air Ministry News Service told the story of the crew, four sergeants, who after their bomber came down on the way home from Germany drifted and paddled, passing through mine fields and waving in vain to British planes as they crossed and recrossed their path.

A Hampden bomber finally sighted the airmen on the morning of the ninth day, and a rescue launch brought them to shore, worn from fatigue, thirst and hunger but physically still amazingly fit.

"We thought we were out 15 or 20 miles from the English coast," said the pilot, "but actually we were much farther out and in a minefield."

Had Little Food, Water

"All we had in the way of signalling equipment were two distress flares. They didn't work. We had no compass. We had a few boiled sweets, a tin of food tablets, a few ounces of concentrated chocolate, about a pint of water and a small bottle of rum.

Waves washed over the sides of the dinghy and the crew had to keep bailing with a small canvas bag in which their chocolates and tablets had been kept. They rationed their foo[illegible] water—a tablespoon of water [illegible]ay after the first two days.

"We still thought we were not far from the English coast," said the pilot. "Sometimes we could hear motor boat engines and once we heard a noise under the water which we took to be a submarine. Soon afterwards there were three violent explosions which seemed to be under the water.

Japan Offers Siam Land Bribe in Return for Her Support of 'New Order'

(By the Canadian Press)

Japan's swing to the south assumed an even broader aspect today, risking new Anglo-American resentment.

A Reuter's News Agency report from Bangkok said Japan had offered Cambodia and Laos, which are part of French Indo-China, to Thailand (Siam) in return for her allegiance to Japan's "new order" in Asia.

Such a division of Indo-China would violate the Vichy-Tokyo protocol signed in Vichy today, which pledges Japan to "respect the territorial integrity of French Indo-China and the sovereign rights of France over all parts of the Indo-Chinese union."

British authorities in Shanghai said they would protest if Thailand were forced to grant special privileges to any third power—obviously a reference to Japan—and they scoffed at Tokyo broadcasts that British forces in northern Malaya were an active threat to the Thais.

Informed Shanghai headquarters were unable to confirm reports that Japan had served demands on Thailand, but observers recalled that Tokyo made similar charges of outside "threats" just before making demands for bases in southern Indo-China.

WASHINGTON ON ALERT

In Washington, the State Department silently followed the course of events, and White House supporters in the Senate urged that the administration hold unswervingly to its Far East policy.

Senator Claude Pepper (Dem.-Fla.), declared bluntly that "now is the time to let Tokyo know whether we mean business. Tokyo, unhappily, knows no language except force."

Germans Must Unlearn What Hitler and Others Have Taught Them For 100 Years—Eden

London, July 29—(CP)—Foreign Secretary Eden, again rejecting any thought of peace with Hitler, today looked forward to a day when tasks of reconstruction will confront Europe and said Britain hoped for United States aid then, as now, "in keeping, through the generations, the peace we shall have won."

Addressing a Foreign Press Association luncheon, Mr. Eden warned the world that although Hitler's time-table in Russia is badly off schedule, a "peace blitz" will soon be offered the world.

The proposals, he said, "will promise many things to many people, perhaps even liberation to some of the occupied countries, maybe restoration of France to her place as a great power, recognition—indeed perhaps guarantees—of the British Empire . . . Germany, we shall be told, will be ready as a good neighbor and a good European to co-operate in the restoration of trade."

But, he declared, Hitler's peace terms would mean "every nation would have to remain at its war stations."

Hitler's Enmity Less Dangerous

"Such an offer in itself should suffice to warn us, for few indeed are the nations that have survived a Hitler guarantee of their integrity. His enmity is less dangerous than his friendship."

Although he said Britain and her Allies do not propose after winning the war "to cause Germany or any other country to collapse economically," he declared that "in the military sphere it is our bounden duty to ensure that Germany is not again in another 20 years in a position to plunge the world into the misery and horror of total war."

It also will be the duty of the Allies "to start at once upon the fashioning of the world in such shape that the causes of rivalry and hatred will be gradually removed and, we pray, eventually eradicated.

Britain Not Interested in Any Hitler Terms

Mr. Eden declared that "we are not interested in any peace terms that Hitler and his government may put forward" and that "Four great communities are moving even closer today in their determination to withstand the common menace of Hitler and of any who work for him."

Duke of Kent is Welcomed On Arrival in Ottawa

Younger Brother of King George Will Inspect Air Training Establishment in Canada

VISIT MANY CENTRES

Ottawa, July 29 —(CP)— Greeted only by high government officials, the Duke of Kent arrived in Ottawa early today and went to bed at Government House, tired after a quick overnight flight from Britain for a six weeks tour of Canadian air establishments.

The King's brother, who is an air commodore on the staff of the Inspector General of the Royal Air Force, was greeted at Montreal where he first landed by Air Vice Marshal L. S. Breadner, chief of staff of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

His arrival was unnoticed by the general public both at Montreal where he landed at about 7.30 a.m. and at Ottawa which he reached an hour and a half later.

Official Welcome

Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Rt. Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, British High Commissioner in Canada, were also at the airport to give the Duke a warm welcome.

The Duke and his party had breakfast at St. Hubert Airport, near Montreal, then transferred to two service planes of the Royal Canadian Air Force which flew them to Ottawa.

In the first plane was the Duke, Group Captain Sir Louis Greig, his aide, Air Vice Marshal Breadner, and Air Commodore H. Edwards, member of the Canadian Air Council.

The second plane carried Flight Lieut. L. J. Ferguson, an aide to the Duke, J. A. Lowther, his private secretary, and the Duke's valet. All except Mr. Lowther and the valet were in air force service uniform.

Dr. E. H. Coleman, Under Secretary of State, and W. H. Measures, Procotol Chief of the External Affairs Department, Wing Commander H. M. Groves and Wing Commander Lawrence Wray, R.C.A.F., were among the official party at the Ottawa airport.

Greetings Brief

Neither press nor public were admitted to the field. An official report said the greetings were brief. After the formal handshakings the Duke entered the Governor General's car which was escorted to Government House by a small police party on motorcycles.

34 AXIS PLANES ARE DESTROYED BY RAF IN SICILY

Airdromes at Catania, Syracuse, Marsala and Borizzo—Attacked

NO BRITISH LOSSES

Cairo, Egypt, July 29 (AP)—Thirty-four Axis planes were destroyed in widespread attacks on Sicilian airdromes yesterday, said a Royal Air Force communique today.

Many other machines were damaged and a number of casualties caused among personnel at the airports attacked. No British losses were reported.

Airports bombed were at Catania, Syracuse, Marsala and Borizzo near Trapani. In addition Bengasi was raided again.

Knox Testified Captain Dropped 3 Depth Bombs

Secretary of Navy States Captain of U.S. Destroyer Off Greenland Coast Thought He Was in Danger of Submarine Attack

Washington, July 29 —(AP)— A Senate Naval Committee report, released today, quoted Navy Secretary Frank Knox as testifying that the captain of a United States destroyer dropped three depth bombs off the coast of Greenland when he believed he was in possible danger of attack from a submarine.

Knox's testimony was continued in a report by the committee which recommended that no further investigation be made of newspaper reports of "shooting" by United States naval units in the Atlantic and convoying of British merchantmen.

"One United States destroyer operating off Greenland heard the S.O.S. of a steamer and proceeded to the location and picked up 60 of the survivors of the steamer," Knox was quoted as saying.

"While engagd in this act of mercy, the operator of the listening equipment reported to the captain that he thought he heard a submerged submarine.

"The Captain immediately turned toward the direction indicated and dropped three depth charges. In doing this he very prudently exercised the right of self-preservation, for had there been a submarine there, his destroyer might had been sunk.

"There was no other evidence that a submarine was there and it is quite possible no submarine was there. The listening-equipment echo might have been received from a whale or a large fish, or a cold current, instead of a submarine—something which is frequently experienced.

"Now, none of them knew whether there was a sub there or not, but the man in command did what any man would do who was on the verge of an attack by a submarine. He would do it in self-defence."

Urges Conscription Men, Women, Material For Service Anywhere

Poland and Russia Reach Pact 'On Honorable Conditions'

London, July 29 (CP)—Gen. Wladislaw Sikorski, Polish Prime Minister, announced today that his government had reached an agreement with the Russian government "On honorable conditions."

The Polish leader made his announcement at a luncheon of the Foreign Press Association, where Foreign Secretary Eden also spoke.

Gen. Sikorski has been negotiating with Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky for an agreement permitting resumption of Polish-Russian diplomatic relations and the freeing of some 200,000 Polish war prisoners now in Russia. These, it is contemplated, would be formed into a Polish Legion to fight against Germany.

Britain's Forces 'At Concert Pitch By September 1st'

Churchill Opposes Demand for Appointment of Minister of Production

TELLS OF INDUSTRY

London, July 29—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill warned Britain today of the possibility of a German invasion attempt in September, rejected demands for appointment of a Minister of War Production and spoke "with considerable regret" of the severance of diplomatic relations with Nazi-associated Finland.

"The invasion season is at hand," he said. "All armed forces have been warned to be at concert pitch by Sept. 1 and to maintain the utmost vigilance."

Heartened by Russia and U.S.

The Prime Minister cautioned the nation to "be on guard equally against pessimism and optimism," but said the British people should be heartened by "the magnificent strength and courage of Russia and by the attitude of the United States which, he said, "is advancing in rising wrath and conviction to the very verge of war."

He added that "it is madness to suppose that Russia or the United States is going to win the war for us."

Mr. Churchill declared that Parliamentary and Press demands for a co-ordinator or minister of production would be rejected, and he deplored careless criticism of British industries for its effect abroad, particularly in the United States and Australia.

"In the United States," he said, "where there is a vigorous campaign against the policy pursued by the President, I fear that harm has been done and it cannot be easily overtaken or healed."

The Foreign Office announced that Finland had broken relations with Britain, which 17 months ago sent her cash and war materials for her 1939-40 fight with Soviet Russia.

Mr. Churchill did not say whether Finland would be regarded formally as a German ally in her new war against the Red Army.

The Prime Minister answered demands that he appoint a Minister of Production with a blunt challenge to the House to take a vote on the question.

Total War Organization

Replying to a member's statement that Britain was not striving at her capacity, he said: "We are not a totalitarian state but we are steadily, and I believe as fast as possible, working ourselves into a total war organization."

FEW LONDONERS NOW USE TUBES AS RAID SHELTERS

Daily Express Estimates 20,000 Slept on Subway Platforms on Sunday

NAZIS TEST DEFENCES

London, July 29—With Monday morning's air raid fresh in their minds, thousands of Londoners passed last night in subways, shelters and basements, but German bombs fell only at three points in East Anglia, causing a few injuries and slight damage.

The Daily Express [illegible] editorial said the Germans just were testing London defenses in the raid Monday.

Air-raid wardens estimated about 20,000 persons slept on London subway platforms Sunday night while at least 100,000 were in the tubes when raids were frequent.

The Sunday night crowd represented "regulars," authorities said. They have been going underground every night now for a year because they don't want to lose their places and they like company, too, it was said:

The Express also said editorially that when the Germans understand that President Roosevelt meant it when he said he would "throw all he could command against this Nazi evil," then "they will see that bombing of London was in fact the Lusitania incident of this war."

AIM TO PLACE AIR PLAN UPON CONTRACT BASIS

Plans Are to Improve Publicity Given Feats of Individual Canadian Airmen Says Air Minister

GROUPING CANADIANS

Ottawa, July 29 (CP)—Shortly after Air Minister Power leaves hospital following treatment for quinsy, he will face the major task of conducting negotiations for Canada looking toward extension of the British Commonwealth Air Training agreement beyond its present limit of April, 1943.

Major Power disclosed yesterday that the negotiations are to be initiated soon by the United Kingdom, senior partner in the present three-year agreement between Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

He told his press conference that there was no immediate intention to enlarge the training facilities being established in Canada. Many more personnel were being turned out, he said, than was anticipated when the agreement was first reached.

New Accounting System

But there would be a new accounting system between the units of the Commonwealth participating in the plan. It would be the aim to put the plan on a contract basis. Canada would supply the training at so much per man, whereas under the existing agreement one country might be supplying machines and other contributions in kind while another contributed money.

Major Power announced the percentage of Canadian-trained air gunners and wireless operators receiving commissions will be increased. The percentage of wireless men now getting commissions is two per cent in Canada and two

FALL GRAIN YIELD GOOD ON FOXBORO FARM OF C. WILSON

Pre-season harvest indications that the yield of fall grains would be much greater than that of spring-sown crops has been substantiated with the results of threshing operations begun last week. In some cases the yield of wheat compares favourably with that of the normal season as was indicated at the farm of Mr. Clifford Wilson of Foxboro, when 275 bushels of fall wheat were threshed from a seven-acre field.

OFFICER PAYS FIRST VISIT TO PARENTS IN TWENTY YEARS

When the stalwart officer dressed in the khaki of the Veteran Guards of Canada, knocked at the door of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cole in Deseronto on Saturday, the elderly couple stared in surprise for a moment, then surprise gave way to joy. The soldier was none other than their son, Lieutenant J. E. Cole, whom they had not seen in twenty years.

Lieut. Cole saw distinguished and variable service in the last Great War. He enlisted in the 155th Canadian Infantry Battalion here, later transferring to the 42nd Battalion Black Watch. Later he joined the Royal Flying Corps and saw much service with the air arm.

Lieut. Cole has two brothers in the fighting services, LAC. Charles Cole with the Royal Canadian Air Force, Trenton and Bruce, with the Royal Canadian Navy.

He punctuated his brief visit to his parents with renewing acquaintances among the veterans and former friends of two decades ago.

GETS 5-LB. BASS

According to Jack Darlington, who with Mrs. Darlington is spending a vacation there, a fisherman caught one of the finny beauties that tipped the scales at five pounds.

"The bass was that long," grinned Jack, using the familiar fisherman's measuring gesture, "and 'that' big around It was the biggest bass I ever saw."

GAS RESTRICTIONS ANNOY U.S. TOURIST

Out in Peterborough an American tourist threatened to break and enter a gasoline service station on Sunday if he was not provided with sufficient gasoline to complete his trip to Papineau Lake. The tourist found himself short of gasoline on the first Sunday the new Canadian gasoline restriction laws were in effect. The breakin threat was not taken too seriously by the Peterborough police, who merely informed the Ohio native they were sorry for his plight, but could do nothing about it as the gasoline restriction laws did not make provisions for American tourists. The man, who was a native of Akron, Ohio, delivered a few not-too-well chosen words relieving his feelings, but nevertheless remained in Peterborough until seven o'clock on Monday morning.

Rain and Wind Storm Causes Damage Locally

Sweeping out of the northeast with startling suddenness and driving before a stiff wind which assumed almost gale proportions, a sharp electric storm, accompanied by a veritable deluge of rain visited Belleville shortly after four o'clock on Monday afternoon, causing damage throughout the southern part of Hastings County.

Mr. Simm McCrea of Huntingdon township had two milch cows killed while in the pasture field on his farm, the cows being struck by lightning, while two silos, one owned by Mr. Fred Moon, 2nd concession of Sidney and another owned by Mr. E. Hubble of Centenary were blown over by the wind. In the latter case the silo was bowled over atop a litter carrier track, the weight of the silo pulling a beam from the barn and tearing out numerous boards.

The deluge of rain which accompanied the storm was welcomed by district residents, however, it serving to relieve the humidity which was exceeding distressing throughout the day. The temperature dropped as much as twenty degrees in as many minutes, while the moisture will be of material benefit to pastures and all late crops.

Tweed Struck Twice By Freak Storms; Some Damage Caused

Tweed, (Special)— Twice within the past two days, Tweed has been struck by freak storms. On Sunday afternoon about four-thirty the first storm accompanied by thunder and lightning, hail and rain descended with almost cyclonic fury. The duration of the storm was almost as striking as its ferocity as it lasted only a few minutes.

The full force of the storm was felt at Sugar Island; the shore was pounded by high waves, to be followed by brilliant sunshine and a peaceful lake with scarcely a ripple on its calm surface.

On Monday afternoon, at the same hour a storm almost identical in character to that of the preceding day again descended upon the village. Considerable damage was done during this second storm. Trees were blown down in different parts of Tweed, one falling across the Hydro wires near Mr. S. B. Rollins' residence, causing a power interruption of considerable duration. A large maple standing between two frame dwellings near Tweed Steel Works, narrowly missed striking both houses as it fell, broken off by the terrific wind.

Trenton and District

Trenton, July 29—The old Empire Food factory on the shore of the Bay of Quinte will again be opened this year for the remainder of the canning season under new ownership. The Stokley, VanCamp Co., Ltd., recently purchased the factory and expect to be operating by the middle of August.

The factory is one of the largest canning factories in the Dominion of Canada and is situated on a beautiful location along the bay shore. Corn, pumpkin, pork and beans and other vegetables will be canned.

It is expected that approximately 160 men and 85 women will be employed by the factory as soon as it opens.

Trenton's police station is being given a new coat of paint. The station located in the northern end of the Market Building will be completely redecorated during the next few days.

Police Court will not be held this afternoon but will be held on Saturday morning, in order that Magistrate J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook, can make arrangements to preside, during Magistrate E. J. Butler's absence.

The Trenton softball league moves into its final stage next week with the teams battling for the first three positions in order to participate in the finals. The Airforce is leading the league with a two-game margin followed by the Continental Can and the Century Grahams, running closely. A.R.D. are in fourth place with the Batas in fifth place.

Mrs. William Allison Celebrates Her 102nd Birthday on Saturday; Thinks Modern Life is "Too Easy"

Mrs. William Allison, Prince Edward County's grand old lady, will celebrate her 102nd birthday on Saturday, August 2. She has resided in Prince Edward nearly all her life, and is now staying with a son, Herbert, in Trenton. She is in failing health and only rises for a few hours a day. She is mentally alert and fairly active and chats agreeably to friends and neighbors who visit her.

Five sons, Herbert, Trenton; Robert of Belleville; Joseph, Rednersville; Harry and William of Carrying Place and one daughter, Mrs. Hannah Russell, Rednersville and a large number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren will pay tribute to her on Saturday.

Mrs. Allison has maintained a constant touch with world events and is deeply interested in the war. Interviewed at her 101st birthday she stoutly maintained that Hitler can never defeat the British people because the English are too stubborn and such wonderful fighters. "Their influence," she said, "has dominated the world for centuries and it will continue to do so after the war." She has absolute confidence and decries the success of an invading Hun army.

Likes to Watch Planes

Airplanes have a strange fascination for Mrs. Allison. She used to sit at a window in her son's home in Trenton and watch the planes of the Royal Canadian Air Force from the nearby station, soar overhead. But that is as far as it goes. She has no desire to ride in one. "No," she smiled, on that occasion, "I don't think I want to go in the air. Such machines are not made for old ladies like me. They are better adapted to the swift life of today.

And the modern world does move swiftly in comparison to that of her girlhood, she thought. Moderns are fortunate in having such inventions as radios, automobiles, planes and such things, but the reaction is that modern generations are "soft."

Thinks Life Today Too Easy

Work, hard work, and plenty of it, is a splendid recipe for a ripe old age, but modern living standards will produce few, if any, centenarians. "Living, nowadays, is too easy," she smiled.

"When I was a girl," she smiled at newspapermen on the occasion of the interview, "womenfolk thought nothing of going into the fields to pitch hay and grain, or into the woods to fell trees. They worked from dawn to dusk and thought nothing of it. Ask the modern girl or woman to do it and they would faint at the prospect"

Mrs. Allison was born at Cold Springs, near Cobourg, on August 2nd, 1839, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Dale. She recalls with remarkable clarity the events of decades ago, especially visits of royalty. Her father came to America from England, settling on the Maine coast and moving to Canada following the American revolution.

Six Alexander Seton, officer commanding at the Picton R.C.A.F. base, was supposed to have been the guest speaker of the evening, but owing to unforeseen circumstances was unable to be present, President Gardiner Duff revealed after receiving a telegram expressing the speaker's regrets.

In the various contests held the winners were as follows: — Quiz, Mrs. E. LaBarr, Miss Jean Dickens, Miss Peggly Clarke, C. B. Colling and Orliff Lloyd. Mrs. Violet Doig and Miss Mabel Peacock were the winners in guessing the name of "Miss Kinsmen" of the evening, whom President Duff named as Mrs. Max Walters. Lucky card draw A. R. "Toots" Hotway.

During the supper Kin Jeff Marvell proposed the toast to the lady guests, while Kin C. B. Colling acted as sergeant-at-arms and replenished the club's coffers with extensive fines, as Kin Don Roe kept the gathering in a merry mood as songleader. Those assisting in the entertainment were James Elliott, trumpet, Kin Phil Huddlestone, piano and Kin Don Roe with several selected vocals. A novel idea in the distribution of prizes was introduced when the various winners had to select their own gift from the large number of packages, which were wrapped in order to disguise that identity of the article.

The committee in charge of the Kinsman Club ladies' night was composed of Kin Harry Rollins and Kin Buster LaBarr.

Insufficient Addresses On Mail to Troops Cause Disappointment

Stressing the importance of correctly addressing mail intended for member of the armed forces either in Canada or overseas, Hon. William P. Mulock K.C., M.P., Postmaster General, states in a circular letter that during the month of June alone 18,259 pieces of mail passed through the directory section, all of which had insufficient or incorrect addresses.

While it was pointed out that sometimes the soldier himself may be at fault in failing to notify his correspondents of the particulars of his present address, in a great number of cases the error is the result of the omission of important details by the correspondent. Observation of a few simple rules will spare hundreds of troops overseas the anxiety and disappointment caused when their mail is delayed. Mail for overesas should be addressed as follows:

Regimental number, rank and name, Name and details of unit (i.e. Company, Section, Squadron, Battery, Holding Unit etc.), Name of Regiment or Branch of the Service, Canadian Army Overseas.

Mail for delivery in Canada should be addressed with the usual complete particulars, but with the exception that the words 'Canadian Army Overseas", must be omitted and instead the name of the place where the soldier's unit is stationed should be given.

COUPONS TO MEAN BETTER CLOTHES

Savile Row Thinks Men Will Sacrifice Quantity for Quality

London, July 29 (CP)—Fashionable Savile Row, where England's men of property, wealth and title, buy their clothes, is far from depressed by the introduction of clothes rationing, believing that if a man has to reduce the number of his suits he'll choose the best quality cloth for those he buys.

Belief that men's clothes will become shabbier and shinier because of rationing is not held along the "Row". Instead, say the tailors, the British will be wearing finer clothes than they've worn before, hoping they'll last longer, thus saving precious coupons.

"When the announcement of rationing was made to us, we were told a battle-stained dress gave honor to the soldier and the civilian must be educated to become proud of being shabby," said the editor of a tailor's publication.

He doesn't hold with this idea, however, thinking it unlikely that rationing will supress the strain of vanity in men.

"Under a shiny coat," he said, "with greasy collar, frayed sleeves and spotted and stained with food or drink, pride gets a jolt and is likely to suffer a fall on meeting the stare undisguished in meaning, of a friend.

"Today's cut in men's clothes is slick. The only alternative I see possible is a run on corduroy (demanding fewer coupons than any other cloth), which is durable and hard wearing material."

Many Londoners believe that now that suits are to be scarcer, the old fashionable clothes—morning coat and striped trousers—brought from the cupboard only for weddings or important gatherings, may find a place in the wardrobe again.

One thing, however, is certain. The well-dressed Englishman will take more care than ever to keep his clothes in good condition and if the tailor becomes poor for want of customers he can turn for aid to his much maligned cousin—the valet serviceman whose business seems sure to prosper.

Scouts Do Bit In A. R. P. Work

Leeds, England, July 29 — (CP) Through the Ministry of Home Security, vast numbers of British boy scouts are being trained to assemble Morrison air raid shelters.

The scouts, anxious to do their "bit" in a practical way, asked for a specific job and as a result specimen shelters are being sent to troops of scouts for practice training.

When they are able to erect them with professional skill the boys notify local authorities of their willingness and ability to help. They are then called out to put up shelters for invalids and others who cannot do the job themselves. Some of them are also serving as instructors to small groups of the civilian population.

CARE FOR TOTS IN WAR NURSERY

Working Mothers Leave Children in 'Grand Hotel' at Nominal Fee

London, July 29 — (CP) — It costs less than 25 cents a day to stop at the "Children's Grand Hotel" — London's first war emergency nursery — in Tottenham, a northern suburb of the capital.

Most of the children are left in the early morning by mothers on their way to factories or other war work. They stay all day until the mothers pick them up on the way home. Each infant has its own small chair, cot, towel-hook and tooth-mug.

There are three big nursery rooms and a garden with sandpit and paddling pool where the children play. Outer walls of each of the three rooms are of glass and on sunny days they are all thrown open.

In fine, warm weather the guests romp about wearing only blue cotton knickers. Most of the morning is devoted to games, then comes lunch and a sleep, more games, tea and further play until they are collected and taken home.

"Every child has at least a pint of milk a day, plenty of good gravies and green vegetables, as well as cereals, bread and butter and honey," said the matron, Miss V. W. Moss.

"It's sometimes difficult to give the children a well-balanced diet," she said, "but we manage better here than the mothers could in their own homes."

Parents pay only what they can afford — usually about one shilling daily (less than 25 cents). The government makes up the difference — about two shillings (45 cents) daily.

Mascot is Scapegoat

Demon Rum Brings About Downfall of Once-Respected Army Goat

Sylney, Australia, July 29—(CP)—Because he took to beer, Barney, a white Angora goat and the most photographed mascot in the fighting forces, has been discharged from the army. For years he had been mascot of a garrison battalion.

Barney brought disgrace upon himself when he undertook a tour of North Sydney hotels with a man. After several beers, Barney dashed from the hotel and climbed a shelf in a confectionary shop. He swept bottles of candies from the shelf, then bolted into a vegetable market, where he feasted on tomatoes. He was "arrested," taken to a police station and locked up for three days.

When members of the garrison located him, they were presented with a bill for $30.00 damages.

He has now been given to a man who has undertaken to give him suitable food.

Gives to Defence Aluminum Violin Used in Practice

New York, July 29 (AP)— Jascha Heifetz, concert artist, gave an aluminum practice violin to national defence Monday.

Accepting the $100 metal fiddle—Heifetz says that when it needs repairing he calls in a plumber to fix it—Mayor La Guardia described the gift as the "most precious one" received by the government in its aluminum collection campaign.

"I am going to auction this violin off or sell it," the Mayor said, "and buy that much aluminum. Any violin that Heifetz has played on will not be destroyed."

Heifetz still has two violins left—his Stradivarius and Guarnerius, valued at $150,000.

New Zealanders Win Many Honors

Auckland, N. Z., July 29 — (CP) —Up to the middle of June New Zealand airmen had won 100 awards while serving with the Royal Air Force since the outbreak of war.

"These men came from farms, offices, factories, and workshops imbued with the spirit of service and they proved ideal types for training," said the Minister of Defence, F. Jones, in making this announcement. "The introduction of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan has also enabled more New Zealanders to fit themselves in readiness to take their places alongside their brothers further afield."

An analysis of the awards shows that 75 D. F. C.'s, three bars to the D. F. C., seven D.F.M.'s and 10 A.F.C.'s have been won, in addition to one D.S.O., three George Medals and one Croix de Guerre.

Specialist Completes Study of World's Youngest Mother

New York, July 29 (AP)— Mrs. Kosak, specialist in child education at Columbia University has returned from South America where she made a study of the world's youngest mother, Lina Medina, Peruvian Indian who gave birth to a son at the age of five years.

Mrs. Kosak gave a series of intelligence tests to the young mother and said that on the basis of this study she has no doubt that he child's age was correctly given.

Lina, she said, is above normal in intelligence and the baby, now two years old, is prefectly normal and physically better developed than the average Mestiza, or Spanish Indian child.

"She thinks of the child as a baby brother and so does the rest of her family," Mrs. Kosak said. "To them the child is just another baby."

Evacuees Become Less Vociferous

High Wycombe, England (CP) — London's "Dead End Kids" evacuated when heavy raids started last September, are "going straight."

They're not "angels," but they don't resemble the roughnecks who "beat up" this peaceful town when they first arrived; plundering houses and stores, said a Daily Mail reporter who visited the reception centre in this Buckinghamshire town.

An experiment in play therapy, applied by Dr. Margaret Posthuma, London psychologist who learned to deal with "Dead End Kids" when she trained in New York, "cured" the children.

"The boys were put on parade for an hour every week," the reporter said. "She talked to them, watched them play, and then applied what she called 'play therapy'. She gave them toys and made her deductions. She found all they needed was firm and sensible handling, ordinary kindness and love many have never known.

"Some of them fought against her. One of them, the wildest and toughest of the lot is still fighting. He is the terror of the town, the undisputed tough guy, but the officials hope that even he will soon quieten down."

China Confident Of Beating Japan

Chungking, China, July 29 (AP)—Determination to make current hostilities "the war to end all wars" was urged by H. H. Kung, Vice Premier and Finance Minister, in a broadcast to the United States from this Chinese capital today.

Kung reaffirmed confidence in China's ultimate victory over Japan and said Chinese were glad "America has now recognized the fact China is her first line of defence in the Pacific."

"We have a common cause," he said, "and a common enemy."

Many persons doubted the authenticity of the Tanka Memorial, he said, but history has borne it out, word for word.

(The Chinese for the past 12 years have insisted on the authenticity of a document—denied by the Japanese—purporting to be a memorial to Emperor Hirohito by Baron Giichi Tanaka, Premier 1927-1929, outlining a program of conquest, first of China, then all Asia, then world supremacy.)

CANADA

CANADA'S WARTIME WAGES POLICY PROTECTS BOTH EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYEES

Higher wages which buy less and less, breed debt and discouragement. Likewise business that expands on inflated dollars collapses like a pricked balloon.

It is in the interests of all citizens that inflation in Canada be checked and for that reason the Government is endeavouring to control price increases, rents, and profits.

Order in Council No. 7440 was designed to assist in effecting this control. It provides for a ceiling on wages and for a cost of living bonus to be paid in addition to basic wages. This bonus rises and falls at the rate of 25 cents per week for every percentage point of rise and fall in the cost of living index, except in the case of juveniles and female workers, receiving less than fifty cents an hour for whom the bonus is one per cent of their basic wage rate.

Why WORKERS Should Support P. C. 7440

Order in Council 7440 puts a ceiling on basic wage rates at a high point. This ceiling protects you against the loss of real income caused by a runaway race between wages and prices.

Corresponding controls on prices of the necessaries of life are already being exercised by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, which is striving also to maintain the supply of such necessaries in reasonably normal volume.

Canadian workers today have more actual buying power than ever before. Do not be tempted to sacrifice this solid position for the mirage of wartime wage increases—they lead only to debt and discouragement because prices will inevitably keep ahead of wages.

Order 7440 checks this race between wages and prices and by putting the bonus on a flat rate basis favours the lower paid workers.

All workers should support Order 7440. Get a copy of the order and study it. Discuss it with your employer and with your fellow workers.

Why EMPLOYERS Should Support P. C. 7440

When wages reach the ceiling established by the order then no more increases in basic wage rates can be granted. This ends the "bidding-up" process that is certain to result in an inflationary spiral.

Wars cannot be fought without some rise in the prices of the basic necessaries of life. The Wartime Prices and Trade Board is endeavouring to keep these increases within bounds to prevent unjustifiable increases in the cost of the family budget.

The cost of living bonus provided for in P. C. 7440 is designed to take care of such price rises as cannot be avoided.

While the order requires wage adjustments in certain instances, it is believed that it will hold inflation within much narrower bounds than those of the last war.

The order helps to preserve the high morale of workers because they know that all are being treated equally. This removes a cause of labour friction.

This is the fairest possible plan for the worker, the employer and the taxpayer that has yet been devised.

Workers and employers are both called upon in the interests of Canada's war effort to observe the Order in both the spirit and the letter. This observance will benefit all Canadians.

A RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE

German armies on the Russian front are proceeding according to plan. So runs the now threadbare report of the German High Command, while the Russians are able to furnish illuminating pictures of the war, something the unimaginative Huns have not been able to do.

Now the German propaganda service is used to making lies and excuses and it says, the slowness of the Germans is just what was necessary and not too much. It remarks that territorial gains would be a disadvantage at the present stage of fighting. But the world has believed from the German High Command that the war against Russia was in but one stage. It even explains that it would be no use to take Moscow as long as the Red army fighting power remains.

But no one ever thought of Germany not going ahead if she had a chance to take Moscow, or make territorial gains. She has so far taken what she could as soon as she could.

Fighting against Russia, however, Germany has found lightning or blitz warfare unsuited to so vast a country. Germany has suffered already in this respect as her sacrifice of tanks, troops and equipment has shown. The "parched earth" policy of Russia is not one calculated to satisfy the ponderous war machine of Germany which needs supplies of oil and food relentlessly. Hitler's attempt to plough through Russia lacks even the impressiveness of Napoleon's invasion. He is resisted by a Russia more powerful than ever in her history and yet a Russia that can afford to depend on her oldtime type of warfare.

Now Russia is showing signs of an offensive against the blitzing Huns as reports from several sectors indicate. Thrusts by the Russians seem in line with the Russian policy.

RIVERS AND CIVILIZATION

The record of the world's great rivers represents the archives of the ages, says the Hobart Mercury quoted by the Port of London Authority Monthly. Cyrus, King of Persia, it is said lost his temper with the Tigris and turned it out of its channel for drowning one of his sacred horses. Rivers and water transportation have played a great part in history. The water route is the cheaper and more easy and was the way that earlier civilization took. In Canada the history of exploration, the search for the Northwest Passage, the work of the voyageurs on the rivers of this country agree with this statement.

Rudyard Kipling is quoted in his Song of the Thames as showing how the story of that river epitomizes the spacious romance of English story. The Thames is made to say:

> "I remember the bat-winged lizard birds,
> The Age of Ice and the mammoth herds,
> And the giant tigers that stalked them down
> Through Regent's Park into Camden Town;
> And I remember like yesterday
> The earliest cockney who came my way."

It is the same story of the Nile, the Euphrates, the Indus, the Volga, the Danube, the Seine and the Tibre.

Macaulay ponders at the veneration with which men cherish the Ganges, the Jordan, the Nile, the Tiber, wondering if rivers have not in a greater degree than any other inanimate objects the appearance of animation and something resembling character. "They are sometimes slow and dark-moving; sometimes fierce and impetuous; sometimes bright, dancing and almost flippant."

In the early settlement of the oldest parts of Canada civilization followed the rivers, lakes and bays, for they were the highways of commerce in a virgin land. Such is the St. Lawrence. In the older countries, too, rivers continue to retain the affection of the people even when modern means of transportation has arrived.

Even today the rivers bear their great share of the burden of transportation.

True liberty consists in the privilege of enjoying our own rights, not in the destruction of the rights of others.—Pinchard.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

INDOMITABLE COURAGE

A tale of superb courage an unflinching sacrifice which failed to quench her gallant British spirit, is told by Group Captain C. D. Keith, officer commanding the R.A.F. station at Picton, of an English mother who has lost practically all in this war and the last one.

Her son, an air-captain who was under Group Captain Keith's command in England, was killed while commanding a bomber flying over enemy territory. In his effects was found one of the most beautifully written letters ever penned by one of Britain's fighting sons. Group Captain Keith was so impressed by its contents that he asked the mother's permission to have it published. This was granted and the missive has appeared in many periodicals and papers.

But to get back to the mother. Her son was born just after the great war. And her marriage proved a failure. Her husband turned to drink and a happy marital life was ruined. In this war she has lost her only son. She has been bombed out of two homes, and when seen last by Group Captain Keith, she said simply, "I have lost everything."

Eyes tear-dimmed, but through the tears shining the light of an unquenchable British spirit she said, "But I am going to see this war through. We cannot be defeated."

Of such are the women of Britain.

WHY NOT BELLEVILLE GIRLS?

This desk has had several queries from young women of this city as to the possibility of enlisting in one of the auxiliary forces being mooted for the Dominion.

Toronto, Kingston, and many other Ontario centres have their companies of auxiliaries — trim uniformed young women who are anxious and willing to serve their country in capacities such as ambulance drivers, mechanics, etc.

Belleville's young women are just as patriotic as those in any part of the Dominion, but lack of local organization has kept them in the background. News despatches recently stated that some 1,500 women would be required for the new auxiliary services being raised in Canada. From Picton comes word that members of the W.A.A.F. (Womens' Auxiliary Air Force) will arrive there for instructional duties.

True, women's organizotions in other centres have been a purely local character, with the members supplying their own uniforms and supplies. But now that mobilization is practically assured, it seems a shame that the young women of this city should be left in the background through lack of local organization or support.

Some time ago thirty of these young women took a course in motor mechanics. They passed examinations with flying colors and proved without a doubt that Belleville's beauty and brains go hand in hand. A number of these women would have continued, had the matter not dropped with the end of the course. It is to be hoped that when mobilization of Canada's woman-power goes into effect, the young women of this city will get the opportunity to do their bit and enlist in some auxiliary corps.

"ALL THIS?

"What is this " asked the sweet young thing, tapping the windshield. "The windshield," he replied.

"And is this the brake?" she smiled, touching it with a dainty hand. "It is," he replied grimly.

"And is this the accelerator?" she asked, jamming her foot down hard as a transport appeared around the corner. "No doubt," he answered through set teeth.

"And what is this?" she asked.

"This is heaven," he whispered in a soft celestial voice, and, picking up his harp, he flew away.

Playing Golf Where Wild Animals Roam

Your reporter has been roaming along woodland paths and meeting people who have Summer cottages beside the lake. The war isn't real here, but the birds and beasts are here and very real and comic, and if anyone told me that the old raccoon also was here by the light of the moon combing his auburn hair, I wouldn't doubt it. Stranger things than that occur every day at Waskesiu Lake.

This is he place where, honest-to-goodness, whiskey jacks (Canada jays if you insist) swoop down from out of the tree and steal fried eggs from off your plate. You need to be dining out of doors for that to happen, but nearly everyone eats in the open when weather permits, and it happens.

A visitor who said he wouldn't believe it even if it did happen lost his luncheon eggs to the eager beak of a swooping whiskey jack. And his hostess who is quick-on-the-trigger, has a protographic record of the event.

* * *

This is also the place where gay and sportive foxes steal your golf balls off the greens in the midst of your game right in front of your face. What do they do with the golf balls? Oh they just run away with them between their teeth and hide them in the bush.

And squirrels steal the golf balls, too, and hide them in their nests. Two small boys recently retrieved 37 goft balls from squirrel nests. Maybe the squirrels thought the balls were nuts hard to crack .... something on which to exercise their little teeth during the long somnolent Winter months. I don't really know. The animals are like that up here.

Mrs. J. E. Mitchell, a Prince Albert woman, is not the fidgety type, but she confessed to me she did feel slightly nervous the other day on the golf course when she heard a growl behind her and turned around to discover she was being followed by two bears. Perhaps the growl was only in fun, she couldn't be sure, but the beafs were playing with one another as they ambled along. Only a couple of amiable bears no doubt, but she found herself instinctively quickening her pace, and walking very fast indeed. She really felt like running, but decided it wouldn't be dignified, besides, bears can run too . . . very fast.

* * *

Most of the golf course stories are about the frolicsome young foxes, the naughty little foxes. Most of their golf ball stealing antics occur around the 16th and 17th greens, although sometimes incredible things happen at the 18th hole. It seems the foxes wait around in the rough for golf balls to bounce into sight. Then they run out on the green, grab the ball between their bright teeth, and scamper away. Those who have been close up assert there is a mischievous gleam in the eyes of the foxes.

When the park officials first heard these wild life stories they thought they were just 19th hole yarns, but they did a little official snooping and found them to be sheer fact . . . sober natural history and a subject of scientific interest.

The moose, unfortunately, are heavy? footed in their sense of humor, and sometimes the greens are found pitted with holes dug by moose hoofs. But they keep men around to patch up the greens, and they leave the animals alone. This park belongs to the Crown and in the name of the King no hunting is permitted.

As for the bears . . . they don't steal golf balls, they just bite them, and a golf ball dented by a bear's teeth is no good for anything except a souvenir.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

The Unexplainable Sen. Wheeler

London, July 29—(By Cable)—To try to explain Senator Burton K. Wheeler to any one not American is an all but impossible task. This world-minded country, Great Britain, observes with bewilderment that, while the Battle of Moscow is being fought at Smolensk and the Japs bully concessions from ex-French Indo-China which can put them in a most important strategical position in Saigon, with war on three continents and all seven seas, and with President Roosevelt, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles all warning of the extreme gravity of the moment, Wheeler takes steps which in any other country in the world would be branded as an attempt to stir up dissatisfaction in armed forces and come under the charge of treason.

Now, I do not believe Senator Wheeler is a traitor or that he wishes anything but the best of fortune for the United States. He is only a stubborn, bitterly resentful man, provincial in outlook, abysmally ignorant of world policies and absolutely convinced that he is trying to spare the country of the terrors of war. Even the Nazis do not count upon Senator Wheeler as reliable in their councils. They merely count him useful.

* * *

The America of the future that the Nazis envisage, headed by a Government willing and eager to collaborate with the new world order, will not have a President who is a member of either major party. They want an outsider elected on a fusion ticket in this chaos of national disaster. They do not want a provincially minded man from Montana with extremely strong national sentiments, but an unnationally minded man willing to join in their conspiracy to reorganize the world in the interests of the new Nietzschean type of masterman. Above all they do not want a man who is opposed to the concentrations of the power of supertrusts, economic consolidations or dictatorships.

No, Mr. Wheeler is not their man, except, like so many others, he seems to favor them for the moment. But Mr. Wheeler, though he is an isolationist, cannot isolate even his own actions.

What Wheeler says is news to London, Tokyo, Berlin and the islands of the seas. His remarks and his actions raise questions among men and diplomats of many races and many nations. One of the questions raised is, "Does the United States have any foreign policy at all?" Others are, "Is anything the President and his Government have to say to be taken seriously?" "If a few men like Wheeler can conduct their own policies and their own indirect diplomacy, what value shall we attach to official utterances?"

So the question arises whether the United States is able to make either peace or war, or whether it can ever have consistency in a foreign policy which alone gives a nation power and prestige in the world, or whether it can be counted as an ally for making and preserving peace or for mutual and collaborative protection in time of war.

Words Help Axis

Indeed, the precise answer to Senator Wheeler's isolationism is that his very words and actions have international repercussions and he himself influences the course of events thousands of miles from Montana. The Axis quotes and enlarges upon his words, throws them hither and yon in one form or another, using them as rods with which to beat the cringing nations under its sway.

If we should say to Senator Wheeler: "Men like you are more to blame than any others that this war ever occurred," he would call it another smear. Yet Mr. Wheeler is an isolationist for peace. As for war, men of this mind have forced the American nation to throw away or leave unused the mighty power won for it here in 1918 with the sacrifice of brave Americans. He is a leading representative of the mind that thinks that peace is something negative, something that occurs out of bucolic nitwittedness, not something that is made and kept by power, and by power alone.

He is no advocate of another foreign policy than that of the President. He advocates no foreign policy at all. He is a great apologist for a vacuum. Unfortunately vacuums invite that they be filled with something, and that something that fills a vacuum in foreign policy usually is aggressive war.

War is now on our doorstep, but Mr. Wheeler thinks he can fill the vacuum by postal cards to service men. If only we can get enough sabotage in our armed forces he apparently thinks we shall certainly have peace. This is a highly gratifying thought to our enemies, whose foreign policy for America is exactly Wheeler's absence of one. Absence of one invites their intervention in America in place of our intervention elsewhere. There is always an intervention issue. The only question is of who does the interventing.

If Japan is hesitating about intervening, Wheeler encourages her to take steps. Mr. Wheeler divests himself of responsibility for his actions by affirming purity motives, but history takes little account of motives. It judges by results.

Brutus and others have been honorable men.

"Preaching's much easier," he said.
"It's easier to point the way
Than follow it from day to day.
What's right to do, I'm sure I know.
I get good counsel from the pro,
And yet in spite of all I learn
Golf's evil habits still return.

"My guide and mentor oft has said:
'Remember, do not lift your head.
Your eye upon the ball retain
Or else you'll strike at it in vain;
Swing freely, without lunge or jerk,
And let the clubhead do the work;
Relax a bit'—I know it all.
Yet still in evil ways I fall!

"How slowly towards the heights we move!
How little mortals here improve!
Though wise the text and true the word
How little after all is heard!
The sermon ends! Man would be good
And change for better if he could;
But still old blunders spoil his card!
To gain perfection is so hard!"

You'd Be Surprised!

SILKWORM OUTWITTED

The new synthetic fabric known as nylon is the greatest threat to the silk industry since the development of rayon.

Nylon naturally suggests rayon, but is quite different in source and composition.

Like rayon, the new fibre consists of a continuous, smooth thread but unlike rayon each nylon thread is a single filament instead of several twisted together.

Nylon is more elastic, stronger and more resistant to moisture than rayon.

A filament of nylon is said to be as strong as a steel filament of the same diameter.

Nylon is a product of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Company, which began mass production of the remarkable fabric in 1940.

The name is a coined word. The manufacturers asked the public to suggest a short and simple name that would be easily pronounced and remembered. From the 350 suggestions that came in nylon was chosen.

At first nylon was used almost exclusively in making hosiery, which became immediately popular among women because the fabric was strong, durable, easily washed, quickly dried and less subject to runs than many other materials.

But the possible uses of nylon are almost unlimited, and already the new plastic is being used in velvets, laces, underwear, racquet strings, fishing lines, bearings for machinery, parachutes, raincoats, umbrellas, sewing thread, bristle material for tooth and hair brushes and as a covering for the strings of violins and other musical instruments to protect the natural catgut from excessive moisture and wear.

A filament of nylon can be made as lustrous and fine as the web of a spider.

The single-filament threads can be woven into a fabric that is not only lustrous, sheer, elastic and strong, but also capable of holding colors ranging from the most sombre to the most vivid.

Uncle Sam has always been a heavy importer of Japanese silk and the sudden and successful production of nylon in the United States on a mass scale may prove to be a blow more severe to the silk industry of Nippon than that dealt some years ago by rayon.

FREE FRENCHMEN WORK TO REGAIN NATIONAL HONOR

Prof. Rene Cassin Says Vichy Clique's Crimes Must be Wiped Out; Strong France Necessary to World

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 29 — (CP) — Prof. Rene Cassin, Permanent Secretary of the Council of Defence of the French Empire, told a meeting of Free Frenchmen that a strong France is necessary to the world.

"The incomparable place she held, and which she must hold again, is shown by the void her temporary disappearance has caused," he said. "The re-birth of France is also in the interest of our other European allies, and, indeed, the same can be said of the whole world which knew the universal aspect of French genius and the contributions of faith and reason which France has brought to civilization for hundreds of years."

Free Frenchmen were fighting first and foremost for their country's honor. It had sometimes, perhaps, betrayed itself, but it had never betrayed others, he said. By every means, military and otherwise, and by every sacrifice "we must wipe out the stain made by the crimes of a clique."

The highest value of the struggle undertaken by the Free French Forces and Free France at the side of her allies was to be found on the moral plane.

Courageous Soldiers

"What have we done in the past year to liberate France?" Cassin asked. "Our soldiers have no need to examine their consciences. Their deeds speak for themselves. It is to them, indeed, that we must render an account, as well as to Frenchmen in captivity and all those who, in the face of disaster, have kept their faith in France.

"The acknowledged leader of the Free French, Gen. de Gaulle, with Admiral Muselier, Gen. Catroux, Gen. de Larminat, Gen. Legentilhomme, Gen. Petit and Gen. Eon has started the Free French Forces whose exploits on land, on sea and in the air have fired the enthusiasm of the youth of our country and won back the confidence of the world in French honor."

During the fall of 1940, Free France had acquired important territorial bases through the countries which have rallied to the cause in the Pacific, French India and in the heart of strategically important Africa. The military, economic and moral contribution of these vast regions with their 10,000,000 inhabitants was becoming more and more important.

Free Frenchmen, he said, were above all the faithful sons of their country, determined to free her and save her honor.

Stand For Right

"It is not by sharing the chains of a captive mother that her children can best prove their love," he continued, "It is by breaking her chains with the help of all the allies freely chosen by France, and with the help of all nations which have fallen victim to that same aggressor. Our opposition is the same as that of the patriots of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Holland and all other countries which have been temporarily overrun, but not subdued."

Vichy called the Free French "rebels" and "patriots without a country," Cassin concluded, "but these would-be insults are compliments in reality, and French law is on our side, not on that of the men who have compromised with the enemy."

Community Work Solves Problem

Farmers Overcome Labor Shortage by Revival of Pioneer Custom

Peep Brook, N.S., July 29 (CP) — Old fashion work "bees" popular pioneer method of getting work done when laborers were at a premium are once again solving the labor shortage problem in this part of the country.

With many farm hands having exchanged their denim for khaki, farmers here have been hard pressed to keep their fields going. Especially difficult is the task when many of them are employed the bigger part of every week in a nearby gypsum plant.

But the lore of their pioneering forefathers promises to pull them through. In the evenings, after their work in the plant, the men do not disperse to their own properties, but go in a group to one farm. There they hay, shingle the barn, weed turnips—in fact, do anything there is to do. Their wives help by serving community suppers.

Time limit for the co-operative effort is two hours an evening, and so far the idea has clicked. They feel all the crops will be harvested on time despite the labor shortage, and think their tip might be used to advantage by farmers in other parts of Canada.

Oldtimers Recall Tales of Hermit

Believe That Cave-Dweller Buried Booty in Hills; Received Money From Oklahoma

Rocky Mountain House, Alta., July 29 (CP)—Old-timers in Rocky Mountain House still believe Silas Vandermark, eccentric hermit who lived and died in the foothills west of town, had buried substantial amounts of money.

Discovery of an ancient gold watch which probably fell from the ragged pockets of the Oklahoma veteran who came here 25 years ago and was said to have never washed, shaved or worked, recalled tales of the hermit who lived in caves.

Old-timers say Vandermark had claimed he owned an oil well in Oklahoma but they could never understand why he didn't do any work. He received money regularly in letters from Oklahoma, they said, but he never spent much, only buying clothes when the ones he wore began to fall off.

Vandermark filed on a homestead but he never built himself a house. Instead he lived in one cave until it was cluttered with odds and ends and then he would move to another. No one could recall having seen the old man do as much as pick berries and he never cut himself any firewood.

Vandermark took the easy way. He would hunt for a fallen tree, haul the log to the cave, and shove one end into the fire and let it burn.

When his Oklahoma letter was due each month, Vandermark would tramp into Rocky Mountain House.

On arrival he would purchase a loaf of bread and a quantity of summer sausage and then he would wander from store to store, gnawing at his food, veterans said.

One of the old-timers' favorite stories of Vandermark recounts the time he came to town and frightened a new girl at the post office. When Vandermark walked up to the post office wicket, chewing at a loaf of bread, his face unshaven and unwashed and his hair falling to his shoulders, the girl yelled and ran from the building.

TALES OF HORROR TOLD BY SAILORS

Were Prisoners in Italian Somaliland After Capture by German Raider

Glasgow, July 29 — (CP) — Eight members of a British ship which vanished a year ago in the Indian Ocean have returned home with hair-raising tales of adventure aboard a German raider and imprisonment in an Italian prison camp.

They spent four months in cramped quarters of the raider and then were confined a month on a Yugoslav ship captured by the Nazis before being interned in Italian Somaliland where they endured severe hardships until freed by South African troops during the East African campaign.

The men were captured when their 7,700-ton ship, Kemmedine, owned by the British and Burmese Steam Navigation Company, was intercepted by the raider last July. The ship was shelled heavily and crew and passengers forced to take to the lifeboats. They were rescued by the raider which sank the Kebmedine with two torpedoes.

Capt. O. B. Redi of Glasgow said majority of the passengers — about 36 — and the crew were transferred to another ship and are believed to have been taken to Germany.

Douglas Craig, Glasgow, said life wasn't too bad on the raider, but their experiences on the Yugoslav ship were terrible. The small supply of water was rationed and the men were on the verge of starvation.

Some of the captives licked the evaporation off steam pipes, he said, and when rail fell they rushed on deck to gather rain water, which he described as "simply delicious."

William Frame, another Glasgow man, who underwent a minor operation at Mogadiscio after the captives were landed in Somaliland said conditions in the hospital were "abominable." There was practically no nursing service and sanitation and hygiene appeared to be non-existent. Anaesthetics were unobtainable and when operations were performed the patients were strapped to the operating table.

German Pilots Were Boastful

London.—(By Mail — A Spitfire squadron leader, who won the D.F.C. some time ago, was the guest of a "crack" Messerschmitt squadron before the war. "At the start of the evening they were all very charming," he said the other day. "They did the honours to an R.A.F. officer in super style. The room was beautifully furnished and the food and wines were excellent. We toasted each other during the evening, and it suddenly struck me they they were trying to get me 'tight.' That suspicion kept me sober, and gradually I saw a change come over those Lufftwaffe boys. As the drink took effect, they became more noisy and increasingly aggressive.

"Finally, one of them said to me: 'You think your Hurricanes are good don't you? Well, wait till you meet our Messerschmitts! We'll shoot you out of the sky like flies.' They were obviously spoiling for a war then. I tried to be polite and agree with them in the way one does. The next morning they took me to their aerodrome and showed me some of their tricks in the air. They were good, but not good enough for Hendon.

"Two years later we were in the thick of the Battle of Britain. First I was on Hurricanes and then Spitfires. And whenever I shot down an Me. 109 I remembered that party and wondered if the pilot had sat with me that night."

A Canadian Tells Of Feeling in France

This is the story of a Canadian who just recently escaped from German-occupied France, having held a highly responsible post in several continental countries for the last 10 years. For obvious reasons he cannot be named, but his opinions are those of an experienced and shrewd observer. He was not interned and was therefore able to get about and see things as they were.

Mr. X's great concern now is lest the Allies under-estimate the strength and skill of the enemy, particularly the enemy's position in France. The V-for-Victory campaign he fears is somewhat naive and over-optimistic. It seems to be based on the theory that the people of France spend their evenings huddled in cellars hatching plots against the Hun. But Mr. X says this is not so, nor nearly so.

From the moment the shooting stopped in May, 1940, the German set out to convince the French that they were not cannibals. Nazi troopers were ordered to behave "correctly" and they took pains to respond to the appeal to their vanity that ordered them to prove that they were more gentlemanly than he British.

For a short while the Nazi party people hung the great Swastikas in the little French villages. But the German Army quickly killed such gross tactics and set up a code of behaviour aimed with the long view winning over of French sentiment.

• • •

The fact that France declared war several hours after Britain, was used by the Nazis to prove that Britain pushed France into war with the aid of a tottering and treasonable French Government. The Nazis have fanned the French into a high hatred of the pre-war regime, have widely publicized the facts of France's state of unpreparedness and genarally gone a long way in convincing the French that they were duped. Thus the French may not be pro-German but many of them are becoming anti-British as they line up against the old order of French rules. Only a small proportion of them are said to be actively interested in any V-for-Victory campaign. The majority is sitting tight to see which side is going to win before taking either side.

Appearance of the well-equipped German Army made its impression right from the start. The Nazi High Command apparently went out of its way to present a good front: its troopers had everything, from cigarettes to cannon and in quantities that made the Franch gasp. "So the Britsh told you we were short of material, eh?" asked the Nazi soldiers of the bewildered French peasants. "Ha, it is the other way, you see?"

Then there were those squads of sun-burned huskies, stripped to the waist to participate in organized sports meets put on for the French townspeople. Were these the under-nourished Fascists they had heard about? Beside them and their natty uniforms the French soldiers looked a sorry lot.

"I feel when I talk like this that you will think I am a Fifth Colnmuist," said Mr. X. "No, I loathe them and all their works, and I know how low their works can be. But we will not beat them by simply repeating over and over that they are fiends and we are Christians. We must stop thinking that when someone sounds a whistle one day all the beaten peoples in Europe will rise and slay their oppressors. When that day comes it won't come through whistling."

• • •

The people of France, Mr. X went on, have become impressed with the masterly organization of the Nazis even though the organization in most cases works for greater oppression. Fascism has an appeal to them. It seems to have worked whereas their own loose combination of democracy and Socialism, has unquestionably failed. And the Nazis are losing no opportunity of spreading the word. French youth organizations are organized by Nazi experts and the children now chant "Vive Petain" with the satanic staccato beat of the "Seig Heil." Adult Fascist leagues are also springing up.

I asked if the shortage of food would not embitter the French against their invaders. "Why no! The Germans have spent thousands of dollars telling Frenchmen that Britain won't let the Unitel States send them food because she wants to penalize them for making peace with Germany.

"The food shortage has apparently not yet reached starvation stage but Mr. X fears that the toll from malnutrition will be high if the war is still waging two years hence. French agriculture is being worked very effectively—but much of the product finds its way to German mouths spread all over Europe! The French of course have always loved their food and the lack of it now is a major point of conversation. "In fact they talk more about missing their wines and their fats than they do about who is winning or losing. General de Gaulle is practically unknown to them and they know little of the details of the progress of the conflict."

Mr. X had also close contact with German soldiers and civilian officials. His word about them is somewhat more cheering. Nazi soldiers were confident of their occupation of England after the Battle of Britain last September. When it failed them they were appeased with promise of victory by December and Christmas in London. But now that is long past and they have their doubts about Goebbels and his crew of propagandists. The Russian development has probably staggered them considerably, Mr. X says. "If only the R.A.F. could send over Berlin one or two really colossal raids, far greater than anything yet known—I feel it would shock the whole German machine."

"The German troops are held together by fear, fear that if they do not win they'll all be murdered. They have no inner urge for victory except that failure means death. If somehow they could be convinced that the Allies will not crush them they would clamor for a negotiated peace and settle for peace and quiet in their own country.

"But every time any number of them begin thinking that way some British or Canadian politician says that compared to the peace terms after this war the Treaty of Versailles will look like child's play. And every time any Allied figure makes such a statement—even if he be but a city councillor or service club president—the Goebbel gang gets it and feeds it to all Germans as still further proof that they must stick together against all hardship and all opposition. Their morale is not as good as ours, but we'll never frighten them into submission."

Mr. X saw no signs of shortage of fuel or equipment in the German army and doesn't imagine they are in bad shape for anything. After all, they have not had to use much equipment. Their conquests have been easy. They must have counted on using tremendously greater reserves than they needed to defeat France and to that surplus they must since have added much loot. To think otherwise, he says, is dangerous.

(Timely support for this statement appeared in the paper yesterday in the statement of a British Air Ministry technical expert who has been examining German aircraft brought down over England. "There are no signs that metal shortage has forced the enemy to skimp.")

What of the future? Mr. X refused to guess. He said he was able to talk of the past because he saw and heard and felt what happened. But of tomorrow and tomorrow, he had no right to judge except to say that it has been a war of surprises and will continue so. "I wouldn't be surprised if we won it this year." He wouldn't say why, but he meant it.—Ottawa Journal.

ARGENTINA TURNS OVER CONFISCATED RADIO TO NAZIS

Equipment Had Been Seized by Congressional Committee Investigating Anti-Argentine Activities

BERLIN PROTESTS

Buenos Aires, July 29 (AP)—Following a sharp protest from Berlin a congressional committee investigating anti-Argentine activities has decided to surrender a portable radio transmitter consigned to the German Embassy and other confiscated property which the committee said included "documents in code."

The committee which announced its decision last night declared, however, it would file a report on the incident with a Federal Judge to determine whether events leading up to the seizure involved "crimes or infractions in any form affecting the laws or ordiances of the Argentine nation."

The German protest said the congressional committee had committed a breach of international law and "a violation of diplomatic immunity" in taking the Nazi property off a plane at Cordoba last Saturday. The Argentine foreign office supported this view.

(In Berlin, D.N.B. the German news and propaganda agency, said the confiscated property included three diplomatic pouches en route from the German legation at Lima, Peru, to the Embassy in Buenos Aires. The German protest, D.N.B. said, was couched in "the strongest" terms.)

The radio transmitter—which weighed 500 pounds—was flown from Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, to Lima via Argentina on June 21. It was returned to Argentina Saturday, however, when an attache of the Lima legation who accompanied the consignment was informed that only 44 pounds of diplomatic baggage would be admitted without being opened for inspection.

In explaining the seizure, the Argentina committee said the concept of diplomatic baggage is limited to correspondence, that such baggage should be locked and the key transmitted to the Foreign Minister, and that its nature should be clearly marked on the outside.

Has No Designs On Dardanelles Says Joe Stalin

Berne, July 29—(AP)—It was reported tonight that Joseph Stalin, acting on a British suggestion, has prepared a personal letter to the President of Turkey assuring him that Russia has no intention of seizing control of the Dardanelles.

British diplomatic sources said the British ambassador to Moscow, Sir Stafford Cripps, was instrumental in persuading the Soviet regime that only an outspoken disavowal of alleged Russian aspirations to occupy the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus could be effective since the Nazis repeatedly have charged that Russia was intriguing for military bases on the strait.

It was reported that Sir Stafford suggested the Russian assurance to Turkey take the form of a written communication between Stalin and President Ismet Inonu of Turkey, because Hitler has already sent two letters to Inonu this year.

The Stalin letter was said to have been drafted late last week, but its delivery in Ankara has not yet been confirmed.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The German radio's contention that territorial gains in Russia "actually would be a disadvantage" at the present time represents another of the queer propaganda twists arising from the Russo-German struggle.

A further advance on Moscow now, says the Berlin broadcast in explaining the slow pace of the invading forces, would "serve no useful purpose" as long as the Red Army's fighting power remains.

This timorous approach to the situation at the front doesn't fit well into the Nazi conception of total war, which dictates that victories are won not by arms alone, but also by the impact of cleverly developed propaganda which strikes psychological blows simultaneously with the armored strokes of the fighting forces.

It all depends on demonstrating the much advertised invincibility of the Germany army. Once questions arise as to that, everything goes haywire. The propaganda has to deviate from its usual self assured course.

Measures against smaller nations planned in co-ordination with the big military operation have to be sidetracked. Thus a German economic mission all ready to leave for Turkey to "negotiate" has had to delay its departure; the Germans find "negotiation" difficult while supremacy of the German army is being challenged.

Nazi Propagandisis in Quandary

The propaganda spokesmen in Berlin find themselves in a quandary because weeks ago their claims went so far ahead of actualities that today the German armies are still far from catching up. The explanations now being made that Red Army divisions are steadily being destroyed will have little effect as long as it remains obvious that the Red Army is still very much in existence.

If "pursuit of the defeated enemy continues," as the German High Command phrase goes, what is preventing the Germans from occupying Kiev, at the "gates" of which the German army was standing July 12, or Leningrand, which was declared in "immediate danger" about the same time.

While Berlin seeks to resolve its dilemma, the Russians have turned up some interesting instruments of propaganda. Last week it was announced German plans for chemical warfare had been captured. Although most captured "documents" diplayed in the past by the Germans have been faked, this Soviet find turned out to be authentic- The German News Agency DNB admits this, warning the Russians against using its capture as a pretext for using gas.

This incident was followed by the capture of German plans for an invasion of Turkey. It goes without saying that Germany has plans for attacking Turkey, but their falling into Russian hands now is proving useful to the Russians in their efforts to convince the Turks that they have more to fear from the Germans than anyone else.

Floated Over Mine

"On the fourth day we saw three British aircraft coming straight towards us. They were low and passed about 200 yards away. We stood up and waved scarves and handkerchiefs and flashed two mirrors. We thought at first they must have seen us but they didn't come back.

"We were all growing beards. We made a fishing line about 40 feet long and could see plenty of fish but none would bite.

"One day when we were trying to see who could hold his head under water the longest the navigator lifted his head out with a terrific shout. 'There's a damn mine down there,' he said. There it was covered with barnacles—one of those big circular affairs with jobs . . .

"We made up our minds to paddle towards where we thought the coast was. We started at 11 one morning and kept it up until 8 that night. Next day we had a go at it from 8 in the morning until eight in the evening. The day after we tried to keep it up through the night as well, but our strength was going and we couldn't.

Became Very Weak

"I couldn't even stand up in the dinghy We had to keep pumping and were so weak that we couldn't do more than a half-dozen strokes at a time. Each night we could hear our bombers, and sometimes we saw them returning in the half light before dawn.

"On the eighth evening a Hampden escorted by two Hurricanes appeared almost over us. We all waved, but they didn't see us. We were now out of drinking water and our tongues were beginning to swell and crack. We rinsed out our mouths with sea water but didn't drink any. I think another two days would have been as much as we could have managed.

"At 8.30 in the morning of the ninth day a Hampden came out of the sun at about 2,000 feet and passed us a quarter mile away. We waved and flashed our mirrors at it. The Hampden did a half-turn, banked, put its nose down and when we realized we had been seen we joined hands and sang 'Auld Lang Syne.'"

JAPAN OFFERS

Occupation Continues swiftly

Japan's occupation of southern Indo-China went into high gear as warships and troop transports brought garrison troops and military supplies into Camranh Bay.

At Hanoi it was announced officially a total of 40,000 Japanese troops would be stationed in southern Indo-China. Troops already have moved into bases at Nhatrang, 200 miles northwest of Saigon, and Tourane, 300 miles from the coast from Saigon.

Other warships were approaching Saigon to land still more Japanese, expected to take over posts dominating the east coast, the Thailand border and the upper half of the Gulf of Siam.

In Vichy, Vice-Premier Jean Darlan and Japanese Ambassador Sotomatsu Kato signed a protocol for the "common defence of French Indo-China," binding the two governments to military co-operation as long as circumstances demand.

Other Developments

Other developments in the Far East crisis indicated that an explosive climax may be forthcoming soon:-

1. In Shanghai, United States officials reported that Japanese sentries had been stationed outside American Oil Company properties at Tsingtoa and Dairen, halting all business.

2. In Sydney, Army Minister Percy Spender announced that about one-quarter of Australia's military has been called up for full-time service beginning Oct. 1.

3. The London radio said an order had been issued in Cape Town, South Africa, to detain the 9,000-ton Japanese freighter Manila Maru, headed for Japan with a full cargo.

4. In San Francisco, the luxurious Japanese liner Tatuta Maru, with nearly 100 American passengers and a $2,500,000 cargo of raw silk aboard, was reported still continuing her time-marking cruise off the Pacific coast.

It was apparent that the ship was loath to risk docking, despite United States assurance of prompt clearance should she enter port. The Tatuta Maru and 44 other Japanese ships en route to United States ports when President Roosevelt ordered Japanese assets "frozen" last week are still maintaining radio silence.

AIM TO PLACE

per cent overseas, and this will be boosted to ten per cent in each place. Five per cent of air gunners will get commissions in Canada and 15 per cent overseas.

No Change in Percentage

There will be no change in the percentage of pilots granted commissions—33 per cent while serving in Canada and 17 per cent overseas. These figures were basic percentages and there was no ceiling.

Major Power said a second Royal Canadian Air Force Army Co-operation Squadron soon will be operating with the Canadian Corps in the United Kingdom.

Eleven of the thirteen Canadian squadrons now operating overseas were commanded by Canadians and it was the intention that all 13—and subsequent squadrons—would be so commanded. A Canadian officer in future would sit with selection boards passing on Air Force commissions in England.

He said arrangements are being made to facilitate the transmission to Canada of Air Force casualty lists, and to improve publicity given to feats of individual Canadian airmen.

Major Power said that when he was overseas—he returned by air last week after almost a month in England—he had heard complaints that Canadian airmen were "spread all over and were out of touch with Canada."

"We are going to try to group them as much as possible," he said, but he added this did not mean Canadians would be taken out of the Royal Air Force or be prevented from going into the R.A.F.

Immediately after the press conference Major Power entered Civic Hospital here for treatment of quinsy resulting from a throat infection contracted while in Britain. He is expected to be in hospital three or four days.

CAR SIDESWIPED, $300 DAMAGE CAUSED

Colliding with the side of a parked motor car near his home an automobile driven by Wyman Wright, Bleecker Ave., caused upwards of $300.00 worth of damage to a motor car owned by H. Walters of Oshawa. Wright was proceeding along Bleecker Ave., early this morning when he apparently drove too close to the parked vehicle with the result the cars sideswiped. P. C. Wright investigated and reported the damage as extensive. Subsequent investigations are pending, police added.

'GOOD NEIGHBOR POLICY FAILURE' SAYS SEN. CLARK

Opponent of Roosevelt Administration Suggests U.S. 'Take Over Control' of Latin Americas and Canada

Washington, July 29.—(AP)—Senator Worth Clark (Dem.-Idaho), speaking as an individual Senator, suggested today that the United States "take over control" of Canada and all Latin America but a colleague immediately branded the idea as fantastic.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Dem.-Wyoming) said he was sure no one in the western part of the United States would support the suggestion. He called the proposal both fantastic and imperialistic.

Clark, one of a Senate group opposing administration policy, gave no intimation that he would offer legislation to carry out his theory.

But he said in an interview that "the good neighbor policy has been a failure" and that "instead of talking about sending soldiers to Europe we ought to think about using them here in our own hemisphere".

He mentioned puppet governments as a possible means of United States control of Western Hemisphere countries.

As late as May 27, President Roosevelt outline to the governing board of the Pan-American Union a hemisphere defence program based on the Good Neighbor Policy and its recognition of the independence of hemisphere nations.

O'Mahoney Opposes Clark

O'Mahoney, who has fought with the Idahoan to forbid government purchases of Argentine beef, was one of the first to voice opposition to Clark on the hemisphere issue.

"Any such suggestion is utterly at variance with the historic policy of the United States", O'Mahoney told reporters. "It is inconceivable to me that it could be seriously made".

Clarke gave the opinion that "it probably would not be necessary to fire a single shot to take control of this whole hemisphere".

"We could make some kind of arrangement to set up puppet governments which we could trust to put American interests ahead of those of Germany or any other nation in the world."

Clark said that throughout its history, the United States has had an opportunity to consolidate North and South America under its dominion.

"It may be," he said, "that this is our last chance. If we don't do it now, when it is easy, we shall have to look forward to never-ending quarrels and jealousies, foreign infiltration and other dangers to our own security."

As to Canada, the Senator said that "the Canadians are just as willing as the Latin Americans to take our money and use it, not to promote hemispherical solidarity, but for their own selfish ends.

"We should have learned by now that you can't buy friends."

Another opponent of the Administration foreign policy, Senator Robert Taft (R-Ohio) said that while he opposed the "good neighbor" policy in principle, "it seems to be working for the time being."

"It probably will continue to work as long as we keep passing out money," he declared, "but that can not go on forever."

Taft made it clear he did not favor any military action against either Canada or the Latin American countries, however.

Supporter of Wheeler

Clark consistently has opposed administration foreign policy legislation, and has given whole-hearted support to Senator Burton Wheeler (Dem-Montana) in his battles with President Roosevelt The Idaho Senator attended meetings of the isolationist group during the Congressional fight over the Lease-Lend Bill and, with others, worked unsuccessfully for its modification.

Clark, a close friend of the late Senator William Borah (Rep-Idaho), volunteered his views on foreign policy during an interview in which he said he always had held those beliefs. His thought in added, was that the United States now has a "last chance" to take over control of all North and South America.

Little Hope in His Own Program

Clark gave no intimation that he would present legislation to carry out his idea. He offered his foreign policy program merely as an individual Senator and made it clear he had little hope it ever would materialize.

Washington, July 29 —(AP)—Declaring that "the good neighbor policy has been a failure," Senator Worth Clark (Dem.-Ida) suggested today that the United States "take over control" of all Latin America and Canada.

He mentioned puppet governments as one means to such an end.

Clark, one of the Senate group opposing administration foreign policy, told newsmen that "instead of talking about sending soldiers to Europe we ought to think about using them here in our own hemisphere."

But, the Idaho Senator added, "it probably would not be necessary to fire a single shot to take control of this whole hemisphere."

Hanson Pleads For Leadership

Trail, B.C., July 29 (CP)—Hon. R. B. Hanson, Conservative Leader in the House of Commons, voiced a plea for leadership in Canada when he addressed a party rally here last night.

"Where is there in Canada today a Churchill, a Roosevelt, or a Menzies?" he asked. "Oh God, I wish there were a Menzies in Canada. That is the type of leadership King is not giving."

"I have a serious idea that the voluntary recruiting system is exhausted," Mr. Hanson said. "I find increasing sentiment in the west for conscription. The government has accepted the priciple of the National Services Act but stopped short of the vital thing, sending men to the scene of hostilities."

WALL STREET

New York, July 29 (AP)—Stocks struggled with profit selling difficulties in today's market.

While rubbers and motors were resistant throughout, most other groups exhibited irregularity downward tendencies after an early extension of Monday's bulge. Indefinite trends prevailed near the final hour. Transfers for the full session were at the rate of about 900,000 shares.

Partial Text of Churchill Address

London, July 29 (AP)—Following is a partial text of Prime Minister Churchill's speech in the House of Commons today:

On January 22 of this year I explained to the House the system of administration and production it was proposed to adopt. That is the system which we have followed since, and it is the system to which in general and in principle I propose to adhere.

Changes in personnel are enjoined from time to time by the march of events, and the duty of continual improvement. Changes of machinery are enjoined by experience and naturally while we live we ought to learn.

Change is agreeable to the human mind and gives satisfaction—sometimes short-lived—to ardent and anxious public opinion.

System Working Smoothly

As parliament on the whole is convinced, and those to whom it has given its confidence are convinced, that the system is working smoothly, then change for the sake of change is to be deprecated in war time.

If we are to be perpetually altering our system we may achieve the appearance of energy and refor mnot only at the expense of the authority of the individual but to the detriment of the full working of the machinery and heavy cost in output itself.

In my capacity as minister of defence I prepared for the war cabinet during the first three months of this year a revised general scheme bringing together the whole of our munition production and the whole of our import program and prescribing the just and reasonable targets at which we ought to aim.

The general scheme received final approval by the War Cabinet on March 31 and therefore became mandatory....

Execution of this scheme on the Ministry side is confided to the three great supply departments with the Admiralty Ministry of Supply and Ministry of Aircraft production.

Work has been parcelled out and it remains for them to do it. The picture so luridly drawn of chaotic and convulsive struggles of the three supply departments without guidance or design is one which will no doubt be pleasing to our enemies but happily has no relation to the facts.

The question arises however, whether in their execution of the approved scheme, the three supply departments have been wanting in energy or, through excess of zeal, have quarrelled with each other or trespassed on each other's domains.

There are no doubt instances of friction on the fringes of these powerful organizations but I do not believe they bear any proportion worth mentioning to their idividual and concerted efforts...

Plants At Work on Approved Production Program

At the point which we have now reached in our munitions development almost all firms and factories are working under complete control of the government at fulfilment of an approved and concerted program.

There are no doubt a number of minor aspects of our national life which have not yet been effectively regimented, but when and as they are wanted their turn will come.

We are not a totalitarian state, but we are steadily, and I believe, as fast as possible working ourselves into a total war organization.

We are always trying to tighten up and make more precise and more definite the work of our purchasing commissions in the United States.

I should certainly not pretend that there is not a great deal of room for improvement and refinement but it would be a mistake to suppose the efficiency of our purchasing commissions under the supreme control of Mr. Purvis (Rt. Hon. Arthur Purvis of Montreal) has not reached a very high level or that it is not constantly being shaped and sharpened.

A year ago, six months ago, there were a lot of troubles and discordancies, but latterly, although again I should be the first to hear of them, my information is that they have very largely died away.

American Friends and Helpers

We have, of course, come to very clean cut agreements with our American friends and helpers. They are making immense efforts in the common cause and they naturally ask for the very fullest information as to what is happening to their goods and whether there is waste and misdirection.

It is our duty to satisfy them that there is no muddle or that muddle is reduced to a minimum and that they are getting value for their money.

We welcome their criticism because it is at once searching, friendly and well-informed.

Improvement in ordering of imports and of British purchases in the United States is in relation to the very large number of competent persons at work on both sides of the ocean. It is, I am glad to say, steady and progressive . . .

At this point I will deal with a suggestion that a ministry of production should be formed . . some are for complete merging of the supply departments of the Admiralty, Air Ministry and War Office —one great common shop serving all fighting needs.

'Who is Superman?' Premier Asks

Who is this superman who will dominate the vast, entrenched and embattled organization of the Admiralty....Teach the present Ministry of Aircraft Production how to make aircraft quicker and better than they are now being made or who is going to interfere with Lord Beaverbrook as Ministry of Supply?

When you have decided on the man, let me know his name. I shall be very glad to serve under him (laughter) provided I am satisfied that he possesses all the Napoleonic qualities required....

In the conduct of a vast nationwide administration there must be a division of functions and a proper responsibility assigned to departmental chiefs...... I do not deny that many things go wrong but can anyone in his senses suggest that it should be the task of a superman to take up these cases by direct intervention from above? All he could do would be to refer the complaints and scandals to the heads of the three supply departments and if he did not get satisfaction he would have to come to see me.

Whispering Campaign Decried

We do not stand here to defend the slightest failure of duty or organization, but a kind of whispering campaign has been set on foot. There is a flood of anonymous letters, vague charges are made and all this gets into the shop window greatly to our detriment.

No Failure in Ordering British Aircraft

The charge made by the Honorable Member for Aberdeen North (George Garro-Jones) is quite untrue, so far as aircraft on British order are concerned. All these aircraft are supplied with spare engines and spare frames. There is no failure or oversight of this kind in ordering British arcraft . . .

It is those of the French kind (planes ordered in the United States before the fall of France) that were lacking.

Harry Hopkins (American administrator of the lend-lease program) . . . dwelt upon the trials and difficulties attending the modification of aircraft from the United States on French account and he expressed satisfaction with the arrangements we have made for overcoming them.

But apart from the circle where all the facts are known, outside in the United States where there is a vigorous campaign against the policy pursued by President Roosevelt I fear that harm has been done. It cannot be easily overtaken or healed . . .

Style of Aircraft Superior

I am glad to tell the House that our spring and summer fashions in aircraft this year are farther ahead of contemporary German production than they were last year. The enemy borrowed many ideas from our fighter planes when they felt their mettle a year ago and we borrowed some from them.

I come now to the more general charge of slackness and inefficiency in factories, whether due to a local lack of management or to a lack of zeal on the part of the work people.

There are members of all parties who feel their war work should be to belabor the government and to portray everything at its worst in order to produce higher efficiency.

I see a motion has been put on the order paper calling for the appointment of a Minister of Production.

That is perfectly proper question and I regret that the motion cannot be moved in that form today.

No one in war-time should be detered from doing his duty merely because he is voting against the government.

PRESIDENT TAKES A BRIEF RESPITE FROM AFFAIRS OF STATE

While President Ffanklin D. Roosevelt appears to be ticking the "whiskers" of Falla, his pet Scottie, Mrs. Roosevelt knits at the Roosevelt Hyde Park, N.Y., estate as the President took a brief respite from affairs of state. The President keeping in close touch with the national and international situationh, asserted that Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana has gone "too far" in his fight against administration foreign policies and is "on dangerous ground," and also disclosed that the U.S. would retaliate with specific action against Japan's occupation of naval and air bases in French Indo-China by freezing Japanese assets.

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, July 29

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE ASTRAL forces bearing on the affairs of this day are definitely in the direction of expansion, growth, advancement and excellent opportunity for reaching high goals of achievement and gratification. It is a time to work for such objectives largely by cultivating the friendly aid of those in power and financial standing whose cooperation will be invaluable. But this approach should be tactful and conservative rather than impetuous, argumentative or forceful. Strenuous efforts might prove futile, and also there is some danger of connivance or irregularity. Sign papers cautiously. Some changes in plans may be looked for.

Those whose birthday it is should be on the brink of a year of splendid opportunity for the realization of major ambitions, with support, preferment and financial backing from those in high places. These should be approached with finesse rather than aggressively, or with turbulence, impetuosity or argument. Vigilance as to deception, fraud or irregularities is enjoined, and it may be necessary to make compromises as to plans and details in order to attain this friendly assistance. With tact there should be gain, growth, promotion and enhanced prestige and popularity.

A child born on this day should have much efficiency, adaptability and power for attaining high ambitions, greatly assisted by its personal popularity and prestige. Never theless, it may be easily duped or tricked by its own careless or impulsive conduct.

For Wednesday, July 30

A RATHER routine state of affairs is read from the prevailing planetary influences. The personal rather than business interests seem to occupy the attention, although public affairs of a social, humane, fraternal or community aspect, may succeed through cleverness, secret or tacit understandings, in which large corporations or organizations have prominent part. Such affiliation may develop peculiar or surprising angles, in which new ideas or problems are advanced by social, artistic or sentimental factors rather than strictly business tenets. But be alert to dubious entanglements or quarrels.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look for a fairly active year, in which the personal equation may overshadow strictly commercial interests. Public, community or group action in connection with humanitarian, cultural or charitable organizations should prosper, especially if new ideas or novel forms of promotion be employed. But keep alert to peculiar or unexpected entanglements or duplicity and also shun tempest and confused or rash acts.

A child born on this day may have many interesting or uncommon talents which it may put to use for the public welfare, in social, educational or cultural lines. It may attain success by originality and engaging personality.

Chart Guides in Drawing Face

Your fashion drawings published, bringing you good pay! Skeptical friends or relatives may doubt you could get so far by teaching yourself to draw—but it can be done.

Even if you start out unable to draw a pretty face, vague about anatomy, practising with professional charts gives you an encouraging start.

To draw a girl's head in profile, first rule a square and cut it in half horizontally. Note, in our diagram, how the girl's eye is drawn right on this line. Then you divide the square in half vertically—where the jaw begins—and place the ear just behind this line.

Here's another trick. The base of the nose is on a level with the base of the skull. You can draw another horizontal, almost halfway below the first one, to guide you.

Just this simple type of guide lines helps you block in graceful figures, too. You make them about eight heads high, place the waistline almost three heads down from top of head.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Wants to Convince Her He's the Right One

Dear Miss Fairfax:

About four years ago I met and fell in love with a lovely young lady, two years younger than I am. Within a few months I began begging her to marry me. She didn't want to; she wanted to work and be independent for a while because she did not want to work after marriage.

Last summer she finally told me she loved me. Still she wasn't ready to marry since she would have to give up her job and other boy friends. She has gone out with other boys, while I have gone with her only for the last three years. I have a good steady job so she wouldn't have to work after our marriage.

I'm 25 now and tired of living alone. She says she still loves me but seeks the companionship of others more frequently. When she is with me she's irritable and temperamental and we quarrel over the most trivial things.

What can I do to convince her it's time to marry me, or do you think that is impossible.

D.S.

It's up to you to persuade this young lady that you are the right one to be her husband. But from what you tell me, I'm afraid the proposition presents difficulties. We are told that the constant dripping of water will wear away a rock, and many marriages have been made on this principle.

But let me warn you that there is nothing so unwelcome in a girl's uife as one of these persistent suitors she doesn't really love. Try to be less possessive, go out with other girls. When you see this young lady, don't force the marriage issue. Occasionally send her some flowers or candy.

Wants Her to go out with Others

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend and I live in the same neighborhood, and we've been engaged for about a year. Recently he decided he wanted more freedom, and since then has been taking out other girls. He comes to see me once a week, and then he's always so broke that we can't go anywhere.

I've read that no man is worth fighting for, and I don't know whether or not to fight for him. He tells me about his dates with other girls, and wants me to go out with other boys, but I don't care to do it.

We've known each other for years, and our families are old friends. As far as I know, his folks like me and I know mine think a great deal of him. I think, sometimes, if we didn't live so near to each other it might be better for us but we can't change that.

I've done all I can to please him, but he doesn't seem to appreciate it. His new friends are out for all they can get.

Lonely

I'm inclined to agree with your statement no man is worth fighting for, — at least, as far as this young man is concerned. Evidently he belongs to the type that falls in and out of love easily, and one girl seems as desirable to him as another.

He suggests you go out with others — I honestly believe it would be sensible for you to take his advice. Love is the most precious thing in the world; why waste it on the unworthy?

Thinks Too Much of Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a girl for several months. Previous to this she went with another boy for two years. He joined the service, and although she corresponds with him she says she will never marry him.

I love her and have asked her to marry me, but she says she doesn't love me. She wants to quit going with me, because she says I think too much of her. Should I do as she says? I would like to keep on seeing her.

C.

Perhaps if you were not so devoted to this young lady, you would have better luck with her. Some girls do not like to be too sure of their boy friends. The element of uncertainty inspires their interest. See what a good dose of indifference and attention to someone else will do.

Wedding on Limited Budget

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to be married soon and, like most girls, I have always dreamed of being dressed like a "real bride", in a white wedding dress and a bridal veil. But this means a formal wedding, and my family cannot pay for this kind of wedding.

Also, my father, my fiance and his friends don't own formal day clothes, feel that they can't afford to buy them for this one occasion and, in the community in which we live, would have no use for them afterward.

My family and my fiancee's family are friendly people, and we want to have our relatives and friends with us at the ceremony and at a simple party afterward.

Have you any solution for my problem, Mrs. Beeckman?

Bride-to-be

If you will be so kind as to send a three-cent stamped and self-addressed envelope to me, I shall be delighted to send you my pamphlet "How To Dress for a Limited-Budget Wedding." It answers just the questions that are troubling you, and other questions too: about the attendants, the form of invitation, and so forth. I hope it will persuade you not to give up your dream of being dressed like a real bride, even if the budget is limited.

Complimentary Close

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to invite my son's college roommate to visit us this summer. What is the correct form of complimentary close and signature to my letter to him?

Sallie

You should end and sign your letter like this:

Sincerely yours,
or
Sincerely, or Cordially,
Mary Smith Brown

If it is not your custom to use your maiden surname in your signature, the form of name would be Mary Brown. AUTOMOBILE - GUEST COURTESY

When you are a guest in someone's car, don't smoke without asking permission. To a hostess who doesn't smoke, or to another guest, smoking may be offensive, especially in a small space. Some hostesses are fastidious about keeping their cars tidy and don't relish having ashes dropped on the floor or upholstery. Turn about is fair play too, and the hostess or host should ask permission to smoke unless they are sure that their guests smoke or don't mind smoking.

Careless Housewives Throw Many Milk Bottles into Garbage

Milk distributors of the city will be faced with a serious shortage of milk bottles if the buying public does not co-operate more closely in returning the empty bottles to their proper sources, a prominent dairyman told the Ontario Intelligencer today.

Purchase of new bottles is daily growing more difficult, due to war exigencies, it was pointed out, and, the dairyman intimated, if a solution to the problem is noth forthcoming there is a possibility of the Milk Board stepping in and ordering charges to be made on bottles when delivered to the consumer.

Indicative of the carelessness of a number of householders, he said, in looking after empty bottles, is the fact that at times some three hundred empties are returned to him monthly by city garbage collectors.

"Milk bottle losses," he added, "sometimes amount to as much as twenty-five dollars monthly."

Another source of loss, he added, is picnic parties. People purchase three or four bottles of milk to take on the holiday and when the milk is consumed, they throw the bottles away.

"It only takes a minute to put the bottles where our drivers can get them, and if the public cooperates with distributors in this respect, not only unnecessary bottle loss will be avoided but the possibility of higher costs of milk will be averted."

Waist Accentuate In Fall Styles

Autumn Dress Season "Openings" Held as Usual in London

London, July 29 — (CP) — First "openings" of the London autumn dress season have all the eclat of pre-war collection presentations. Though the roof may have been blown off, the rooms in which the collection is shown the only whole ones in the building — these export dresses are being shown to royalty, to important social customers, to the press and buyers as though the rumble outside wasn't the anti-aircraft guns — but the thunder of a light summer shower.

It's waists this year. Waists as slim as a reed, with hips delicate, busts accentuated, skirts swinging out and forward; with rippling fullness in front accented by padded cordings, quilting or any other means to give the desired fluting effect.

Shoulders are light but very straight, to balance the swing of the skirt hems, sleeves often cut in one with the yokes; fluted fur revers, scrolled revers, "turretted" peplum — all aid in emphasizing the very feminine, tiny waist. It's a change after getting out of uniform.

One of the "blitzed" blouses specialized in town clothes. Not British towns, to be sure — but for the world's export markets. Colors chosen include many varieties of violet from "black tulip" through prune, violet, vivid magenta to parma-greys.

Again there are a great number of black town coats worn over brilliant dresses of the type in which a woman will play bridge in the late afternoon and go on to dinner.

Dresses are draped in their lines. Because silk jersey is the vogue this is essential. One-sided drapery is employed the line passing from the right shoulder to the left waist then falling in soft drapery to the hem or in tunic fashion.

Tunic effects in simple drapery emphasize the close-held hip under the tiny waist — for both day and dinner dresses. Great emphasis on the high pointed bust, gold embroidery and diamante work. In all the "creations" there is building up for the upper figure by darts, seams cr pin tucks.

Again to balance the tiny waist there are tripple fluting collars or cape effects and autumn dresses are completed more often by miniature capes than by jackets.

Woman Should Not Go to Seed

Lovely Carole Landis belives in women making most of beauty assets.

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE are women who live in a perfect glow and fever of efficiency, yet never turn their talents toward self-improvement. They attend to their jobs, looking after each small detail; let themselves go to seed. They have no realization of all the things that can be done to make a woman better looking. They trail along in dreary dowdiness. It never occurs to them that the study of line and color, or the cultivation of the art of dress, is great fun.

They are doing their duty to their families, they believe. The Daddy and the children would be much happier if the old girl were to perk up.

A smart, sassy coiffure, a bit of complexion coloring from the make-up box, more youthful attire, and the atmosphere of the home would be brighter and jollier. If such women were not so terribly good, so beset with the weight of their responsibilities, they would be better company. The beauty feast is there, but they will not eat.

To the woman who has fallen into a rut and a routine, who has forgotten to powder her nose, let us say this: woman, to thine own self be true! Shine up the halo edge into the good looks parade. Get some stunning dry goods, stand among the fashion elect.

Don't fancy that beautifying is a frivolous indulgence. The better you look the better you'll feel, and when you look particularly tiptop little birdies will be singing in your heart.

Smart appearance is an asset. There is no virtue in looking plain.

Specialists Classify Many Acne Types

Whereas the average person is likely to describe all pimples on the face or on the skin elsewhere on the body as acne, specialists in diseases of the skin differentiate many different kinds. The most most common form is called acne vulgaris simply because it is the most prevalent. Sufferers are usually told that if they will merely keep the skin clean, the condition will probably disappear in a reasonable time. Unfortunately, secondary infections sometimes result in damage to the tissues and permanent scarring.

As yet, doctors do not know the exact cause of this type of acne. It is believed, however, to be associated in some way with the glandular changes that come on at the time of adolescence. Some doctors have tried various glandular extracts and preparations, but all of this work is still experimental; there is no evidence that any one preparation is better in one case than in another. The danger is, of course, that the condition will persist after the period of adolescence.

Certain factors are frequent — an oily skin, the formation of blackheads, and secondary infection with germs. Blackheads form when there is an oversecretion in the glands of the skin, with a narrowing of the outlet. As a result, a plug of semisolid material appears in which germs grow easily. For this reason doctors recommend removal and cleansing of blackheads to prevent the secondary infection and formation of the pimples. In very young people cleaning of the skin and the application of mild remedies which help to remove the damaged skin is the usual procedure followed.

The X-ray has been found to be one of the most effective methods of treatment but X-ray is a form of treatment which has to be given by someone who has specialized in its use and who has studied all of the possibilities.

The home care of such cases includes daily washing with warm water and soap but not too vigorous scrubbing with a brush. If a person is naturally clean and intelligent, he can be taught how to remove the blackheads and how to carry out the procedure without unduly bruising the skin.

Much has been said about controlling the diets of people with acne. Some say that there should be no sugar. However, in a certain group of patients sugar was injected directly into the veins. These people not only failed to do badly but many of them seemed to be benefited. Since, however, there appears to be some sensitivity in the skin of such patients, most specialists insist that those with acne be restricted as to the amount of fat, chocolate, alcohol and iodine they take. These substances seem to be especially important in bringing about reduced ability of the skin to resist this infection.

Foods Are one Cause of Acne—Pimples

For many years acne—pimples—was believed to be caused by foods, particularly sweet and starchy foods. This was due to the fact that the eruption usually begins at teen age and boys and girls at that age are very fond of sweets.

Then, as many cases were not helped by avoiding sweets, gradually cutting down on sweets as a treatment for acne was abandoned. In fact a few years ago in questioning a prominent skin specialist he informed me that in his opinion food had nothing to do with acne: it came on at puberty and remained until it was ready to go.

Naturally, as the eruption starts at, or near puberty, the fact that gland disturbance at this age is the cause is the opinion of most physicians. And treatment by gland extracts has given excellent results.

However, physicians who still think food to blame point out that it is the way the body handles the foods, due perhaps to gland disturbances, that causes the acne. They believe that the glands have, in some way, caused a sensitiveness or allergy to certain foods just as strawberries and other foods cause hives.

Dr. F. E. Cormia, Montreal, in Journal of Allergy, reports his experiment with foods as a cause of acne. He suspected food allergy or sensitiveness in 25 of 80 private patients with acne. Twenty of this twenty-five were given elimination diets (leaving out certain suspected foods). Twelve additional patients all with severe acne of two or more years but with no history of food allergy, were used as a comparison with the twenty cases with suspected food allergy.

All patients were placed on elimination diets. The foods most frequently mentioned were chocolate and tomatoes—two excellent foods. Other foods found to be causing acne or aggravating the symptoms were pork, potatoes, cheese, bread, eggs, apples, tea, coffee, oranges. Of the twenty-four foods listed by 16 patients as causing or increasing the symptoms, thirteen caused the increase in symptoms when eaten.

The patients did without these foods and after the eruption was completely cured, the foods were gradually given again in small quantities and only rarely did they cause the eruption to appear.

Other foods causing the eruption or increasing the symptoms were peas, grapefruit, nuts, spinach, carrots, lettuce beets and cabbage.

By this method 2 were cured and all others much improved.

Manifold Woes Beset Dodgers Who Open "Make or Break Series" Against League-Leading Cards

Manager Durocher Threatens Injecting Himself Into Brooklyn Line-up in Desperation Move

PITCHERS FAIL

Yankees May Better the Stadium Attendance of 1,200,000 Spectators

By BILL BONI
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Wobbling on both their hitting and their pitching legs, Brooklyn Dodgers moved into St. Louis today for what very well may be the "make or break" series of their National League pennant aspirations.

Just two weeks ago these Dodgers were in first place, enjoying a four-game margin over the Cardinals. Then the hard-running, hard-hitting, ever-scrapping Redbirds moved into Ebbets Field, beat the Brooks in both games of a short series, and started them on a toboggan slide that at the moment has left them two lengths back of the Cards.

You can't put your finger on any one factor and say "That's it" in trying to locate the source of this present Dodgers dilemna. It seems to be a combination of things, including pitchers who haven't been able to hold leads, hitters who haven't given those pitchers any big leads to hold, and apparently also lack of sufficient youth such as is sparking the Cardinals and the oncoming Pittsburgh Pirates.

Pitchers Can't Win

Up to that fateful July 15 Whit Wyatt and Kirby Higbe, with the help of Hugh Casey, were mowing down the batters in fine style. But not a one of the three has been able to win since then and the only three victories in the Dodgers' 12 games in those two weeks have been credited to Curt Davis and Mace Brown, in relief roles, and to Luke Hamlin, who needed help from Higbe to win his.

Hamlin was expected to get the call for today's game with the Cards, first of the two in the series, against Lon Warneke or Max Lanier. For the second game it likely will be Higbe again, who already has worked in four of the seven games on Brooklyn's current western trip.

So deep is the present Dodger despair that Manager Leo Durocher, at last report, even was considering taking the step he's vowed he wouldn't—putting himself back into the lineup in place of Peewee Reese at shortshop. At that the drive which Durocher always had had might be just the incentive the Brooks need to snap out of the slump.

Yankee Statistics

Yesterday's Major League holiday, in addition to giving time to study the Brooklyn plight, also gave the statisticians a chance to collect some new figures on the New York Yankees. These latest are attendance figures, which show that in 41 home dates the American League leaders have averaged 19,569 paid admissions and, with 32 at home still to be played, may better the Yankee Stadium record of 1,200,000.

Yanks resumed their home stand today against Detroit Tigers, with Atley Donald and Hal Newhouser the likely pitching rivals. For the rest of the American League the lineup was Cleveland at Washington (Smith against Zuber), Chicago at Philadelphia (Ross against Beckman or Harris) and St. Louis at Boston (Auker against Harris).

In the National League it was Boston at Pittsburgh (Javery against Sullivan), New York at Cincinnati (Schumacher against Riddle), and Philadelphia at Chicago (Pearsons against Lee).

BESSE PITCHES SEVEN-HITTER AS TORONTO WINS

Toronto Hurler Belts Triple to Win Own Game Over Chiefs 5-4

ONLY GAME

BESSE PITCHES 66

(By the Associated Press)

Herman Besse is a six-foot two, 190-pound southpaw who pitches for the Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, has a record, as of today, of eight victories and eight defeats.

That's not brilliant, on the face of it. But eight victories isn't bad considering that the entire Maple Leaf pitching roster has only 29 to its credit.

That, however, is the way things go with last-place teams, and last night Besse apparently decided to do something about it. Not only did he hold the Syracuse Chiefs to seven hits, six of which were singles, but he belted a triple with two out in the eighth that won the ball game, 5-4.

This game, only one of four which the weather man permitted to go off on schedule, wasn't an easy one to win. Syracuse got only those seven hits, but four of them were bunched in the fifth and the Chiefs were away to a 4-0 lead.

Two singles and an error helped Toronto make it 4-2 in the sixth; three successive safeties with two out in the seventh made it 4-3, and then Besse came along in the eighth with the three-bagger that capped the deciding two-run drive. The southpaw gave four walks and struck out nine while Toronto was touching up Ken Burhart for 11 hits.

Wet grounds kept the league-leading Newark Bears idle at Montreal and rain washed out the Jersey City at Rochester and Baltimore at Buffalo games.

RED'S RECORD NOT THREATENED

Cincinnati Won Forty-One Games by One-Run Margin in 1904

New York, July 29—The all-time high of the Cincinnati Reds' in baseball's one-run-win records won't be even jostled on its perch this year in the National League's red-hot pennant campaign, judging by the way the games went the first half of the schedule.

En route to their pennant and world championship, the Royal Reds of 1940 racked up forty-one of their one hundred victories by the thinnest possible margin, surpassing the existing record of thirty-seven set by the world champion Chicago Cubs of 1907. This year the Reds won thirteen games of their first seventy-seven played by one run, a rate which would leave them fifteen shy of their own record at the season's close.

The same number of games were won and lost throughout the league as in last year's first half, of course, but this year's heavy winners are power clubs, instead of super-defense masters as were the Redlegs of yester-summer. Dodgers and Red Birds, when they win, frequently crowd runs across the dish in clusters, instead of making an unassailable barrier out of a one-run lead in the late innings.

Brooklyn had sixteen one-run wins in their season's first half, St. Louis fifteen, Cubs and Pirates eleven each, Braves ten, Giants nine and Phillies seven.

HOW TO SWIM

HOW TO BREATHE

In Lesson No. 3, after much practice you essayed the flutter kick of the crawl and the crawl stroke. But you have not yet learned how to breathe while swimming and again it is rhythm, the rhythm of breathing that you must acquire before you can swim with any degree of efficiency.

Breathing while swimming is very simple; always remember to breathe in through the mouth and out through the nose. When you exhale, your mouth should be under water, and there is less chance of swallowing water if you exhale through your nose. Also your exhaling takes a bit longer that way and exhausts the air in your lungs thus making it easier to gulp (and that is exactly what you must do) a supply of air when you turn your face up out of the water. By breathing in thus, you get a greater supply of air than if you inhale through the nose.

Before you try to do the kick stroke and breathing together, attempt to co-ordinate completely your arm stroke and breathing. Note closely ABOVE the position of the arm in relation to the quarter turn of your face. The only movement you should make with your head in doing the crawl is similar to that made if you were standing erect, facing forward and looked directly to the right and then forward again.

The movements are as follows: The mouth is turned up out of the water as the right arm comes out. Breathe quickly. Turn your face down in the water as your right arm straightens out. Exhale through the nose as you make a stroke with your right arm. As the right arm comes out for the beginning of another stroke turn your face up for more air.

Practise these movements, breathing, as you should in the water, first stroking with but one arm and then the full stroke. Unless you synchronize all movements at this point you will never be able to swim farther than your supply of air allows. Then you will have to stop and breathe and begin again.

Athletics See Good Chance To Gain First Division

Philadelphia, July 29.—(AP)—After seven lean years Connie Mack and his Athletics may finish in the American League first division, the first step on the way back from the cellar to the former glories of the 1910-'14 and 1929-'31 championship eras.

Victorious in seven of their last eight starts, the A's now are virtually tied with the Chicago White Sox for fourth, a fraction of a percentage point favoring the sox. The argument between the two clubs will be decided in a three-game series opening today.

Wise Old Connie and his players feel they will dispose of Jimmy Dykes' Club, then they plan to overhaul Boston for third place.

Hope For Second

"If we go that high," declared Connie, "we can make second. The Yanks are the class of the league but from second place to fifth it's anybody's race. If our pitching holds up and we keep hitting with men on there's no telling what may happen".

Back in May the A's surprised everyone by winning 14 of 19 games and gaining a temporary foothold in the first division. Then they lost six in a row and slipped back.

Now they are on the way up again, getting good pitching from Jack Knott, Les McCrabb, Tom Merrick, Phil Marchildon, and Bump Hadley along with timely hitting from Bob Johnson, Sam Chapman, Wally Moses, Frank Hayes, Dick Siebert, Benny McCoy, Al Brancato and Pete Suder.

Connie attributes a great deal of the teams improvement to Suder, Rookie third sacker, declaring "he's a great fielder and hits the best pitchers best".

Rumor Has O'Doul Head Of Giants

Former Polo Ground Star May Replace Terry as Giant Manager

New York, July 29—Horace C. Stoneham has just decided to make Frank Joseph O'Doul manager of the Giants.

Though William Harold Terry's five-year contract at $42,000 has another year to go, Lefty O'Doul probably will succeed him this winter.

It would give him time to devote to a limpy farm system.

The Man in the Green Suit closed his major league career with the New Yorks . . . helped beat them in the world championship in 1933. He is returning home.

As a two-time National League batting champion and holder of several hitting records, O'Doul is a famous baseball name.

Winning a Pacific Coast League pennant for San Francisco in his first year—1935, O'Doul quickly established a reputation as a skilful handler of men, a baseball strategist and a developer of players.

But what is equally important to Horace Stoneham at the moment is the fact that O'Doul is a personality.

President Stoneham is tired of running third in New York, both in attendance and popularity.

The spectacular Larry MacPhail in Brooklyn has taken the play away from the Giants, and the Yankees' record-wrecking comeback makes things worse

Owner Stoneham selected O'Doul as the man to restore the prestige, glamour and box office magnetism the Polo Grounders enjoyed during the illustrious days of John J. McGraw.

ZIVIC-COCHRANE FIGHT ON TONIGHT

Newark, N.J., July 29 (AP) — Champion Fritzie Zivic and challenger Freddie Cochrane hopt to keep their world welterweight title date tonight at Ruppert stadium after four postponements.

A heavy downpour yesterday caused a 24-hour delay on the bout, New Jersey's first championship contest in more than five years. It originally was scheduled for May 20 but was postponed three times after Zivic incurred an arm infection.

Abe J. Greene, State Athletic Commissioner, said the weight's taken yesterday would stand for tonight. Zivic weighed 145, two under the class limit, and Cochrane 142 1-2.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

Russ Richards, well known Belleville lawn bowler, was in Toronto over the week-end and took in the Sunday Morning Class-Paramount senior girls' softball game at Sunnyside. The S.M.C. won 5-4, thanks to Kay Genereaux's ninth-inning three-base clout with three aboard.

Marie Genereaux

Incidentally nearly all of 2,000 tickets placed on sale for the Red Cross British Bomb Victims Fund charity softball game between the Sunday Morning Class and the Belleville "All - Stars," have been disposed of. President Ted Schwab is quite elated with the response from the sale of tickets. "Judging from the enthusiasm heard along the main streets of Belleville the largest crowd ever to witness a softball game will be on hand to see the S.M.C. play at the Armouries on Civic Holiday," predicted Prexy Schwab today. Kay and Marie Genereaux's Belleville contribution to the S.M.C., will return to their old stamping grounds to show their wares.

Regarding the Sunday Morning Class win over Paramounts, here is what The Toronto Globe and Mail had to say: "The unpredictable Sunday Classers sent about 2,000 of the softball gentry filing out of Sunnyside Stadium Saturday night, emiting ohs and ahs at the fabulous finish they provided in their pulsating tussle with Paramounts . . .

And it was Kay Genereaux, nemesis of many opposing moundsmen when the pressure is on, who sent the Classers and their follower into fits of wild frenzy.

Coming up in the last of the ninth, sacks loaded, two down and two strikes on her, the ever-dangerous catcher hit one of Thelma Golden's pitches for three bases, to turn a seeming 4-2 defeat into a sweet 5-4 victory.

The week-end Disney award went to Miss Genereaux on the strength of her timely smash.

Walter Martin, well-known Toronto barrister and former Canadian Davis Cup player, has set aside his law books and tennis racquets and is at present attending the R.C.A.F. School of Administration at Trenton with the rank of Pilot Officer. PO. Martin represented Canada on four Davis Cup teams from 1931 to '34.

Do you remember when the advent of pari-mutuel betting at Saratoga Race Track at Saratoga Springs, N.Y., proved unpopular at the track's opening day of the season a year ago today. The day's receipts of $262,526 were the lowest for any New York track.

When Frank Tunney, Queensbury A.C. sports promoter, announced last spring he would include Belleville in his Canadian wrestling circuit in the near future, little did your reporter think Tony Galento would be included on the very first program to be presented here on Civic Holiday. Aside from Galento, whose ring antics are world renown, the main bouters to appear here are two of the best heavyweight grapplers in the business. Lee Henning, the Iowa "powerhouse" grappler, is included in the first ten in the business, while The Masked Wolf has yet to be defeated and is in line for a shot at the world's heavyweight wrestling crown. With Galento in the ring as the referee, Belleville and district sport fans will see more ring celebrities in the same ring at one time than has ever been their good fortune before. Another thing, the patrons can be assured of some good rasslin' for a change, as Referee Galento won't stand for any clowning, and well The Masked Wolf and Henning know it.

After a week-end of inactivity softball returns to prominence with the SWACO and Big-Z gals battling it out for first place in the girls' loop tonight. On Wednesday the Reliance-Corby A.C. feud resumes and the fans are all adither following last Friday's near riot when feelings ran high and the players outwardly showed their personal feelings towards each other.

Although the Pittsburgh Pirates are over eight games out of second place in the National League, "Onkel Frankey" Frisch's Pennsylvania State ballsters are just as hot as the league leading Cardinals these hot July days. For the past three years the Pirates have played practically all of their winning ball after Independence Day, which isn't quite enough to win the league bunting. "If we get hot in June 1942, watch the Pirates," predicted "Onkel Frankey". Actually what Frisch is trying to do at Pittsburgh is to "out-gas-house," the famous St. Louis "gas-house gang" he once bossed with success.

Sport Spice — 'Tis rumoured Lefty O'Doul (remember he batted the Giants to their last pennant in '33) is slated to return to the Polo Grounds as manager of the aloof Giants in 1942.."Memphis Bill" Terry is headed for the Giants' front office and headman around their chain store system.....O'Doul polished Joe DiMaggio and made a ball player of brother Dominic and to top it all off—Lefty recommended both of them to the Giants, with no strings attached....Maybe they'll get their East-West football games this autumn after all....The latest is to have the Winnipeg Blue Bombers come east in September for a series of exhibition games for war charities....Bea Hughey, of the S.M.C. girls' softball nine, is leading the Sunnyside League with a .449 batting average.... Evelyn Parkhouse is next and then comes Kay Genereaux.... The Zivic-Cochrane fight will be held tonight, after being rained out Monday....Billy Little says Belleville golfers can prepare to see some of the best pros in Canada display their wares here in August, and all for war charities. ....Them's our sentiments.

Film Patrol Is Okay

Los Angeles, July 29 —(AP)—The film patrol, motion picture cameras which record an entire race, was so successful in its debut at Hollywood Park that it soon may be used at Eastern horse tracks.

That was the consensus of Hollywood Park officials after using the machines throughout the 51-day meeting which closed Saturday.

Presiding Steward Sam C. Nichols reported that Marshall Cassidy, steward representing New York State, was pleased with experiments he conducted. He predicted it would be adopted officially for United States tracks.

The patrol consists of eight cameras, placed at eighth-mile intervals around the mile track. Each photographs the race for one-sixteenth mile in each direction. When the 16 mm. films are spliced, they give a complete picture of the race from start to finish.

AT THE BELLE

"Caught in the Draft"

Bob Hope, the man who always says a mirthful, is a buck private in Paramount's all-out comedy blitz on Uncle Sam's draftees, "Caught in the Draft" which closes a highly successful engagement at the Belle Theatre tonight. Dorothy Lamour, co-starring with the popular screen and radio gagsters in their fourth picture together, emerges as a new figure in the fashion world. For the screen's best "undressed" woman wears 22 changes of smart costumes and makes her first bid for another title, "The Screen's Best Dressed Woman."

The sparkling Hope - Lamour team is supported by two new comedy recruits, Lynne Overman and Eddie Bracken, who assist Bob in carrying out his oneman assault against orthodox army discipline and military tactics.

Keystone comedy - style tank chases, potato peeling and a wacky campaign to win Dorothy, the colonel's daughter, are only part of the rookie gag routine that gives promise of something refreshing and hilarious to look forward to when you see Bob Hope at the Belle tonight.

"Respect the Law" is the title of the latest crime does not pay story to be exhibited on the same program with a funny Popeye cartoon and the popular Belle News of the Day.

"A Woman's Face"

"A Woman's Face," brings Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas and Conradt Veidt to the screen tomorrow in one of the most powerful and completely different dramas the screen has seen in many a moon. Directed by George Cukor, who was responsible for such hits as "The Philadelphia Story" and "The Women," the new picture is hailed as a brilliant combination of characterization, thrills, suspense and unusual romance.

A Striking Make-Up

Miss Crawford plays the disfigured Anna Holm, wearing in the opening scenes a make-up reminiscent of one of Lon Chaney's horror disguises. Later she appears in gorgeous costumes as a beautiful woman. Melvyn Dougla plays the surgeon who restores her beauty, while fearing he is loosing a fiend upon society, but who later figures in her regeneration. Conradt Veidt has a powerful role as the crim- in[illegible]dman. [illegible]guished supporting cast features Oso Massen, Reginald Owen, Albert Bassermann, Marjorie Main, Donald Meek, Connie Gilchrist, Richard Nichols, Charles Quigley and Gwill Andre.

Thrills include a perilous ride in an iron cage on a cable over a roaring forge, a mad race with the madman in sleighs with galloping horses through a snow-covered forest and spectacular skiing thrills. Dramatic highlights include the surprise witness in the murder trial, rescue of the child from his would-be murderer, and other episodes Elaborate settings and costumes are used.

Gay Film for Belle

Laughs and romance will be the Belle Theatre's added feature offering when Warner Bros.' latest comedy film, "Thieves Fall Out," starts its local run. In keeping with his policy of showing the best in comedy, Manager Forhan has booked "Thieves Fall Out," a mirthful story of how a boy's desire to get ahead in the business world got him into a series of hilarious jams. The picture stars Eddie Albert and Joan Leslie with Alan Hale, Jane Darwell, William T. Orr, John Litel and many others in the supporting roles.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Ninotchka"

Starring vivacious and glamorous Garbo portrayed in the role of a foreign emissary for her beloved Communistic Russia, determined in her mind and soul toward the betterment of living conditions for the masses in her native land, the current picture attraction at the McCarthy Theatre, "Ninotchka" is one of the biggest romantic surprises of the season.

Personally directed by Ernest Lubitsch, the picture depicts romantic Melvyn Douglas as a member of former Russian nobility who was forced to flee his country with the purge arising out of the Red rebellion. He, with other members of the nobility flee to Paris where later he accidentally meets Garbo, sent to Paris as "envoy extraordinary" from her native Russia.

Douglas' flirtatious attempts to win the love of the unresponsive Garbo, who thinks of nothing but the welfare of her country, evoke much merriment while the hilarity is added to by the many humorous complications in which the pair find themselves. Douglas finally breaks the ice which surrounds Garbo, but she is forced to flee Paris and go back to Moscow when complications arising out of the disappearance of the Russian crown jewels threaten exposure of her actions in the French capital.

The picture, which is a typically racy and spicy Lubitsch love affair, ends in the approved manner when some sly wire-pulling by the lovesick Douglas, causes Garbo to be sent to Constantinople in the interests of her country.

As a companion feature, the mystery story, "Stranger on the Third Floor" provides exciting entertainment with the addition of latest Fox News.

LUCKY FOR LOVE

by JANE DIXON

CHAPTER TEN

Double Purpose

After supper Marilyn called her mother and father into the living-room. She handed her father the letter from Clarco.

"Read it, Dad," she said. "Read it aloud."

Marilyn does not remember much of the scene that followed except that her mother was tearful, her father monosyllabic and firmer than she had ever known him to be.

"I'm proud of you, daughter," he said in his quiet way. "It's your chance. Don't let it slip past you. Don't wait until it's too late. Take it, daughter, take it. Go to New York."

"Thank you, Dad," said Marilyn, realizing for the first time how deep was her love, her pity for her father. "I will. I'll go, and I'll make you and Mums really proud of me."

"When would you be going, Baby?" Mrs. Marsh asked. Tears dried in her eyes but they were still falling in her heart.

"As soon as ever I can," Marilyn said, with a show of eagerness. "Clara will be staying only a few days longer so I'll have to hurry. I can leave tomorrow, be there the next morning. I'll take a change of clothes. That will be enough. If I decide to take the position with Clarco, you can pack my things Mums, and send them on to me. I'll leave her a list of what I'll need, in case I decide to stay. Tomorrow morning early I'll run down to the Bon Ton and explain everything to the manager. we won't tell another soul, except Sall Mecham. Let's make it a surprise for the folks in Millville."

At three in the morning, Marilyn placed the list she was to leave for her mother on the painted dresser, worn blue relic of her girlhood. Her suitcase was packed. She had set the house of her youth in order. Tomorrow she would leave it, no longer a nestling. She would begin a new house, the dwelling place of her womanhood.

She was astir early. A wire to Al Mortino: "Arrive New York eleven a.m. tomorrow (Sunday) Penn Station. Thanks again. Marilyn Marsh."

The Bon Ton manager was reluctant to have her leave the store, though honestly pleased that she should meet with so rare an opportunity.

Only her mother, father, Bill and Sally Meacham were at the station to see her off. She tried, with fair success, to make her departure appear a gay adventure.

"Keep on being lucky, Lynn," Sally called through the window of the car. "If they need extra help at Cuarco, like an odd scrubwoman or a wastebacket emptier, tll 'em amout your old pal Sally."

The little group on the platform was a blur as Marilyn's train pulled away from the station.

The trip from Millville to New York, actually a fourteen-hour journey, was, to Marilyn, timeless—like a ribbon of film unwinding, without beginning and without end. Farmers in fields, cattle on hillsides, streams winding between the hills, automobiles crawling like giant beetles along roads. Villages, towns, cities. And always, as the train roared eastward, the volume of life increasing. More villages, towns, cities. More crawling beetles. More factories, mills, houses. Smaller yards backing up to the tracks. Smaller fields. Tractors in the fields. Vivid striped awning-decked chairs on farmhouse porches. Busses stopping at country crossroads to pick up girls in sport dresses and toeless shoes. Boys turning out of lanes in sport cars.

Change. Change had come into the shabby gray house with the green shutters. Swift shattering changes. As long as Marilyn could remember, day had succeeded day, night had come and gone, existence drifted by without event to mark his passing. Eggs and bacon, meat and potatoes, hominy grits and gravy. It was Sunday when one put on one's best dress, went to Sunday school, ate roast chicken and devil's food cake at half past instead of twelve o'clock. Tag at recess, high-school graduation, dances at Lakeside Pavilion and in Lodge Hall. Puppy loves that died aborning. Bon Ton book department. "No sir, we don't carry many classics but we will be glad to order them for you. Calls mostly are for fiction, modern fiction. Roger's Thesaurus? No, I'm sorry. There's one at the library if you'd care to go there. You're very welcome. Call again please."

People in the train coach were moving about now, putting on their hats, gathering their paraphernalia of travel. Marilyn did likewise, as one in a trance. The end of the journey! No, the beginning of the journey. Trains merely carried people to what they had to do.

"New York. New Y-O-R-K!"

Her bag? Oh yes, the porter had carried it to the coach platform. What if Al was not waiting for her? What if he was out of town, busy, did not get her wire? How would she go about getting to the hotel where Clara was staying? What if Clara had left for home?

The line of passengers moved along the aisles. Now she was on the platform. People crowded the long, concrete runway, hurrying, scurrying. Down the steps into the scurry. Some one caught her arm.

Hi, H.B! Is it you or am I a dreamer? Say something quick! I'm afraid to bat my eyes for fear you'll do a fade-out."

"Al you nice fool. Stop acting so silly. People will think we're crazy."

"The heck they will. They're too busy being crazy themselves to bother about us. Let me get your bag. You say which. Here, Red Cap, taxi, Eighth avenue side. Now then, my good woman, let me get a look at you. Hmmm. Terrific! How's it for breakfast?"

"Slow up, Al please. We can race another time. I had breakfast on the train. Is it far to Clara's hotel? Let's go straight there. We can talk on the way. Al, you're a dear to meet me. Probably the middle of the night, too, for you."

"Middle of the night, nix. I beat your train into the station by an hour. Sat up all night thinking of bright things to say to you as you stepped off into my arms, and I'll be a monkey's uncle if I didn't muff every one of them the minute you hove in sight."

"You did very well for one unused to public speaking." Al was fun. "Whoa! You're racing again. I never knew you to walk so fast. In Millville you had all the speed of a turtle."

"That was my role, Big Eyes. Bored city chap. Fed up with it all. Here we are. Climb in. Driver —" he mentioned a hotel facing Central Park—"and don't spare the horses. Comfy, Duchess? We can take our seats in the open there. Lots of good air and swell coffee."

"Al, don't think I'm ungrateful but if you don't mind I'd rather go straight to Clara's hotel. You can drop me there, then go for coffee."

"Sorry lady. No can do. I'm not yet convinced you're real. There's another little matter. I want to give you the latest reports from the scene of conflict, and take it from an old conflicter, H.B., this is a darberino. You seen before you a bruised and battered man. Amazons, my dear, Amazons. Only one Amazon, but she's as good as regiments. I've done everything but crack that gal Clara over the head with a bottle, but somehow she fails to appreciate my interest. What ho! Here we are. your hand, Duchess!"

"Did you wire Blondie you were coming?" he asked.

"No. I thought it better to—surprise her." Marilyn said.

"Won't she be pleased! Especially after that magnum she punished last night."

"Magnum? I don't know what you mean—"

"Skip it. You'll learn all too well if you flock around with Blondie. I have a deep-seated conviction, Little One, that your fair sister would rather not entertain visitors from home right now. She's not in the mood. She's taken a notion the old home town is full of plugs and poison ivy. My suggestion is that you stop right here, out of the zone of fire. Her hotel is just around the corner. That way you can drop in on each other for friendly little visits.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was opening his letters at breakfist, saying to me, Well, here's an odd one, according to this letter there's some clothes waiting for me at Bird and Linnetts and they cant understand why I dont stop in there and pick them up.

Are you sure you haven't absent mindedly bought any clothes lately? ma said, and pop said, No and I dont expect to. I've still got 2 suits from year before last that are practically bran new. Why, you can almost still read the labels inside the coat collars, he said.

Then there can only be one expilination, ma said. Of course it takes you men with your massive brains to always think of the first thing last. I mean the letter is obviously addressed to somebody elts, she said, and pop said, It says Mr. Willyum P. Potts, that's what everybody calls me for want of a better name.

Well, that is a mistery, ma said. I wonder if you could of won some kind of a contest with a new suit of clothes as a prize? she said, and pop said, Now that's a thought have you been entering any contests and signing my name?

o,r's

Certainly not, ma said. The last contest I entered was the slogan contest for Fluffed Oatsies, and I still feel I morally won it, no matter what the judges decided. Read me that letter for land sakes, she said.

Wich pop did, being, Deer Mr. Potts, Our records show that you haven't paid us a visit lately and we beg to remind you that our ready made clothes fit men of every size practically without alternation, so all you have to do is step in our hospital doorway and pick out your suit of clothes according to the dictates of your own fancy in fabric, stile and price.

An avvertizement for land sakes, ma said, and pop said, Oh, do you think so?

And he tore it in half to prove what his answers was.

Butter Prices Continue Strong

Toronto, July 29—Butter continued to forge ahead under light offerings on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, while eggs were readily absorbed at firm and unchanged prices.

Spotty demand was enough to take care of prevailing light available supplies on the butter market. Buyers in need of Ontario No. 1 grade solids were forced to pay 36 1-4 cents a pound. Prints to the retail trade held unchanged at 37 1-2 cents a pound for top grades.

Trading on the egg market remained fairly active and the small arrivals of fresh receipts were barely sufficient to cover local requirements. Prices in both sections of the market, however showed no change from Saturday's closing quotations.

THEY SERVE IN BATTLE OF ATLANTIC

In a deep subterranean operations room these women are on duty day and night at the teleprinters which transmit and receive signals from naval bases all over Britain, carrying vital information on the Battle of the Atlantic. The women are of the Women's Reserve Naval Service (Wrens). Big thrill of their job is when one receives a flash that another U-boat has gone to Davy Jones.

Unemployment At Its Lowest In Australia

Unemployment returns for Australia for the first quarter of this year showed an all-time low level. Unemployment among trade unionists was only 5.3 per cent of membership, the lowest figure recorded since 1911 when records were first kept. It is estimated that of the total employable population of the Commonwealth only 3 per cent were out of work at the end of March. At least 300,000 jobs in defence industries have been filled by men and women who were not working when the war began.—Commercial Intelligence Journal.

BRITAIN'S FORCES

Battle of Atlantic

Mr. Churchill declared that the Battle of the Atlantic, "although far from being won, has partly through American intervention moved impressively in our favor."

Other credits on the British ledger, he said, were the breaking of German air superiority and the reduced number of German air attacks on Britain.

"But the worst is not over," he added. "The vast mass of destructive munitions which they (the Germans) have made or captured, the courage, skill and audacity of their striking forces, the ruthlessness of their centralized war direction . . . the resources of many lands which may to some extent become available to them forbid the slightest relaxation."

Production

Appointment of a Minister of Production "would be a farce and a fraud on the public," because it would be merely a nominal office and would cause delay and would undermine ministerial responsibility.

If the British people are convinced by "those to whom it has given confidence that the system is working well and smoothly, a change for the sake of change is to be deprecated," he said.

"We are not a totalitarian state, but we are steadily and, I believe, as fast as possible, working ourselves into a total war organization.

"The picture so luridly drawn of chaotic and convulsive struggles of three supply departments without guidance or design is one which will no doubt be pleasing to our enemies and happily has no relation to the facts.

"Such troubles as there were 12 months ago have largely died away. Our American friends and helpers are making a great effort for the common cause."

War Industries Move Smoothly

British war industries were said to be moving along smoothly and he declared that during the past four months there was no question of departmental rivalry to be ironed out.

"At the present moment there is no dispute about priorities," he said.

In answer to recent charges made in Commons that United States-built aircraft had been delivered without essential spare parts, the source said there wasn't any truth in them.

"All British orders for United States aircraft have been placed with spares," he said. "There has been no failure or oversight of the kind."

Growth of Striking Air Power

British production, exclusive of imports from the United States, has in the last 12 months doubled the R.A.F.'s power to bomb Germany at a 1,500 mile range, he said.

The combined naval and commercial shipbuilding is keeping pace with war demands, he said, adding:

"Active progress is bigger not only in scale but in tonnage and daily volume of execution that it was at any period in the last war."

Bomber Output Doubled

British munitions factories in the last three months have produced 1,000 more field guns than during "the Dunkerque period," and British bombers output has been doubled, he said, adding:

"This time next year we shall double it again and again and in the next months again redouble it."

Careless criticism of the British war industries, he said, has had a bad effect abroad.

The impression that it was "a muddled flop" was declared to have been spread to the United States and Australia through such statements as that made recently by a member of the House of Commons, Sir J. S. Wardlaw-Milne, Conservative, that British factories were working to only 75 per cent of their capacity.

This, he declared, was "meat and drink" to United States isolationists.

"Americans are asked to pay higher taxes, to give up food, to alter their daily lives, to reduce their holidays and to go without pleasures of all kinds in order to help Britain and they are deeply disturbed when they are told, on what seems to be a high British authority, that we are only making a three-quarters effort to help ourselves."

GERMANS

"The U.S.S.R., China, the United States of America and the British Empire are surely pretty formidable obstacles to aggression," he added.

"Europe after the war," he said, "will be in a state of exhaustion, short of the materials necessary for reconstruction, torn by hatreds, confused and doubtful of the road to follow. Then there will be a great task to be undertaken, and as we believe the United States of America will help us—is indeed helping us—to defeat Germany, so we hope that they will work with us in keeping, through the generations, the peace we shall have won."

Hitler's Purpose in Russia

Hitler embarked on the Soviet campaign, the Foreign Secretary declared, in an effort to smash quickly the Russian military power, and then, "in a pose of the champion of anti-Communism, to offer a German peace to the world."

Hitler's Time-Table Out of Joint

The German time-table for the subjugation of Russia "is plainly out of joint," but the "peace blitz" by means of which Hitler "hopes to keep his promise to the German people to end the war this year with a victory" is certain to be offered soon, Mr. Eden said.

He went on: "Peace with Hitler is a contradiction in terms. There can be no peace with such a man, there can only be a truce, an uneasy truce which will give him time to overhaul and oil his war machine, a truce which will give the German people a breathing space before he and they resume the war."

To accept Hitler's peace terms would mean that "every nation would have to remain at its war stations," the Foreign Secreatry said, and added:-

Germans Must Unlearn

If we are to have peace in our lifetime the German people must learn to unlearn all they have been taught not only by Hiler but by his predecessors for the last 100 years, by so many of their philosophers, teachers and disciples of blood and iron. They can never even start to do this until Hitler, the great war-maker, has been exposed as a fraud and deposed as a failure. "We are determined upon the destruction of Hitler, his regime and all he stand for. For we know that until this is achieved no foundation will exist upon which a lasting peace may be built."

Hitler is "the expression of the present German will and temper, which has shown itself over and over again in German history... so long as he is in power the German people will continue to expect war. They will begin again to prepare for war. They will wish and work for war...You cannot get peace for one of the greatest warmakers the world has ever seen," Mr Eden said.

The Foreign Secretary concluded with a statement that at present the war developments are "by no means wholly unfavorable to us."

CAMRANH BASE IN INDO-CHINA OCCUPIED BY JAPS

Landing of Main Japanese Force at Saigon On Wednesday

SAIGON MAIN GATEWAY

Saigon, French Indo-China, July 29—(AP)—Japanese armed forces today occupied Camranh naval base on the East Coast of Indo-China.

Guarded by warships, a fleet of transports slipped into Camranh Bay and the Japanese occupation of southern Indo-China went into high gear as troops swarmed ashore.

The base, situated within airplane range of the British stations at Singapore and Hongkong boasts two splendid harbors and ideal natural defences in the mountains which encircle it.

Occupation of Camranh followed by 24 hours the arrival of Japanese forces at two other east coast bases in southern Indo-China—Tournaine and Nhatrang.

Japanese and French planes roared overhead in prelude to the landing of the main Japanese force tomorrow in Saigon.

Troopships with a warship escort were scheduled to reach Cap St. Jacques, below Saigon, tonight and to proceed up-river to Saigon tomorrow to disembark a force whose numbers still were unknown here.

Saigon will be the main gateway through which the Japanese will fan out to occupy other posts in Cochin-China and Cambodia. Garrisons will be stationed at Baria on the road to Cap St. Jacques and Mytho southwest of Saigon, while Cambodian cities to be occupied include Pnom-Penn, Siemreap and Ha Tien on the Gulf of Siam.

Dispatches from Hanoi said Japanese planes soon would be stationed at eight strategic bases dominating the eastern coast of Indo-China, the Thailand border and the upper half of the Gulf of Siam.

Saigon itself was calm but busy as preparations for reception of the Japanese were rushed to completion.

Newspapers advised against anti-Japanese demonstrations and said offenders would be severely punished.

It was learned the homes of many foreigners as well as French residents to Saigon would be requisitioned for Japanese officers four hundred French already have withdrawn from Cap St. Jacques to make way for Japanese occupation of their homes.

The Japanese also requisitioned large Saigon school for additional quarters.

DUKE OF KENT

After a brief rest the Duke will be asked to pass upon a draft itinerary drawn up for his tour by R.C.A.F. and government officials with the aid of his secretary, Mr. Lowther, who arrived in Canada last Thursday.

The Duke will remain in Ottawa a day or two before starting his westward journey which will include visit to Trenton, Camp Borden, Winnipeg, Regina, Moose Jaw, Brandon Calgary, Vancouver, Victoria, Edmonton, and other points. On the trip back East Toronto, Montreal and the Maritime Provinces will be visited.

All arrangements will, of necessity, be tentative because of the necessity of depending upon weather conditions since the tour will be entirely by air.

It was proposed this morning that the Duke would hold a press conference at his convenience some time today, probably late this afternoon.

Dinner to The Duke and Party

Tomorrow night the Duke and his party will be guests of the government of Canada at a dinner at the Country Club with Prime Minister Mackenzie King as host.

The Duke's arrival this morning took even government officials by surprise because of the secrecy which surrounded his departure from Britain.

Announcement of the Duke's coming tour was made in London and Ottawa last Wednesday when it was stated only that he would arrive in Canada "shortly".

Montreal, July 29.—(CP)—The Duke of Kent spent part of the time during his Transatlantic flight in the cockpit of the plane that brought him to Canada, officials of Atfero, the organization in charge of ferrying bombers across the Atlantic, said today.

The crossing was smooth and uneventful and the passengers were able to obtain "a good deal of rest" during the trip. Returning ferry pilots aboard the plane said that the Duke was "an ideal fellow-passenger".

Interested in Operation

The Duke showed great interest in the operation of the aircraft, officials said, spending "part of the crossing time in the cockpit, part lying down and sleeping, part sitting in the after-cabin". He appeared fresh after his trip.

When the Transatlantic plane landed at an Eastern Canadian Airport, the Duke was greeted by Harold M. Long and Capt. A. S. Wilcockson of Atfero.

Perfect weather prevailed as the Duke's plane taxied to a standstill on the Rockcliffe Field. The morning was cool and the sun shone brightly.

An official statement announcing the arrival said no fixed itinerary for the tour can be announced in advance as the Duke will travel by air and his moves will depend somewhat on weather conditions.

Will Visit Every Province

He will visit every province and a temporary schedule of engagements involving "a program as arduous and extensive as that which was undertaken by the King and Queen during the royal tour" will be presented to him for his approval.

"The major difference (from the royal tour) is that the visit of His Royal Highness is primarily service in character and is not to be regarded as one of state," said the statement.

"While to the degree that time and circumstances will permit, the Duke will make public appearances and inspect factories, shipyards, etc., the primary purpose of his trip is to see the operations of the air force and to give all the time possible to those duties."

His Royal Highness holds the rank of Air Commodore in the Royal Air Force and on the tour will inspect both training establishments forming part of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan and operational units of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

When the Duke approves a provisional itinerary will be made public which will be subject to changes from time to time.

It is understood the Duke contemplates a stay of about six weeks in Canada. So far as could be learned in advance of his arrival he has no intention of visiting the United States, nor are there any plans for a meeting between the Duke and his eldest brother, the Duke of Windsor, now Governor of the Bahamas.

There have been reports that the Duke of Windsor might visit his ranch in Alberta this summer and that his visit would be timed to provide opportunity for a re-union of the brothers there. They visited the ranch together in 1927 when the Duke of Windsor was Prince of Wales.

The time allowed the Duke from his duties with the Royal Air Force in Britain for this Canadian inspection trip would not permit a stay on this side of the Atlantic long enough for a tour of the United States, a spokesman said.

FOUR DIE WHEN CAR HITS TRUCK

Three Women and Man Victims of Accident Near Joliette, Quebec

L'Assomption, Que., July 29 (CP)—Four young residents of Joliette, Que., were killed last night when their automobile collided head-on with a truck on the Montreal-Joliette highway four miles north of here.

The victims were Mr. and Mrs. Oliere Masse, aged 27 and 26; Mrs. Maurice Gingras, 25, and a Miss Normandin, aged about 19. Three of them were killed instantly while the fourth—Mrs. Masse—died in hospital in Joliette an hour after the accident.

Police said the mishap occurred while Masse was driving the car past two trucks—one towing the other in the direction of Joliette. They said Masse apparently did not see the second truck and swerved into the middle of the road too sharply after passing the first vehicle.

The car and the second truck locked mudguards, yanking the car beneath the heavy machine and crushing it with its four occupants.

BROTHERS KILLED AS CAR HITS TREE

Two Companions Are Dangerously Injured—One Drags Self Mile to Get Help

Alexandria, July 29—(CP)—Two brothers were killed and their two companions dangerously injured last night when an old car in which they were riding ran into a tree seven miles from here and burst into flames.

The brothers were Dermid and John J. MacPhee, sons of John MacPhee of Kenyon Township.

The injured men were Lloyd MacDonald, son of A. R. MacDonald, rural mail driver of Greenfield, Ont., and Dougald MacDonald, son of John D. MacDonald of the third concession, Kenyon Township.

It was not known which man was driving the car.

Lloyd MacDonald, although suffering from chest and back injuries dragged himself more than a mile from the scene of the accident to the home of Peter McInnis, two miles north of Greenfield, to tell of the accident. It was believed the accident happened probably two hours before.

Coroner J. Howard Munro of Maxville, Ont., and Provincial Constable R. H. Hawkshaw of Alexandria went to investigate.

Dougald MacDonald was reported suffering from a possible fractured skull in addition to body injuries.

Strike Over Question of Negotiation

The huge plant, employing about 2,800 persons on war orders, was strike-bound for three days last April and until the Dominion Government stepped in and appointed E. J. Brunning as controller. The plant works on a 24-hour basis.

The latest controversy centred around the union's demand that company representatives be authorized to negotiate with a committee apponted by the union, whether or not members be employees of the plant. A proposal by Labor Minister McLarty that "a committee of employees elected by the union" meet with A. P. Gill, assistant controller, were termed "unsatisfactory."

Employees met Sunday and voted to strike at 11 p.m. last night if by two o'clock in the afternoon a company representative with power to negotiate and sign a collective bargaining agreement did not meet wtih a union committee.

Following a conference with Mr. Gill, the committee named at Sunday's union meeting, C. H. Millard, executive director of the S.W.O.C., told the men that the deputy controller declared he had no authority to negotiate with them, nor could he guarantee that Mr. Brunning would see them Wednesday. The strike vote was taken half an hour later.

Would Meet on Wednesday

At Ottawa, earlier in the day, Mr. McLarty telegraphed his offer, adding that if union employees were unable to reach an agreement with Mr. Gill, the controller would meet them Wednesday.

Millard told the workers he was not satisfied that the Government or Mr. Brunning were doing the honest thing in regard to collective bargaining. "I do not want to see you do anything that is going to curtail production, for it's a mighty serious matter."

Mr. Millard, not employed at the plant but selected by the union as a member of the committee to conduct negotiations for the employees, told the men it was up to them to make up their minds and the strike vote was taken.

Queen Elizabeth Practises With Rifle And Revolver

London, July 29 (CP)—Coached by War Office experts, the Queen has become a good shot with both rifle and revolver.

She has practised daily on the miniature range used by the Home Guard in the grounds of Buckingham Palace.

The Queen used ordinary service weapons—the .303 rifle fitted with a Morris tube to take smaller ammunition and the .38 revolver of the type issued to officers.

The Duchess of Kent also has become an expert revolver shot.

16 Degree Drop In Temperature Within Few Minutes

Campbellford, Ont., July 29 —CP)—This area Monday had about everything the weather man has in his bag of tricks.

Around noon the district was in step with most other districts in Ontario with the thermometer registering in the 90's.

A few hours later the district was hit by an electrical storm, followed by high winds and rain of cloud burst proportions. During the wind storm, a Hydro pole was blown down and disrupted the town's electric supply for a short time.

Then came a cool wave which dropped the temperature 16 degrees within a few minutes.

LEWIS DENOUNCES POWER PROJECT AS ECONOMIC THREAT

Says it Would Throw 50,000 Coal Miners Out of Work

REFERS TO CANADA

Washington, July 29—(AP)—Declaring that the St. Lawrence power project would throw 50,000 coal miners out of work, John L. Lewis, President of the United Mine Workers' Union, denounced the development before the United States House of Representatives Rivers and Harbors Committee yesterday as an "economic menace."

Lewis lashed out at Leland Olds, chairman of the Federal Power Commission. A "libel on intelligence" was Lewis' description of Olds' testimony that the Hydro-Electric development in the Tennessee Valley had increased the consumption of coal more than ten times.

Says Electricity Displaces Coal

"Chairman Olds and his statisticians can multiply 10 1-2 times nothing until they grow beards," he said, "but they cannot deny the fact that the production of electricity by water power does displace coal. Moving manufacture from one section to another does not necessarily mean increased production for the nation as a whole."

"We cannot understand," he remarked, "why Congress would undertake this project when on the face it would create unemployment and open up part of the country to foreign economic invasion. Why make an American idle and put to work a man in foreign land?"

Denies Value in National Defence

Denying the $285,000,000 power and navigation project was essential to national defence, Lewis declared that it would be kicked out the window without ceremony if a sane appraisal and simple economic yardstick could be utilized to determine its merits.

"The methods of intimidation being employed by the waterway's sponsors", he continued, "are designed to enlist and force patriotic pressure to wilt the opponents, alleging that our foreign foes great or imaginary must not learn of any disunity in the great preparedness program. The new dress of defence necessity is calculated to lift the proposal from the mire of the monstrous and uneconomic and make those who know better accept it as an essential arm of National Defence".

Claims Canada 'Lackadaisical' About it

Lewis declared that although the project is being pushed as a defence necessity in this country, which is at peace, Canada, which is at war, is "lackadaisical" about it.

"Nobody knows whether Canada is going to ante or not", he said. 'Canada can renege without impairing its honor. There is nothing in the proposal that makes it compulsory, forcing Canada to take part or to spend money. In fact those who should be in the know assert that Canada is just a party to the proposal at this time as a wartime favor—window dressing in order that the project's sponsors might be better fortified to befuddle the American people".

Favors Post-War Program

Instead of considering a project that would create more employment, Lewis said, Congress should be giving its attention to a post-war program to cushion the economic shock he said would follow the cessation of hostilities abroad. He warned that after the war the world would be practically on a barter basis, with other nations "having nothing to sell but labor".

"Yet we propose to spend $300,-000,000 or $1,000,000,000 to provide them with a new channel to the interior of our country so their ships can get in there easier", he said. "It just doesn't make sense".

Lewis said the Great Lakes area had no advantages to offer in shipbuilding because it could not produce ocean going vessels without the government first spending huge sums of money to deepen existing harbors.

The mine union chief said the Great Lakes area provides a market for 95,000,000 tons of American coal and warned that development of the seaway would open up the market to "debasement and looting" by foreign coal producers.

MORE STATE BEER

Carlisle, England (CP)—The government took over a brewery and public houses in this area in the First Great War because of excessive drinking. The brewery and licensed trade are still state-owned and now supplies are to be increased to provide sufficient drink for evacuees.

MORNING ATTACK ON FAMOUS PARK

Home Guard Paratroops "Defend" Hyde Park in Wee Sma' Hours

London, July 29 (CP)—Hyde Park where soldiers stroll with their sweethearts in the twilight and soap-box orators give vent to their opinions, became a battle-field for a pre-dawn exercise to test defences of the area.

About 100 "paratroops," members of the Home Guard, "attacked" 90 minutes before sunrise. Only indications of their presence were shadow forms and occasional flashes of signal lamps among the trees.

The "enemy" split up into widely separated groups of six to 10 men each, armed with automatic weapons. Using the cover of trees and trenches, they merged into four parties for attacks on defensive positions from different directions.

It was a surprise attack for the defence, told to expect an exercise some time during the week, but not given the hour or day on which it would come.

They were ready for the assault, however, and before it was light disposed small units on the outskirts of their area and were prepared for the main attack when it came at dawn.

Indian Health Is Improving

Ottawa—Indian health in Canada is improving, reports the Indian Affairs Branch of the Department of Mines and Resources. A steady increase in the Indian propulation, now exceeding 118,000, during the past ten years indicates the value of preventive medical action in combating disease on the Indian reserves. With few exceptions, reports from the various agencies throughout the Dominion for the month of May show only minor ailments, no epidemics and a general change for the better.

Market progress has been made in combating tuberculosis among the Indians. In Ontario the Six Nations Reserve of 6,000 people is now free of this disease, and out of a total of 1,892 Indians examined during the autumn of 1940 in boarding schools, day schools, and on reserves in Saskatchewan only 25 active cases were found. Sulphanilamide treatment has greatly decreased the prevalence of trachoma on the Indian reserves.

In safeguarding the health of the Indian population, the Department employs about 500 doctors and dentists on whole or part-time work, and maintains a number of hospitals and a small but efficient field nursing service. It supplies medicine both by central purchase and local prescription, and engages in every activity relating to the health of about 800 separate Indian communities.

Pied Piper of Leola, S.D.

From "Homesteaders of McPherson County," by the South Dakota Writers' Project.

C. W. Hawes, of Deola, S.D., ran a livery stable in the early days of that city. He received a communication one day in April, 1903, from one G. A. Tolbett of Chicago, appointing him local representative of the Australian Rabbit Extermination Company.

The letter outlined the company's plan to exterminate the rabbits in Australia by shipping in live gophers from America, inoculated with a disease fatal to rabbits but harmless to the gophers.

Hawes was asked to buy live gophers for the company and hold them until Tolbett should arrive to ship them east for inoculation, before they were sent to Australia. He therefore inserted the following advertisement at his own expense in the McPherson County Herald on April 23, 1903:

> 10,000 — LIVE GOPHERS WANTED — 10,000. We will pay 25c apiece for female and 15c for male gophers delivered at Leola House on May 2, 1903.

Gophers were brought in by the hundreds, in buckets covered with screen wire, and wooden boxes and crates nailed shut with lath.

Boys and girls, men and women snared gophers with care, for no crppled or harmed gophers were to be accepted.

Came May 2, the day appointed for Tolbett's arrival. The frame livery barn, covering a large part of a city block, was stacked full of crated gophers all the way to the roof. Crates were even heaped on the front porch of the hotel.

A crowd gathered, waited to be paid, finally grew impatient. No representative of the Rabbit Extermination company arrived by stage.

The gophers were still on hand. More time passed. The captive and poorly-fed rodents grew very hungry. A terrible odor filled the air.

What to do? No word had come from the Rabbit Exterminating company. At last Hawes hacked off lath, ripped off screen wire, and turned the gophers loose.

They swarmed out and spread over town, nibbling off early garden stuff. Hawes lost all his money and whatever popularity he had.

It was not long afterward that Leola folk learned that the whole affair was a practical joke played on Hawes by William Cochrane, a young Easterner who had come west for his health and was employed as principal of the Leola schools. Through a friend in Chicago he had carried on correspondence with Hawes and persuaded him to insert and pay for the gopher advertisement in the Leola paper.

Will Replace Percentage of Imported Oils With Domestic Animal Fats in Canada

Ottawa, July 29—Canadian shortening manufacturers who have heretofore used only imported vegetable oils in their product will, in the near future, replace a percentage of the imported oils with domestic animal fats.

This announcement, made Monday by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, expressed the Board's gratification at the co-operation given by the shortening manufacturers in working out the practical application of the import restrictions under the War Exchange Conservation Act.

Prior to the outbreak of the present war 75 percent of Canada's vegetable oil imports came from within the Empire. Now that situation is reversed. Almost all these oils come from non-British countries, and many of them from the far distant Netherlands, East Indies, Brazil, and China, necessitating not only the use of valuable exchange but placing a severe strain on restricted shipping facilities.

Shortening using a mixture of vegetable oils and animal fats has been sold in Canada for some time and, in the United States, has enjoyed a wide market for many years.

Smolensk Seen As Vital in Russian Defence

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON)

Washington, July 29 (AP)— The German high command's prediction of quick victory in the battle of Smolensk seems premature; but it cannot be ignored. It might mean the shattering of the main Russian defense bastion and exposure of Red Armies to encirclement on a gigantic scale.

Presumably that is what the Hitler headquarters announcement is intended to forecast. It says Russian efforts to relieve "entrapped" comrades were beaten off, and a Berlin report tells of the destruction of a Russian division "east of Smolensk."

However, if the Russians fail to hold Smolensk their greatest danger would seem to be to the south rather than the east. So far as meagre and confusing accounts of the situation now indicate, Russian lines behind the Dnieper River are still intact from Smolensk westward to Orsha, thence south to Mogliev.

This great triangle of the Dnieper bend centring at Orsha is the main north-central bastion of the Stalin Line defenses for Moscow. Without question powerful Russian forces are massed within it, and complete German mastery of Smolensk would threaten them with encirclement.

The main highway and railroad to Moscow, still a long 230 miles east of Smolensk, runs eastward and slightly north from that junction point. South and southwest from Smolensk, however, a trio of railroads and highways fan out to Roslavl and Bryansk and, east of those junctions, to Ershovka and other points, intercepting communications with Moscow from the whole Russian Dnieper front.

Should the Red Army defense at Smolensk crumble, a huge Nazi turning movement southward far behind the Dnieper front would be possible. There are strong indications that the original Nazi plan called for a simultaneous breaching of the Dnieper line at Smolensk and at Mogliev, about as far south down the river from the Orsha bend as Smolensk is east up the river from the point. However, even by Berlin reports, that jaw of the trap has been long stalled at the river.

Might Turn South

The German alternative in the event of a decisive victory at Smolensk might be a vast southward turning movement toward Roslavl and Bryansk to get behind the Russians on the Mogilev-Orsha-Smolensk triangle before they could retreat. Berlin commentators hint at some such development. They are stressing, for German listeners, the argument that territory, even the taking of Moscow, means little in this war. The Hitler objective is destruction of the Red Army in the field, they contend. And failure of that army to cling to the Dnieper crossings might well prove fatal to Russians hopes of a further general retreat in the centre.

Against this estimate of the possible German strategy, a Berlin report of another Red Army division destroyed by panzer attack somewhere east of Smolensk is to be accepted with caution. It was described by the Nazis as a division rushed westward from Siberia to help stem the tide of German advance toward Moscow. Prisoners were reported to have said they had been brought 4,000 miles to enter the Battle of Smolensk.

It does not sound convincing. The Russians have no shortage of manpower to warrant so fantastic a movement of troops to reinforce the west front. Moreover, Moscow must be highly uncertain as to Japan's course, and so it is unlikely that the Siberian army would be weakened except as a last resort.

Gold Output Grows in N.W.T.

Ottawa, Canada—New gold is being produced in increasing quantities in the Northwest Territories, reports the Department of Mines and Resources. Preliminary figures place the output for the first half of 1941 at 31,001 ounces as compared with 24,799 ounces in the first six months of 1940, an increase of 6,202 ounces.

Four mines are now producing — the Con, Negus, and Rycon in the Yellowknife area, and the Slave Lake Gold Mines property on Outpost Island.

In response to the war-time demand for gold, the capacity of the mill at the Con mine is being increased from 100 to 350 tons daily. Development work is going ahead at other properties, which are expected to enter production shortly. Ptarmigan Mines Limited is installing a 100-ton per day mill, Thompson Lundmark Gold Mines Limited is putting in a 150-ton mill, and a 25-ton mill is being installed at the Giant Yellowknife Gold Mines Limited property.

Hitler Loses Wheat

One aspect of the delayed German blitz into Russia was in everybody's mind when the storm broke, but has been sidetracked by more exciting developments. This is the Ukraine wheat. It was pointed out as another example of devilish Nazi ingenuity or ingenious Naiz deviltry that the attack on Russia was begun while the Ukraine wheat fields were still green and difficult to set on fire by the retreating Russans in a scorched-earth campaign.

Five weeks have now passed and the Germans still stand on the edge of the Ukraine. Five weeks of high Russian temperatures followed in the last two weeks by heavy rains are wonderful growing and ripening weather, as we have noted at home. So today the Ukraine wheat is no longer too green—to be cut and sent away by undefeated Russians, or to be burnt by retreating Russians.

In other words, whatever may be the future course of the campaign, one very important thing has already happened. Hitler was expected to make himself master of the Ukraine food supply at the usual astonishingly low blitz cost in German blood. By now he has paid a very big price in German blood and the Russian wheat has eluded him.—New York Times.

Making Man Power of U.S. Fit

Army records show that over 40 per cent of our drafted young men are unfit for military service because of uncared-for disease and physical disability. In other words, out of every million called to the colors 430,000 should receive medical or surgical attention. We cannot console ourselves with the finding that the oculist and the dentist could easily restore about 60,000 of these 430,000 victims of neglect to the duties of civil life. The fact that there remain 370,000 who should undergo treatment in a hospital is alarming enough. The preservation of our man power is vital to national defense.

What shall be done? To answer that question a Commission on Prysical Rehabilitation, composed of distinguished physicians and headed by Dr. George Baehr, has issued a brief report. It recommends that voluntary rehabilitation be undertaken with Federal assistance. Since the Army has collected the medical facts, the commission suggests that its forms should indicate whether or not the rejected can be restored to health, and that duplicates be made available to rehabilitation agencies.

It is clear that at this stage the commission could hardly do more than outline the problem, indicate its national character and stress the importance both of heightening the effectiveness of our available man power and of staving off the disabilities of mildle life by preventive measures. No doubt definite plans will be proposed to Congress. But before Congress acts we need a clearer picture of the necessary administrative machinery than we now have. Clarity is essential before legislation is enacted, and this because already overburdened taxpayers must pay the bill and because rehabilitation will necessarily constitute the first large-scale experiment in public medicine that we are likely to make.—New York Times.

Women Between 16 and 60 Cannot Leave Commonwealth During War

Canberra, July 29 (CP)—No Australian women between the ages of 16 and 60 will be allowed to leave the Commonwealth unless travelling on national duty or for exceptional reasons.

Australia intends to follow Britain's lead, where these prohibitions are already in force, and to conserve its woman-power along with its man-power.

It was found recently that nurses were asking for permission to go abroad, and, as their services would be valuable to Australia they were refused. It is pointed out that Britain is not anxious to take women unnecessarily.

Opportunity Offers For Canadians

The Mexican market for raw artificial silk at present offers great possibilities to Canadian firms in a position to supply this commodity, writes Mr. A. B. Muddiman, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Mexico City, in a report to the Department of Trade and Commerce. The cessation of supplies from the European countries that formerly exported to Mexico has led to an acute shortage that has seriously affected various Mexican manufacturers. Arrangements have been made with the United States for supplies that will alleviate their difficulties, but the demand is still heavy. Japan is taking full advantage of the situation.

Mexico's artificial silk industry has made considerable progress in recent years, Mr. Muddiman states, the value of production rising from 15.5 million pesos (the peso is worth nearly 23 cents) in 1935 to almost 22 million pesos in 1938; but the industry is still entirely dependent on imports for its supply of raw materials. In 1939 imports amounted to 5,439,416 kilos of raw artificial silk and 34,506 kilos of artificial silk thread. Previous to 1937 imports consisted chiefly of thread and came mainly from Italy, Japan, France, Switzerland, the Netherlands and the United States. Since 1937 the leading suppliers have been Italy and Japan, followed by the Netherlands, Belgium and the United States. In 1939, due to a barter arrangement, Italy supplied almost 73 per cent of the total imports of raw artificial silk.

New Microscope Magnifies Objects 100,000 Times

New York, July 29—A new giant electrical microscope that, in addition to magnifying submicroscopic objects to as high as 100,000 times their natural size, also can look inside bacteria, blood cells, and other biological substances in the realm of the infinitesimal, has been developed at the RCA laboratories, it was announced here yesterday.

The new explorer of the dark jungles of living substance is a modification of the electron microscope, which permits useful magnifications fifty times greater than is possible with the optical microscope, because electrons — infinitesimal units of electricity—are used in place of light rays, the glass lenses being replaced by magnetic and electrostatic fields. For example with the electron microscope a blood corpuscle may be enlarged to the size of a two-foot pillow, and a human hair to the size of a giant California red-wood tree.

By using as high as 300,000 volts, five times the voltage of the RCA electron microscope now in use, it becomes possible, the announcement said, "to see deeper into the submicroscopic world." The purpose of using such high voltage, it was added, is to permit exploration of thicker materials and organisms than previously have been suitable for inspection under the present type of electron miscroscope. The new high-voltage apparatus, it was said, makes it possible to penetrate objects two to three times as thick as heretofore. It was developed under the supervision of Dr. V. K. Zworykin, James Hillier and Arthur W. Vance.

Red blood cells and the thick blood serum, when viewed through 50,000-volt electrons, were completely opaque, it was reported, while with electrons of a 200,000-volt push these substances became transparent. A comparison between the micrograph of bacillus begatherium taken with 50,000-volt electrons and the same group of organisms taken with 200,000-volt electrons "showed that a considerable amount of structure becomes differentiated in the inner part of the organisms when it is viewed with the electrons of the higher voltage," the announcement said.

ALUMINUM PLANT IN QUEBEC RESUMES WORK

NAZIS DRIVEN FROM TRENCHES NEAR SMOLENSK

300 Men Seized Plant on Thursday, Shut-Down Caused

Munitions Minister Says Authorities Investigate Sabotage Possibility

TROOPS PATROL

By T. R. WALSH

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Arvida, Que., July 30 —(CP)— Steel-helmeted troops still patrolled the premises of Aluminum Company of Canada here today, but for the first time in almost a week this Lake St. John industrial town looked like its normal busy self as round-the-clock work resumed in the big plant, strike-bound since last Thursday.

Company officials, briefly ending a "no statement" policy on the strike, said they were conferring with the National Catholic Syndicate of Aluminum Workers which the unorganized strikers, before deciding yesterday to return to their jobs, designated as their representative.

Conferring With Syndicate

"I will take a few days before anything can be worked out regarding negotiations", Manager A. [illegible] Johnston said. "However, we are conferring with the syndicate and as yet anyway, there has been no request to the Dominion government for a Conciliation Board".

Today's 8 a.m., shift returned to work on schedule like yesterday's 4 p.m. and midnight shifts, completing the first 24-hour cycle since a walkout of 400 potroom workers six days ago precipitated a general strike of the plants 5,000 other employees and a sympathy strike by 4,000 men building an addition to the plant.

(In Ottawa last night, Munitions Minister Howe in the first public announcement of the production tieup, said 300 men seized control of the plant last Thursday in "a suspected case of enemy sabotage" and he declared that arrests "definitely will be made, if none have been made already.")

As far as could be learned here, no arrests had been made by noon today.

Syndicate Enters Picture

The Syndicate officially entered the picture last night when its executive held a 30-minute conference with Johnston regarding demands of the workers for wage increases and better working conditions.

To Be Represented by N.C.S.A.W.

The decision to go back to work was made at a mass meeting yesterday afternoon when the hitherto unorganized workers agreed to their being represented by the National Catholic Syndicate of Aluminum Workers to which some of the workers belonged. The N.C.S.A.W. executive is understood to be discussing whether it will apply to the Dominion Department of Labor for a Board of conciliation or whether it will negotiate directly with the company.

Before the mass meeting made its decision to be represented by the N.C.S.A.W. it was addressed by Gerard Picard organizer of the parent National Federation of Catholic Workers who had been invited to speak by the "committee-of-all" which had previously spoken for the men.

Howe Says Loss Will Amount to Thousands of Tons of Aluminum

METAL CONGEALS

BY JOHN DAUPHINEE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 30.— (CP)— The vast Arvida, Que., plant of the Aluminum Company of Canada, Limited, is back in operation today but more than a fortnight will pass before full production is again attained after a shutdown described by Munitions Minister Howe as "a suspected case of enemy sabotage".

To a hurriedly-summoned conference with a dozen newspapermen in his office Mr. Howe last night announced quietly that 300 men suddenly seized control of the plant last Thursday, and held control until they voluntarily left the property at 3 p.m. Sunday.

The $150,000,000 plant—"the biggest war industry we have in the country"—resumed operation yesterday afternoon. Royal Canadian Mounted Police are investigating for the Dominion and Col. A. Therriault, head of the Quebec Arsenal, for the province.

"Arrests definitely will be made, if none have been made already", the Minister announced. "Action will be taken against the men that stayed in the plant or such of them as the investigation shows to be responsible for the trouble".

Mr. Howe said he was advised most of the 5,000 workers at Arvida were taken as much by surprise as the company and seemed 'dazed' by the sudden 'organized attempt' to take control of the plant. When ordered by the ring-leaders to leave the plant they did so.

300 Workers Quit

By midnight the 300 employees, who made their first move by quitting their posts in the pot-room, the most vital section of the workings, had control of the entire plant and remained inside, locking

DUKE OF KENT SAYS BRITISH MORALE STRONG

Royal Visitor Drives Through Streets of Ottawa, Cheered by Crowds

1939 SCENES RECALLED

Ottawa, July 30.—(CP)—A long round of official inspections began today for the Duke of Kent, brother of King George who flew across the Atlantic yesterday to see Canadian Air Training establishments in operation and study other phases of the Dominion's war efforts.

At 11 a.m. E.D.T. he was to visit Ottawa headquarters of the Royal Canadian Air Force and meet senior staff officers. In the evening a dinner will be given in his honor by the Dominion Government.

Less than twelve hours after his arrival at suburban Rockcliffe Airport following his overnight flight from Britain, the Duke last night met about fifty Canadian newspapermen at a press conference at Rideau Hall, residence of the Governor-General where he is staying.

He said Britain had been severely damaged by German air attacks but that the raids had strengthened British morale instead of weakening it. There was no doubt in Britain of ultimate victory.

His Royal Highness indicated by his reply to one question that his brother, the former King Edward VIII who now as Duke of Windsor is Governor of the Bahamas, soon may visit Canada.

"Will you be meeting your brother in Canada?" he was asked.

"I don't think so," the Duke replied. "I will be gone before he arrives. I have only six weeks and must get back". He said he was not sure if he would have time to go to the United States.

The Duke wore the Service Flying uniform of an Air Commodore in the Royal Air Force for the press conference.

Ottawa, July 30 (CP)—A scene reminiscent of the royal tour in 1939 was witnessed this morning when His Majesty's brother, Prince George, Duke of Kent, drove through the streets to Royal Canadian Air Force headquarters to start his six-week tour of air establishments in Canada.

The Duke, accompanied by his aide, Group Captain Sir Louis Greig, drove in an open car with a single Royal Canadian Mounted Police constable on a motor cycle as escort, from Government House where he has been a guest since his arrival by air yesterday morning, to the Jackson Building, on Bank Street.

Crowds of people who had started gathering an hour before were packed about the entrance to the Air Force building, and at points

War May Force Changes of Source Whence Canada Buys Imports

By JAMES McCOOK

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 30—(CP)—Coffee, cocoa, drugs, spices, frankincense, and dragon's blood—Canada imports them all and war may well force some changes in the places she gets them, officials said today.

"Canadians could grow fat on the products of their own soil, but our diet for generations has depended on a vast variety of products from other lands," one official said.

"Take coffee, for instance. It comes from South American countries, from British India, Ceylon, Sumatra and the Celebes. In 1940 we imported 42,000,000 pounds, a reduction of about 5,000,000 pounds from 1939, and probably this reduction was due to the war. The 1940 cost was $3,660,000, down almost $1,000,000 from the previous year.

No Reduction in Tea Imports

"But tea is different. There was no reduction in 1940 and the imports required remained constant at about 43,000,000 pounds although the 1940 cost at $10,800,000 was about $800,000 higher than in 1939."

Cocoa and chocolate from the Gold Coast, Brazil, Ecuador and ... well over $2,000,000 a year.

Chinchona, which provides quinine and other drug supplies, is drawn from Java, India, Peru, Ceylon, Colombia and Jamaica. Canada's imports for drugs and medicines run to about $3,500,000 annually.

Rice From East

Indo-China, the Philippines and Japan were among the countries supplying rice. Jute for clothing and textiles, came from India, Ceylon and China and hemp and silk from the Orient. Central America contributed bananas and rubber.

Dragon's blood, the red resin of tropical trees used for coloring varnishes and in making wood polishes, is imported by the Dominion, and, in contrast, there is frankincense from Africa, India, Malaya, Indo-China and the Straits Settlements, with a dash of ginger from the West Indies and West Africa.

One indication of the changing trend in trade is the development of business between Canada and Latin America. Both North and South America have been affected by the loss of European markets and shipping difficulties. Trade Minister MacKinnon leaves on an extensive South American tour next month and will discuss trade

Japan Warned to Reflect While There's Still Time Whither Policy Leads

Foreign Secretary Eden Tells British Commons Japan Complains of Encirclement While Her Successive Acts of Aggression Draw Nations in Her Path Together in Self-Defence

London, July 30 (CP)—Foreign Secretary Eden today said only the future could tell if Japan will keep her promises to respect the sovereignty and integrity of French Indo-China and sharply warned the Japanese "to reflect while there is still time whither their present policy is leading them."

In a statement to the House of Commons which traced the British effort to avert Japanese occupation of air and naval bases in southern Indo-China, bases which he termed a threat to Great Britain, Mr. Eden said it was a matter of regret to the British government that relations with Japan had become strained.

He said "Japan complains of encirclement, yet it is Japan herself who, by successive acts of aggression, has drawn closer and closer in self-defence the countries which lie in her path and whose territories and interests are ever more sharply threatened."

Warns Leaders of Japan

Then adding "I cannot believe that statesmanship in Japan is entirely dead or blind," he warned those "responsible for the destinies of the Japanese empire" to take heed.

The minister made available an official statement which traced the British effort to avert the Japanese occupation of Indo-China.

He said ratification of the commercial treaty between Japan and Indo-China early in July was synchronized with the report that Japan contemplated acquisition of naval and air bases in south Indo-China and Thailand.

The British ambassador at Tokyo received a categorial denial of this report July 5 from the vice-minister of foreign affairs. The report persisted, however, and there followed a concerted Japanese press campaign designed to show Indo-China was threatened by Great Britain.

Japanese Agreement with Vichy

On July 25 the new Japanese minister for foreign affairs informed the British ambassador at Tokyo of the agreement reached with the Vichy government "strictly for defence."

"Sir Robert Craigie (British ambassador) at once pointed out in reply that the action was in direct conflict with the categorical denial . . . Sir Robert referred to frequent warnings which he had given . . . that occupation of naval and air bases in Indo-China must necessarily constitute a potential threat against British territory."

The Japanese government on July 26, continued the statement, issued an official statement protesting the friendly nature of their agreement with the Vichy goverment.

"The document also proclaims once more the intention of Japan to respect the territorial integrity and sovereignty of French Indo-China," Mr. Eden said.

"On this point let the future speak for itself."

U. S. GUNBOAT DAMAGED AS JAPS RAID CHUNGKING

United States Makes Representations to Japan Over Incident

WELLES' STATEMENT

Washington, July 30 (AP) — The United States lodged immediate representations with the Japanese government today over the bombing of the American gunboat Tutuila at Chungking.

Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, made announcement of the representations after a brief conference with the Japanese Ambassador, Admiral Kichisabura Nomura.

Welles declined to indicate the nature of the representations.

It was believed, however, that Welles, after conferring with President Roosevelt by telephone, had called in the Japanese Ambassador.

In announcing that representations had been made, Welles said the goverment had received a report that 26 Japanese bombers flew over the Chinese Capital dropping bombs near the Tutuila and other American property.

He said both the gunboat and the property were across the Yangtse River from Chungking proper, thus indicating the United States would contend there was no justification for a mistake by the Japanese bombers.

In connection with the Japanese Ambassador's unexpected visit it was recalled that the United States immediately called in the Japanese envoy and delivered strong representations at the time the U.S.S. Panay was sunk by Japanese bombers in December, 1937.

Several bombs were loosed by the raiders over the river patrol gunboat, a navy spokesman said, and the stern superstructure of the small vessel was damaged slightly.

The navy source stated his belief that the damage to the United States ship was incidental to the general raid on the Chinese capital city, although the vessel was in the so-called safety area across the river.

19 JAPANESE FISHING BOATS SEIZED IN SPRING

Though Vessels Were Seized in Hawaiian Waters on False Registry Charges, There Are Allegations of Espionage

6 VESSELS FORFEITED

Washington, July 30 (AP)—Seizure of 19 Japanese fishing boats in Hawaiian waters this spring was disclosed today by the United States Treasury Department.

Although the vessels were seized by customs agents on charges of false registry, several authoritative officials here alleged that the ships had been employed in espionage work.

Customs officers reported that, at the time of the seizures, no suspicious equipment was found on the craft. Other informed sources, however, asserted that during the period the ships were under investigation, it was established that they had carried expensive radio and photographic equipment, together with navigational charts of a type unconnected with fishermen's work.

These sources further alleged that most of the ships involved had at least one member of the Japanese naval reserve in their crews.

Seizures on Feb. 28 to March 3.

The seizures took place between Feb. 28 and March 3, and were apparently unrelated to any of the more recent developments in relations between the United States and Japan.

Six of the seized vessels already have been declared forfeited to the United States government. Seventy-one Japanese fishermen and three Honolulu fishing companies were indicated on the false registry charges.

The investigation was under direction of William Jennings Bryan, Jr., son of the great political figure of bygone years. Bryan is now collector of customs at Los Angeles.

The disclosure of the seizures was made in the annual report by Elmer L. Irey, coordinator of treasury law enforcement activities.

He explained that a 1793 law prohibits anyone but an American from owning an American flag ship. Investigation, he said, showed that the real owners of the boats were Japanese citizens.

The indictments charged conspiracy to violate U.S. navigation laws by the use of false bills of sale and false managing owners' oaths in registering the vessels, Irey's report stated.

POLISH-SOVIET PACT LIBERATES ALL PRISONERS

Wipes Out Territorial Changes in Poland Under 1939 Russo-German Treaties

RAISE POLISH ARMY

London, July 30 (CP)—A Polish-Soviet Russian agreement was signed at the British Foreign Office today.

The agreement grants an amnesty freeing all Polish prisoners in Russia and wipes out territorial changes in Poland resulting from the German-Russian treaties of 1939 partitioning Poland.

It also provides for the formation of a Polish army in Russia under a Polish commander to be subordinate "in an operational sense to the supreme command of the Soviet Union, upon which the Polish army will be represented."

Such an army would be recruited from among some 200,000 Polish prisoners of war in Russia.

The agreement is the result of several weeks of negotiation between Soviet ambassador Ivan Maisky and Gen. Wladislaw Sikorski, Polich prime minister and commander in chief.

Minister Defends Salaries Paid to U.S. Ferry Pilots

London, July 30 —(CP)— J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, Minister of Aircraft production, defended today the employment of 162 United States gferry pilots at annual salaries of nearly $8,000.

"I cannot get personnel from the air force who are wanted for other matters, and I have to get the best aviators I can and this is the only way I can do it," he said.

He had been asked by a House of Commons member if the work of United States pilots in ferrying planes to Britain was "five times as valuable" as that of British pilots flying "the same machines on active service in the face of the enemy."

Moore-Brabazon said that the American fliers were paid 1,937 pounds, 17 shillings, 9 pence (about $7,748) annually and that the wages were exempt from the British income tax.

There are also Canadian pilots and radiomen working on the ferry service but they were not mentioned in the House of Commons exchange.

SCHOOL NEARLY DESTROYED

Guelph, Ont., July 30 — (CP)— Central School here narrowly escaped complete destruction by fire today when flames swept through the main corridors but were cut off from entering class rooms by the doors being closed. An early estimate of the damage was set at $10,000. All available firemen and equipment were brought into use in bringing the blaze under control. Cause of the fire which started in the principal's office is unknown.

Orchestra Plays on U.S. Side of Border To Club Members on Canadian Side

Fort Fairfield, Me., July 30 —(AP)—A border complication involving a Canadian ban on a United States dance orchestra was written off as closed today as a result of Yankee ingenuity and a musical "pipeline."

Scene of the difficulty last night was the Aroostook Valley Country Club. Its clubhouse is on the Canadian side of the line, in New Brunswick, and its automobile parking space on the United States' side.

The occasion was the annual ladies' night of the Fort Fairfield Rotary and Lions Club. The clubs wanted to take their orchestra into the clubhouse but Canadian immigration authorities ruled that the musicians could not play in Canada for dancing.

For a time, the question of how to go on with the dancing part of the program and yet comply with the ruling perplexed the Fort Fairfielders.

The committee then assembled the parking lot and rigged up a public address system through which all the tooting, thumping and sawing was piped about 50 yards into the clubhouse.

Russian Tide Surges Westward, Foe Drives Halted

Nazi Tank Spearheads Are Driven Back in Places 100 Miles

9 MILLIONS IN BATTLE

Moscow, July 30—(AP)—The Red Army declared today it had hurled German infantry from trenches near Smolensk and some reports said Nazi tank spearheads had been driven back 100 miles from their deepest penetrations.

The Red Army tide, Russians said, is surging west. They declared the big German drives towards Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev were stalled and the Nazis were fighting to hold their ground against increasingly-heavy Soviet counter-attacks at key points along the vast front.

A Moscow communique reported "particularly heavy fighting" and heavy German losses in the Smolensk salient where "our units detrenched the enemy from their positions with a succession of counter-attacks."

Russians Deliver Heavy Blows

Heavy fighting also was reported raging yesterday near Zhitomir, gateway to the Ukraine, and in the north near Nevel and Novorzhev, halfway between Nevel and Porkhov.

Overnight, a morning war bulletin reported, "stubborn fighting" continued in the Nevel-Smolensk and Zhitomir sections. The communique said the Red air fleet was keeping up hard blows on German motorized and mechanized forces, artillery and air bases.

Vice-Foreign Commissar S. A. Lozovsky said 9,000,000 men were locked in battle along the front. He added that strong Soviet tank forces—with plenty of reserves whenever they are needed—had turned back the Nazi advance forces.

Nazis Admit Red Forces Have Taken Initiative But Call it 'Futile Costly'

'RELIEF ATTACKS'

Berlin, July 30 (AP)—Red army forces trying to rescue trapped Russian troops east of Smolensk were conceded by the German High Command today to have taken the initiative, but it claimed their effort "futile and costly."

The war bulletin asserted the Russian counter-offensive on that front, where the Germans have plunged a salient deep into the defences of Moscow, took the form of "relief attacks."

German spokesmen claimed Nazi advance units still were within about 130 miles of the Soviet capital in a deep battle area stretching from Mogilev, southwest of Smolensk, to the region of Vyazma, 100 miles to the east.

Usual Communique

Except for that one front the whole battle on the eastern front with the statement that "operations continued according to plan."

Farther north, on the line of approach to Leningrad, Russia's second largest city, German spokesmen claimed two Russian divisions had been wiped out west of Lake Peipus, in Estonia.

These sources declared the Russians had been blocked off from retreat by a German thrust across Estonia from Parnu and Viljandi in the southeast of the northwest shores of Lake Peipus. They reported hard, close-quarter fighting with grenades and automatic pistols.

Russian pressure in the Smolensk sector apparently came from the Red army line by troops attempting to storm through to the so-called encircled forces, not alone from the "surrounded" troops trying to burst out of the German ring.

"Renewed attempts by the opponent to liberate his forces encircled east of Smolensk by means of relief attacks have been repulsed," the communique said. "The enemy here has suffered severe losses."

Little Ill-Feeling Displayed by Finns

Helsinki, July 30 (AP)—The Finnish public today displayed few signs of ill-feeling towards Britain following the rupture of relations over the Russian-German war, and the Suomen Sosialidemokraatti, chief organ of the Social Democratic party, expressed the hope the breach would not be of long standing.

"Whatever happens our firm belief is that when this war some day is ended, the English and Finnish nations will again meet as friends," said the paper.

Pointing to former good cultural and commercial relations, the organ said "but outward factors beyond our control rolled boulders which form a separating wall between our countries."

Toronto, July 30 (CP)—With the exception of members of the Royal Canadian Air Force, all troops now housed in the Exhibition Grounds will be transferred until after this year's show is over, Elwood Hughes, general manager of the Canadian National Exhibition, announced today. Exhibition dates are August 22 to September 6.

Hopkins Flies To Moscow On Surprise Visit

Moscow, July 30 (AP)—Harry Hopkins, co-ordinator of the United States Lend-Lease program, arrived by plane on a surprise visit to the Soviet capital from London today, presumably to discuss with Russian officials the needs of the Red Army in its fight with Nazi Germany.

With him came two officers of the United States army, Brig.-Gen. Joseph McNarney and Lieut. John Allison of the Air Corps.

Presumably their discussions were designed to proceed concurrently with those in Washington between United States officials and Lt.-Gen. Filip Golikov and Engineer-Gen. Repin of the Soviet army who are there on a special mission.

(In London last Sunday Mr. Hopkins in a radio speech said "we in America are determined to give all possible aid to China and Russia—and immediately."

(It was said in London that he was believed to have left some time last night. It was said his plans were indefinite and it was not known there how long he would stay or whether he would return to the United States by way of London. He had been in London almost two weeks before making his flight to Moscow.)

AIRMAN ARRESTED FOR ATTEMPTING TO ENTER PARKED CAR

Observed riding a bicycle on Pinnacle Street shortly after 3.30 a.m. today John Rankin of the Mountain View R.C.A.F. base, commanded the attention of Sergeant Booth and P.C. Arnott, who were standing in front of the Police Station. The cyclist was seen to dismount from his bike and attempt to enter a parked automobile adjacent to LaPalm's warehouse. Constable Arnott immediately stepped across the street and placed the man under arrest.

At the police station he revealed his name was John Rankin of the R.C.A.F. base at Mountain View. Rankin also admitted to taking the bicycle he was seen riding from a parking position on Front Street. He was held in custody and today given into the hands of the Air Force service police and returned to his unit.

Otherwise no serious crimes was reported by either city or Provincial Police for the past few days.

HEAVY NIGHT'S RAIN BENEFITS LATE CROPS

Tomato, corn and other plant crops and late seeding received a growth impetus last night when a steady downpour of rain fell over the city and district.

Starting in early hours the rain fell almost steadily throughout the night, increasing in density towards morning.

Wells, creeks and other watering sources will reap a decided benefit from the rain, as will natural life in general.

Evidence of a heavy rainfall in the northern areas was seen today in the muddy condition of the water in the Moira River. Water levels had noticeably increased by noon today.

Man Escapes Custody While Awaiting Trial

Allegedly feigning illness and loss of memory, 49-year-old Percy H. Smith of Ottawa escaped from custody in Belleville yesterday while being held on a charge of fraud. Smith was remanded to the county jail on Monday after being arrested and charged with obtaining money by means of a worthless cheque. When arrested by city police Smith complained he was suffering from amnesia, but he was given into the custody of the county jail officials on remand.

On Tuesday Smith further complained of serious illness and following a consultation between Gaol Governor G. H. French and Dr. R. Anderson, gaol physician, on Smith's condition, it was unanimously decided to remove him to the Belleville General Hospital early Tuesday. Smith was placed in the institution but disappeared during the busy noon hour rush at the hospital and has not been heard of since.

Circulars describing Smith as a man 49 years of age, about five foot ten inches tall, and weighing 170 pounds were dispatched to several Ontario cities by city police who today revealed no report of Smith's disappearance from the hospital was made known to them until several hours after he was found missing.

When arrested it was alleged by police that Smith had deposited a cheque made payable to himself, into a local bank, later returning and withdrawing a lesser amount. The police alleged the original cheque tendered into his account was worthless.

Much New Construction And Alterations Are Planned at the O. S. D.

Extensive alterations to existing buildings at the Ontario School for the Deaf, together with the construction of a new drill hall and several other smaller buildings are planned in connection with the taking over of property by the R.C.A.F. to be used as a basic training school, it has been announced. Alterations to present buildings, including the re-wiring of several, is already underway, with the construction of new buildings scheduled to commence in the near future.

For the past two weeks, Mr. W. A. Watson, local architect, has been engaged on the premises in conference with officials of the R.C.A.F. in connection with the proposed alterations to the buildings formerly used by the School for the Deaf. Finkle Electric, local wiring contractors, have been engaged to rewire the buildings, while Hill-Clarke-Francis, construction contractors from New Liskeard, Ont., were the successful tenders for the general contracting work and will construct the new buildings necessary.

Several Forest Fires In Northern Ontario

Toronto, July 30 —(CP)— Several forest fires have broken out in Northern Ontario during the recent heat wave and some of them are developing dangerously, Lands and Forests Minister N. O. Hipel reported today.

A "dangerous situation" is reported in the Sioux Lookout district and two fires in the Red Lake division are said to be out of control. Ten new fires and two old ones are burning in the Lake St. Joseph division but they are all under 300 acres in size. Fire conditions in Port Arthur district are "unchanged" from last week with all the fires well under control.

Violent thunderstorms occurred in many parts of the Northern Ontario timberlands on Monday night and departmental officials fear that more fires may have been started by lightning. No such outbreaks, however, have so far been reported.

HASTINGS COUNTY ROADS

NOTICE TO TRACTOR AND THRESHING MACHINE OWNERS

The County in attempting to build up better surfaces for the travelling public have constructed several miles of thin low cost surfaces on certain sections of some County roads.

While these are strong enough to carry all car and truck traffic as well as hard wagon tires without injury, they will be badly cut and damaged by both gas and steam tractor lugs if the same are operated without protecting cleats when travelling over such surfaces.

The co-operation of the owners of all such machinery now that threshing season is at hand, is requested in the following ways:

1. Spade type lugs will not be permitted on such surfaces.
2. Owners of such machinery with flatter, duller, or wider types of lugs than mentioned above are requested to reach their destination by detouring around such surfaces whenever possible.
3. When the above is impossible moving is to be done very early in the morning or after dark when such surfaces are harder.
4. Whenever possible the outside wheel should travel on the shoulder of the road.

Roads specifically in mind are as follows:

1. Ridge Road (from Stirling to West Huntingdon.)
2. Roslin to Chisholm's Mills.
3. Corbyville to the Shannonville Side Road (4th. Concession.)
4. 1 mile only on the Belleville-Madoc Road near Moira Lake.
5. Madoc-Queensboro road from No. 7 Highway to Madoc Fair Grounds.

If owners co-operate they will not only eliminate the necessity of the County making and enforcing stricter regulations, but they will also earn the goodwill of the County taxpayer and the general motoring public.

W. L. LANGLOIS,
County Engineer.

No Funds to Fulfill Terms of $300,000 Will

Washington, July 30. (AP)—Rose Davies won't get that $300,000 bequeathed to her in the will of the late Edward B. McLean, the McLean family attorneys said today.

McLean, former Washington Post publisher, made Miss Davies, who he said "has given me her association and affection", a principal beneficiary of his will. Rose is the sister of Marion Davies, the former actress.

But all that Ned McLean wrote in his will, which was executed in 1932 shortly before he was adjudged mentally incompetent, is of no avail, the attorney said. McLean died Sunday.

Hogan & Hartson, representing the McLean family, said the will was "utterly ineffective for the simple reason that Mr. McLean had no property of any kind that he could leave to any one by will".

"Mr. McLean's father (the late John R. McLean) left his son an income for his life only", the attorneys' statement added.

Mrs. McLean is the owner of the famous Hope diamond.

McLean ordered in the will that a former valet, Martin Finn, receive $100,000 as well as two-thirds of the residue of the estate. He declared in it that if any of the heirs attempted to break the will they should receive nothing.

Kiwanians Discuss Karnival Plans

A surprise departure from the regular weekly luncheon program was sprung on the members of the local Kiwanis Club at their weekly meeting at te Queen's Hotel on Tuesday when Dr. Reg. Anderson, scheduled to give luncheon attendants a talk on army camp life at Connaught Ranges where he had been stationed in a medical capacity for several weeks, turned the tables on the various committee chairmen and asked for reports which, surprisingly enough, could not be given.

Rather nonplussed the committee chairmen were, almost without exception, at loss for words when "Reg." like a bolt from the blue, asked for reports from Achievement, Underprivileged Child and Welfare and other committees. Fred Lewis had an answer for his questioner, however, and in a manner evoking much laughter from his audience, presented alibis for his committee. In the place of the regular speaker for the program, the members enjoyed a lively singsong with Harold Carruthers as song leader and inimitable Leo Riggs at the piano.

In accordance with the "V" for victory slogan which is sweeping the country, the pianist, upon the suggestion of Harold Seldon, played the first four bars of Beethoven's Symphony, representing the Morse code for the letter "V."

Discussion and the presentation of reports as to the progress of ticket sales for the forthcoming Karnival took up a major portion of the time allotted for business, with Chairman Jack McVeigh reporting that although sales of tickets for the car, which will be raffled off at the conclusion of the Karnival, were coming along satisfactorily, unless the members were behind the project one hundred per cent. the success of the venture could not be assured. George Lee reported that from this date on the car would be placed in position on Front Street every day with girls offering tickets to the public. The car will also be taken to outlying centres, he stated.

An appeal for reading matter and books to be placed in the sergeants' mess at Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School was made by Eddie Shapiro, with Clifford Baragar also making an appeal on behalf of Kiwanis International for reading matter for seamen sailing out of eastern Canadian ports.

Eddie Logan welcomed the guests to the luncheon, expressing hope that all would soon return, while the attendance prize was given by Jack McVeigh, Ted Willing making the introduction. President Jim Barclay was in the chair with Eddie Shapiro acting as Sergeant-at-Arms.

Ivanhoe Resident Shocked by Lightning

While standing on the verandah of his farm home near Ivanhoe during the severe electric storm which passed through the district on Sunday afternoon, Mr. Chas. Cooney suffered considerable shock when a bolt of lightning struck a nearby driveshed. The lightning set the building afire and burned it to the ground, destroying several small pieces of machinery and other articles stored therein.

Visiting the city on Tuesday afternoon, Mr. Cooney stated that he still felt the effects of the lightning shock, his hands, arms and legs feeling numb and having the sensation of being "twice as large as they ought to be". This is the third time Mr. Cooney has been struck with lightning, the after-effects being the same and each time with greater intensity.

Although the driveshed on the Cooney farm was completely burned as the result of the lightning bolt, it was possible to save a few pieces of machinery, including a buggy and cutter, from the building. The loss estimated at approximately $250 was partially covered by insurance.

Six Are Injured When Dance Hall Collapses in Wind

Sarnia, Ont., July 30 — (CP)— Condition of six persons, injured last night when a dance pavilion collapsed during a windstorm, is reported "favorable" today. Hospital authorities said most seriously injured were Mrs. H. H. Evans who suffered a compound leg fracture and Samuel Crosbie who suffered an injured back.

Others who required hospital treatment were W. E. Palmer, Aileen Darragh and Kenneth Wright. About 40 persons were in the pavilion when it collapsed and a number received minor injuries.

Doctors and ambulances stood by as searchers, carrying flashlights and lamp, went through the building searching for trapped persons. More than 200 civilians assisted police and firemen in the search.

Thomas Guttridge, of Sarnia, who was in the building with his wife, said a gust of wind hit it about 9 p.m. Soon the lights went out and another blast of wind blew the windows out.

"A few seconds later it felt as though the whole building was being picked up," he said. "The entire roof was lifted up over our heads and then stones and mortar stared falling down inside."

He said some of the people startscreaming and "we didn't know for a minute just what was coming."

The upper portions of the east and west walls of the pavilion were blown in and the roof collapsed, parts of the verandah being hurled 100 yards.

The pavilion is situated on the shore of Lake Huron, about two miles north of Sarnia.

ESKIMO TRIALS IN MASS DEATH START SHORTLY

Three Belcher Island Natives to Face Judge as Result of Mounted Police Probe of Winter Tragedy

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa (CP)—Out of a hard, barren land came Mina, Ablaykok and Peter Quarack, three Eskimos who have been in Royal Canadian Mounted Police custody since March and who will face trial about Aug. 9 for murder at their lonely Belcher Island homeland.

They were charged after fragmentary reports of violence on the Hudson Bay Island filtered through by radio from the north and sent an R.C.M.P. airplane on a 1,000-mile flight from Ottawa last March.

The police party learned of long debates over interpretation of religius matters which developed in the Eskimo encampments during the long, dark winter days.

The discussion raged with increasing heat until violence occurred, and when the fury passed nine persons—men, women and children—were dead. Some died of bullet wounds, others were beaten to death and some, including four children, were driven naked into the snow and there perished.

When the ice of Hudson Bay began to crumble the ski-equipped police plane was forced to leave, carrying the three Eskimos charged with murder. The police told the natives they would return and see others suspected of being implicated in the killings.

Further Investigation

Not until late July was it possible for the R.C.M.P. plane to leave Ottawa again for the north. It had to wait until there was assurance floating ice would have disappeared from the bays of Belcher Islands where the machine would land.

Under command of Inspector D. J. Martin, the police have questioned further suspects and witnesses who could not be reached in March. They were left behind at that time after giving absolute assurance they woum be on hand when the officers returned.

Travel over the ice from Belcher Island to Great Whale River, the nearest mainland post, is possible for only about six weeks of the year, and the Eskimo boats are too frail to permit a water crossing.

The Eskimo population of the scattered Island has been estimated at 150 and their ancestors probably saw Henry Hudson's ship in 1610.

Since white men left the Islands severely alone for centuries, kept off by the dreary, rocky shores, the Eskimos' knowledge of white men was gathered during their hasty visits over the ice to Great Whale to barter skins and walrus icory, and when the occasional trader or missionary visited them.

Twenty-one years ago the Belcher Islanders learned something of Canada's mounted police. At that time quarrels over religious matters led to the slaying of two persons because other members of the tribe considered their conduct immoral.

A police party visited the Islands, made a thorough investigation and brought the accused to trial. The jury of police boat crew members recommended leniency and after the gravity of their offence had been made clear to them by the presiding police officer they were allowed to remain on the islands. Had they been taken away their families prboably would have died of hunger.

The only variation from the mest diet obtained by hunting is fruit—berries gather in moss for a few weeks during the summer months. Survival of the Belcher Island Eskimos has always depended on being able to find and kill seal, fish or birds for food and clothing.

Major disaster in the known history of the Belcher Islands came about 50 years ago when the Caribou herds which used to provide ample food disappeared. The Eskimos have a story that after warm weather there came a severe frost which placed a glaze of ice over all the moss on the Islands, and the caribou starved.

But men in Ottawa familiar with northern conditions say the reason probably was the change in the route of caribou migration which was noted about the same time on the mainland as well.

SCHOOLBOY AND SCHOOLGIRL OF TODAY

Schoolboys and schoolgirls like holidays and the present season is just in their line with warmth of atmosphere, brightness of sun and the sense of freedom which being out of school creates, yet this does not mean that the schoolgirl and schoolboy "creep like snails unwillingly to school."

It cannot be that they unwillingly go to school for they do not show it on the way. When the children get together there is the most animated talk with the freest laughter to be heard anywhere on the globe—on the streets leading to school. In this is no sense of impending doom as some would lead the world to believe children feel awaits them as they approach the schoolhouse.

Though this is summer time there has just been issued in New York City the result of a survey of 436 elementary pupils on "The Child's Day, Before and After School." Here is the surprise, the opinion-shattering fact that eighty per cent of the boys like school, thirteen per cent neither like or dislike it, and seven per cent dislike it. The girls, as might be expected, are more favorable to school, eighty-five per cent of them liking school, eleven per cent with no like or dislike and four per cent disliking school. If this school is a criterion of pupils throughout the continent, old opinions are blasted forever. There is no doubt of the belief that this is an average condition.

They do love school. It is a meeting place of children of their own age and world. It is a place where they learn, and, whatever else may be said, children do like to learn for they inveterate questioners and the school seems the very place for them. The school finds out what experts probably could not find out, a child's leanings towards certain lines of thought or actions, or to the various callings. The school to them is the bright centre of the community. It is well-equipped with modern heating and lighting and ventilation, their health is taken care of, for science is a good guardian. There is the world of romance which is the all-in-all of their life in the very air they breathe in school. They are in a world to them as new as new can be, and not threadbare as it is to some adults who have in their lives wandered into mazes. But children in the romance world are in a real world too, a growing world where they are being equipped for life.

To go back to this survey what did the inquirers find? Another fact upsetting old opinions. The scholars help at home, accepting old-fashioned responsibilities. They assist in cooking, sewing, setting the table, washing dishes, doing errands, caring for the baby and repairing household fixtures. Three quarters of the boys and over seven-eighths of the girls have regular household responsibilities. The boys spend thirty minutes, the girls fifty, in housework.

They all listen to the radio, boys an hour and a half and girls fifteen minutes more. They all go to the movies except eight boys and ten girls. The range of attendance is from one every two weeks to three times a week. Ninety per cent go to movies once a week, spending four hours in the theatre. Fifty per cent of the boys have public library cards and seventy-five per cent have a library of their own. The figures for girls are fifty-four per cent and eighty per cent. The boys prefer "Swiss Family Robinson," "Pinocchio," "Treasure Island," "Huckleberry Finn," "The Rover Boys" series, "The Jungle Book," "Gulliver's Travels," "Doctor Doolittle," "Tom Sawyer" and "Robinson Crusoe." For girls the favorites are "Little Women," "Bobbsey Twins" series, "Wizard of Oz," "Andersen's Fairy Tales," "Pinocchio," "Alice in Wonderland," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Robin Hood" and "Swiss Family Robinson."

This is the record of boys and girls from the fourth grade to the sixth grade. It is a healthy finding. Outside of the finding that only sixty per cent eat a nourishing breakfast, which has prompted Miss Monash, who carried on the study, to state that parents should be advised that breakfast is a very important meal to the growing child, the survey is very encouraging, as it throws a new light on the the success of modern education.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

HOW THEY SAY IT IN AUSTRALIA

If you should chance to meet one of these stalwart Australian "diggers" dressed in his dark uniform, and weird fantastic phrases emanate from him, don't be alarmed. He is perfectly sane. And he has a slang dialect that would make a Connecticut Yankee sound like an evangelist. The Aussies don't mince words and their slang is a colorful expression of life in the big continent.

For instance if he thinks a thing is bona-fide he will call it "fair dinkum" or "dinkum die." If he had a good time at a party, he would call it a "bonzer do." "Good-Oh" is his expression for the Canadian "O.K."

"Tucker" is food in general while "cupper" is a cup of tea. A "fillit" is a chunk of steak, and all canned vegetables are "tinned goods." Part of any outing, be it a ride or a picnic, is the "billy."

"Diggers"

Nicknamed "diggers" in the last war, the name has stuck and is traditionally revered. As the American might say "Hi 'ya, fella," the Aussie will greet you with "G'day, dig."

If you want to buy a friend a drink you say "I'll shout you to a spot." If he wants to buy, he "shouts." If you go "Dutch" its a Yankee or a Scotsman's "shout."

"Good job" means nice work. "Yakka" is hard work. If you have to go back to work overtime you are "working back." If you are up to your ears in work and doing the best you can, you are "flat out."

If he calls on the telephone he will not say "It's Bill Jones speaking," but "Jones here." And when he makes a date he will say a "quarter to eight." If he is to meet you across the street he will say "over the road."

"Pubs"

A hotel, even the swankiest, is a "pub." A salary is a "screw." A "drawing pin" is a thumbtack, and no matter what it resembles, your living room is a "lounge."

The traditional salutation of the Australian is a strange word. It is heard in the wide stretches of the bush. Cow drovers yell it at each other. It is heard on the wharves and quays when overseas liners are being welcomed. It's first syllable is long and drawn out and the last is snapped like a whip. It's the word "Coo-ee."

"Whacko"

Some other ordinary remarks that will turn up in a conversation are, a "larrikin," meaning a tough guy or a flashy person. The word "ta" is used by Australian he-men when they wish to convey their thanks. "No fear" means you bet. "My word" means definitely and "my oath" absolutely.

"Nark" is another dinkie-die term, but a "nark" is a disagreeable old "fuddy-wuddy." And if your best girl becomes annoyed with you, she is "narked" at you.

A station is not a gas-filling building or a railway terminal. It is a sheep or a cattle ranch. A large number of prominent Australian families are "station owners." When a matter needs a definite climaxing the British say "righto," the Americans "definitely" but the Aussie will say "too right."

But if you meet a cobber over the road and he offers to shout you to a drink, don't be narkel, but accept by all means. You will be in the best company in the world. But when he leaves you, don't stare in surprise if he walks briskly away with a cheery "Ta-ta."

America says "it's terrific," but Australia remarks "it's whacko."

NO PROFIT

"How's business, Sam?" a Negro asked a friend.

"Lawdy, man, business am sho' good. Ah's bought a mule fo' ten dollars, swapped it fo' a bicycle, swapped that fo' a mangle, swapped de mangle fo' a bedstead, and Ah sold de bedstead fo' ten dollars!"

"But yo ain't made nuthin' on the turnover."

REAL BATTLE LINES

Where will the war be won?
Not in some far-flung trench,
But where the work is done
At lathe and drill and bench.
Not where the soldiers stand
Guarding some barricade,
But where the shops are manned,
Back where machines are made.

Where will our cause be lost?
Where will our courage fail?
Not where grenades are tossed,
Not where the foes assail,
But where the workers stay
Heedless of dangers dire;
Letting time slip away,
Time that machines require.

Turn lathe at faster speed!
Swifter set drills to spin!
Fashion the ships they need
Freedom's great war to win.
"Give us the things!" they cry,
"Give us machines to fight!
Give us the planes to fly!
All will come right!"

Output of Cars For 1942 to Be 44 P. C. of 1940

Ottawa, July 30 —(CP)— Production of passenger automobiles for sale in Canada during 1942 will be cut to "less than half the 1940 figure" and several other steps have been taken to "adjust the automotive industry to meet the wartime needs of the Dominion," Munitions Minister Howe announced tonight.

In a joint statement, J. H. Berry, Motor Vehicle Controller, said an order to be issued shortly will limit output to about 44 per cent. of the 1940 figure and that further curtailment may be ordered if present conditions change.

Since production of Canadian manufacturers last year was 110,126 passenger cars, 1942 production under the impending order will be around 44,000. Part of this production, however, was brought about this year under the production curtailment order issued last May.

The statement said that in co-operation with Mr. Berry automobile manufacturers have agreed to reduce the number of models of passenger cars offered to the public from 147 this year to 79 in 1942.

The number of color and upholstery options offered buyers will also be "substantially reduced" and arrangements also are being concluded which will "flatten out the usual and excessive spring manufacturing peak throughout the industry."

Steps have been taken by the controller with co-operation of the industry looking toward greater simplification of the accessories on new cars.

Accessories Remain

"Essential accessories such as heaters, defrosters, oil filters and extra windshield wipers will continue to be available on 1942 passenger cars," the official announcement said.

Production of commercial vehicles in 1942 is not affected immediately.

Mr. Howe said the curtailment in the number of passenger automobiles manufactured will make available to war industries many thousands of tons of steel, alloy steels and iron required for vital war needs.

The other steps taken will also divert supplies of materials to war industries and also releases more men and more machine tools to Canada's wartime industrial front.

"The curtailment in passenger car production will become effective by an order, soon to be issued, which will limit production to approximately 44 per cent. of that which obtained in the 1940 calendar year," said Mr. Berry, the motor vehicle controller.

He said that he will advise the industry that should changing conditions make it necessary further curtailment in passenger cars production may be imposed.

Consumer Need Not Fear Modern Canned Foods

Regardless of the tremendous place which canned foods now occupy in our economy, innumerable superstitions linger regarding their proper care and employment.

In the first place, a "tin can" is not tin; it is made of steel, coated with tin. When the food in the can tastes "tinny", it is not due to tin but to small amounts of iron dissolved in the food from the can. Such iron is harmless to health, perhaps even beneficial.

Canned foods properly prepared are sterile and should keep indefinitely. If, however, the can leaks, the contents may spoil promptly due to the invasion of parasitic germs or molds.

So many people believe that it is unsafe to leave food in a can that has been opened that the United States Department of Agriculture found it necessary to issue a statement on the subject. They say:

"It is just as safe to keep canned food in the can it comes in—if the can is cool and covered—as it is to empty the food into another container. Thousands of housewives are firm in the faith that canned foods ought to be emptied as soon as the can is opened, or at least before the remainder of the food goes into the refrigerator, one of the persistent food fallacies. The question keeps coming to the Bureau of Home Economics in letters from home-makers.

"A few acid foods may dissolve a little iron from the can, but this is not harmful, not dangerous to health. Cans and foods are sterilized in the 'processing.' But the dish into which the food might be emptied is far from sterile. In other words, it is likely to have on it bacteria that cause food to spoil.

"Whether in the original can or in another container, the principal precautions for keeping food are, keep it cool and keep it covered."

The vitamins in foods are not likely to be wholly destroyed in the canning process. Indeed, they vary in their stability. Vitamins A and D are not harmed by heating. Vitamin C is injured by oxidation so that heating of fruits or vegetables rich in Vitamin C in open vessels, particularly copper vessels, induces the action of oxygen in the presence of heat and may be destroyed. If, however, commercially canned foods are heated in closed vessels, the Vitamin C may be present in large proportion. Vitamin B1, thiamine, is also considerably destroyed by heating in open vessels.

One advantage of canned foods over ordinary cooked foods is that the juices and fluids are retained with the product in the can. Many housewives who cook vegetables and fruits will throw away the water and thus lose the minerals and other ingredients dissolved from the fruit and vegetables.

Each manufacturer is likely to have his own special name for each product, and it is exceedingly difficult for the average purchaser to judge the nature of the product from the name. Our government insists that whenever a product is below standard, the statement "Below U.S. Standard" must appear on the label.

Freezing is not harmful to canned foods. Indeed, some of them are improved by freezing and make excellent frozen desserts.

CEDARS OF LEBANON

Lebanon, native land of the famous cedars of Lebanon, has been the scene of fighting between the British and the Free French forces on one hand and the Vichy French on the other.

Although generally thought of as part of Syria, Lebanon has been operating as the Lebanon republic under a French mandate.

The Lebanon republic comprises about 3,600 square miles with a population of about 800,000.

Its capital is the seaport city of Beyrouth, spelled Beirut by the Arab-speaking inhabitants.

Ever since King Solomon raised a levy of 30,000 men to cut cedars on Mt. Lebanon these cedar trees have been proverbial for their height.

As a matter of fact, cedars of Lebanon are not tall trees, comparatively speaking, although they were probably taller than any other trees familiar to the subjects of King Solomon.

They are noted rather for their large trunks and widespread branches.

Numerous horizontal branches extend from the main trunk, tier upon tier, often covering an area as great in diameter as the height of the tree.

The trunk may attain a diameter of 20 feet.

In the Bible the cedar of Lebanon is frequently referred to as the symbol of power, greatness and prosperity.

Because the wood is durable, the foliage evergreen and the tree continues to grow for thousands of years, the cedar of Lebanon was also the symbol of eternal life.

For many years it was supposed that a grove of four or five hundred trees about 15 miles from Beyrouth were the only cedars of Lebanon left in their original habitat.

An inspection made in 1922 revealed that many thousand specimens still grow on the slopes of Mt. Lebanon and neighboring mountains.

Some of these trees are believed to be 3,000 years old and may have been growing when Solomon built his great temple at Jerusalem.

This species is seldom found at altitudes lower than 5,000 or 6,000 feet above sea level.

A dozen descendants of the original cedars of Lebanon, presented by American University at Beyrouth is appreciation of American aid through the Near East Relief, are growing in Arlington National Cemetery near Washington.

CLOTHES - COUPON MAKING BRITONS QUALITY BUYERS

Women Develop Selective Shopping Ability as Government Rations Their Garments at So Many Per

Written for The Canadian Press
By ALISON SETTLE

London, July 30 — (CP) — London is settling down to the workings of fashion under the rationing system for clothes. Reckoning that, the country over, women in England ordinarily bought items amounting to some 200 coupons each year, the Government decided to cut the number of these dress items down to some 66 coupons' worth in a year.

What can a woman get for 66 coupons? A coat takes 14 of them, a woollen dress 11, a silk dress seven a blouse or cardigan five, a skirt seven, shoes five a pair, stockings two coupons a pair, each yard of woollen material bought to be made up three coupons, leaving still lingerie and oddments to buy.

Limiting only the number of garments a woman can buy and not the expenditure per garment has already had the effect of increasing quality purchases as against a multiplicity of purchases at lower prices.

For Longer Wear

The coupon system already begins to make its mark on the designs of the London couture. Fabrics chosen have smooth surfaces and close weaves to stand wear and stretch and to avoid any catching of surface threads. Difficult patterns are rejected: big patterns waste material in joining and matching at seams. Small patterns cut into far less yardage.

Classical suits are bought which look as good next year as this. The slim line which has been increasingly used during the past months is ideal because it again does not use too much fabric. Jackets will be slightly shorter in cut.

One young London designer has designed sleeveless sweaters in featherweight to wear under his suits. A tomato red woollen suit has its own tomato red silk shirt, but over that goes a sleeveless, low-necked sweater, belted in at the waist, and this, instead of being knitted, is in tweed in checks of red, yellow and green. The idea behind these smart new sweaters is to avoid using a topcoat over a suit until the cold weather comes in.

Patchwork Theme

Some of the jumpers and blouses are made in the favorite theme of patchwork, now almost a signature of the collection. A cigar brown suit in tweed has a fine woollen patchwork blouse done in triangular shapes, in the same brown, mushroom, pink and wine. Some jackets are cut up-to-the-throat, eliminating the scarf which now demands two coupons. Instead, broad velvet ribbon (ribbon, like lace and net is unrationed) is attached under the collar, to slot through and tie.

In coats, a jacket effect is simulated on the hipline in front. Much violet and red is used in this fall collection, a violet redingote, for instance, having turnback pocket flaps on the cross, giving the look of the jacket edge. In some models channel seams are opened at the waist for a few inches, to show a facing of velvet inside. Dresses are worn under these coats have a gentle drop-waist line.

In another new collection it is interesting to see the result of less fabric being used. The result that fabrics are richer than ever before. The suits are slim, classic in cut, often bound with silk braids; their fabrics are rich velvets, silk crepes, finest woollens. In blouses and dresses alike a wealth of handwork is used for handwork is in no way rationed.

OLD SCHOOL TIES

Worksop, England (CP)—Boys at Worksop College may be forced to wear second-hand school ties due to the present clothes shortage. The school is to open a second-hand shop. Sunday suits are no longer compulsory.

VIA THUMB ROUTE

Avon Dasset, England (CP) — Capt. John Profumo, youngest member of the House of Commons, recently on leave from the army, hitch-hiked 120 miles to his home in this Warwickshire town in 4 1-2 hours. He had rides in 10 motor-cars, two lorries and a sidecar.

HOT SO TRYING BEING OVER 25 BUT "HOW MUCH?"

Registration Has British Women Hot and Bothered but They're Finding Some Ways of Getting Around It

By GLADYS ARNOLD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa (CP)—A woman is as old as she looks and not the age indicated in her birth certificate. This is the theory stoutly maintained by English and Scottish women today from whom "registration in age groups" for war service has drawn a barrage of criticism.

"There's panic in our hearts this summer and it is not bombs that have fallen nor yet those we know must fall which causes it," writes a woman columnist of the Glasgow Herald. "We can face less lipstick and make-up, we are getting used to having the beauty of our legs marred by stockings which gather in folds around our ankles. We are even getting used to our boy friends deserting us for the greater attractions of his Majesty's forces —but something must be done about this registration business."

Letters are bombarding the editors of London papers. Protests are being registered throughout the voluntary organizations.

"This is no fantastic idea," writes the Herald correspondent. "It is the main topic of conservation wherever women meet. The subject can last through the whole fire-watching period or night at the warden's post. It lasts through the lunch hour and takes up our week-end rest period."

Maintaining that registration may be all very well for the "sweet young things from 18 to 25" or the even sweeter things of 25 to 35, it's not so pleasant for those at 40.

"We think, and rightly so, that we do not look our age," protests one woman writer. "We are not really ashamed of it but when we have kept it a dark secret so long at our jobs, it is going to be annoying to have years of work spoiled by being obliged to register in our right age group."

A number of methods have been published as useful in "dodging" the issue. One for a person, say of 31, is to ask for time off on the 25's day, make a big fuss and then go very quietly in on the true age day Some one, it is warned, is sure to spot you on your own 31 day.

Another is to pretend you've never heard of registering. This however, is inclined to make the Bright Young Things assume one is years older than the correct age. "So you are sunk both ways," the columnist writes.

By the end of the summer, it is suggested, the guarantee of antiquity will not be "she remembers the last war" but, "she must be well over 30—she hasn't registered yet!"

Another writer suggests the remery might be to have all women between 25 and 40 register indiscriminately on the same selected days. One doesn't mind admitting to being over 25, she says. "It's just how much over that damages our morale."

ACCORDING to the auguries of dominant planetary forces it might be well to slow down on important business projects and seek relaxation and diversion in domestic, social, artistic or affectional engagements, since everyday affairs are under a discouraging rule, indicating antagonism or lack of support from superiors, employers or others whose good will and substantial cooperation are vital. As well, the public, group or community endorsement may not be forthcoming, unless the activities take on welfare, charitable or cultural forms. Refrain from petty misunderstandings and be alert to treacherous snares or intrigues.

Those whose birthday it is may be wise in devoting themselves to the pursuit of pleasure, in domestic, social, artisic or cultural circles, since business is under vibrations of discord ,opposition and lack of support. Public interests of a social humanitarian character may thrive, but in all shun trivial quarrels and be on guard against intrigues, sordid situations, where friendship or romance might suffer. Be discreet in all private relations.

A child born on this day should possess many social graces and talents rather than the equipment to succeed on business lines. It may encounter difficulties with employers or superiors while its personal relations will give happiness and good fortune.

Effective Phrases Aid You in Conversation Blanks

When Silence ISN'T Golden!

You want to impress her with your wit, but alas! the words are stuck! We know.

Why not learn a few "filler" phrases to loosen your tongue? You can keep the conversation going easily with such remarks as "Your vacation sounds like a big success" or "I agree 100 per cent."

If you have trouble putting your thoughts into words, knowing some figures of speech is a help. Then you don't flounder with "Well, they're er-er different, you know." You hit the nail on the head with "They're poles apart." Do you say vaguely "It was pretty dark?" How about "black as pitch?"

In an argument, instead of blurting a tactless "That's not so!" win and be well-liked with such phrases as "Perhaps we're not talking about the same thing."

And if you can make graceful compliments that sound sincere, you'll be quite the lad! "You're looking more radiant than ever!"

In meeting people, in social and in business life, everyone is more at ease knowing effective phrases. Our 32-page booklet has dozens you can use for leave-taking, introductions, invitations, many more occasions. Lists figures of speech, lively descriptive phrases to add zest to your talk.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of EFFECTIVE PHRASES FOR ALL OCCASIONS to The Ontario Intelligencer Home Service, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

IVANHOE W.M.S.

The July meeting of the Ivanhoe W.M.S. was held at the home of Miss Cora Prest on Thursday afternoon, July 24.

Mrs. Frank Palmer, President, opened the meeting and hymn 252 was sung. The key word for the month was "Give" and was responded to by thirteen members and two visitors. Several items of business were discussed.

Mrs. Sam Twiddy, group leader, No. 3, then took charge. The theme used was "Demonstrating the Way of Christ in Brotherhood". Hymn 380 was sung. Psalm was read after which the Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison. The treasurer gave a very encouraging report of the work so far this year.

The Watch Tower was taken by Margery Prest, Mrs. Wickens and Mrs. Flemng. The offering amounting to $1.03 was taken and hymn 511 was sung. Mrs. Clifford Mitz and Mrs. Lovibond brought the meeting to a close with prayer.

The hostess and assistants served a delicious ten cent tea proceeds of which were $1.50.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Gift for Anniversary Meeting

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Will you please tell me whether or not it's proper to give my boy friend a gift on the anniverstary of our meeting? If so, what would you suggest? We are engaged and he has given men an engagement ring.

Claire.

It would be very nice for you to send your fiance a present on the anniversary of your meeting him. The choice is wide. What is he interested in? What are his hobbies?

Does Bride's Family Set Up Newlyweds

Dear Miss Fairfax:

If a girl's parents can afford it, should they set up the newlyweds in their own home? Do they do that in this country?

Wondering.

Considering taxes, it would have to be a very well-to-do family who would provide furnishings for the entire home of the newlyweds. Even if they could afford it, they might look askance at a bridegroom who would accept so much.

Girl Saves for Marriage; Boy Friend oDesn't

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 19 years. I have always worked at housework, and have kept myself since I was 14. I have a hope-chest, a little money saved, and also bought a bedroom suite. I don't like to spend money on foolish things.

I am going with a boy who is my first boy friend. He is 21 years old, has a good job, but gives all his money home. He doesn't have a cent saved. He seems to care for me, but says I'll have to wait a few years for him, because he has to help out his family. But I know his family doesn't need his help and ought to let him save some.

I get off three hours a week, and we go to the movies or something like that. He wants me to get a job in the factory, so I can have every night off, but I couldn't do that sort of work. Where I am now I get off every afternoon, and can take my work easy.

Do you think it's all right to let him kiss me once in a while? I'm not much on a great deal of this sort of thing. I would like to marry him some day, but do you think it wise to wait two more years? We've already gone together one year. His birthday is coming soon. Is it all right to give him a present? He remembers me on holidays with boxes of candy.

A Friend.

Please do not think of changing your job for this boy friend. He does not impress me as a very ardent suitor. Evidently housework is better suited to your physique, and it would be foolish to go into a factory so you could see this young man oftener. You're the energetic type. Apparently he's done nothing toward hastening the happy day, and you say his money is not required at home.

Don't be in a hurry to marry. Some thrifty young man more your type is bound to come along.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Wedding Problem

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter is planning to be married soon, in an early morning ceremony at the Rectory. Because relatives on both sides are so numerous and the Rectory so small, only the members of the immediate failies can be invited to the ceremony.

However, we want very much to have some kind of informal gathering after the ceremony, to which all the relatives can be asked.

Here is the problem that confronts us: The bride and groom would like to leave on their wedding trip by noon, and so the gathering would have to be held rather early. Would it be proper for us to have a gathering at this hour of the day, and would it be proper to serve as simple a menu as punch and wedding cake? What would a gathering at this time of day be called? We cannot afford a wedding breakfast for so many, yet we don't want to leave anyone out. I would be grateful if you would give me any suggestions about solving this problem.

Grace

It would be entirely correct for you to invite the relatives and some close friends, if you wish, to a little party (you might call it that in your invitations) at your house after the ceremony. The relatives would love to be invited to "drink a toast to the happiness of the bride ad groom", and as long as you have some punch with which to drink the toast and a wedding cake to be cut by the bride that will be enough. Don't worry about not being able to serve a breakfast; comfort yourself with the thought that your guests will have had breakfast by that time anyway! If you want to add anything to the menu, serve some simple sandwiches (slim, dainty, bread-and-butter sandwiches are an excellent choice for that time of day), and hot coffee. I am sure some relatives or close friends of yours would be delighted to take over the making and serving of these. But if this means too much planning, don't regard them as necessary.

When Is a Bridesmaid?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am having two attendants at my wedding. One is married, and one unmarried. The unmarried girl is to be my maid of honor. Is the married girl to be called my "matron of honor" or my "bridesmaid?"

Dorothy.

If the married girl is to be a chief attendant—that is, of the same importance as the maid of honor—then she is referred to as a matron of honor. But if she is not of the same importance as the maid of honor, she is referred to as a bridesmaid.

For example, if the unmarried girl is your sister and the married girl is a close friend, the married girl would probably be given the position of bridesmaid.

Courtesy Tip

When you are at a party, you'll be a delight and comfort to your hostess if you take care of yourself and cooperatively contribute your share to the spirit of the party. Don't be a dead weight; don't demand too much of your hostess' attention! don't glumly revel in the fact that you are shy or selfconscious.

(Mrs. Beechman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers).

Busy Days Don't Worry Me!

I take no chances with Internal Sluggishness

IF YOU find no pleasure in the day's work—feel disinclined to make an effort—the cause may be internal sluggishness. This handicap is very common. Often it's due to a lack of bulk in the diet.

A Pleasant Precaution that Can Help Prevent Trouble

Constipation due to lack of bulk should yield to Post's Bran Flakes, eaten regularly. They provide enough natural bulk in the form of bran to keep food wastes moving promptly.

It's both wise and pleasant to eat Post's Bran Flakes as an aid to fitness. They have a crisp, nut-like flavour which really is delicious. If they do not readily relieve internal sluggishness, see your doctor.

Fashion Flashes

WHILE WE ARE PLAYING the fur folks are getting out the new models. An exquisite evening wrap is fitted with a floor-length flared skirt and bell sleeves. The fur is thin, supple lamb dyed in the palest pinky-beige.

SUMMER SNOW means the field of white hats that seems to stretch across the country. A pretty hat is in white toyo with a long brim rolled up at either side. The hat is swathed with a white filmy veil dotted with tiny white blossoms.

AFTER DARK brings out delightful evening frocks in black and white. White silk chiffon with scrolls of cobwebby black lace makes a lovely frock worn with a hood scarf of the chiffon with inset bands of the lace.

A DROP IN TEMPERATURE brings out clothes that hint of autumn trends. The other day a smart woman wore a fitted reefer of black moire with smooth shoulders and wide, high, pointed lapels, the sort of thing we can expect to see come autumn.

AS A CHANGE from summer clothes, give a thought to satin. A charming frock is in rose-beige satin made with a tucked and draped bodice and a skirt with a peplum draped to the side.

Sunday School Picnic Arranged by Members Of Burrs United Church

Burr's—Wednesday, July 23, was a special day for members and friends of Burr's United Sunday School as it was the day chosen by them for a picnic at Sarles' Beach at Oak Lake. About fifty sat down to a delicious picnic dinner. The weather was extremely warm but it didn't deter anyone from taking part in a lively sports program during the afternoon. The Young Men's Class got this part of the day's entertainment off to a good start with a running race. Alan Osterhout proved himself the fleetest and was the prize-winner. The Primary Class with their visiting friends ran a race when Lois Bush won first place; May Brooks, second; Jean Rathbun, third, with Glenn Brooks winning the boy's first price. This class also enjoyed a candy scramble when Jean Rathbun secured the most candies with Lois Bush coming second. A hammer was offered as a prize to the man or boy who could drive a nail in a block with the least number of blows. Eric Edwards accomplished this feat with two strokes of the hammer, putting himself in first place, Mr. Kenneth Vancott receiving a red bandana as consolation prize. Mrs. J. R. Marvin proved the value of a steady hand by carrying eight beans out of ten on a knife blade to the winning point and received an apron. Mrs. F. Burkitt came second in this contest. Mr. and Mrs. Eric Edwards won first place in a toothpick and lifesaver race, receiving toilet articles. A dinner-calling contest caused much laughter. Mrs. Ross Burr and Mrs. Ewart Harns were judged to be the loudest and longest callers. Mrs. Frank Osterhout treated the superintendent and teachers to marshmallows. Mr. Ewart Harns presented members of his class with a large watermelon. Swimming and boating were added pleasures with supper bringing a happy outing to an end. The only regrets being that more weren't present and that Mrs. B. Hough, Mrs. H. Spencer and Mrs. W. J. Parsons were unable to attend due to falls. Friends wish them all speedy recoveries.

Mrs. Parsons fell on the steps coming out of Melville School on Friday, the last day of Bible vacation School, spraining her ankle, and has been confined to her home since.

Yes, Tall Girls Do Get Married

Six-Foot Strippeuse, Now 23, Has Been "Led to the Altar" Seven Times

Cleveland (CP)—Lois De Fee is living proof that it's easy for a tall girl to get a husband. By her own count, Lois has been married seven times, currently is engaged.

"All they have to say is 'I love you and can't live without you,' and I'm married again," the 23-year-old strippeuse confided in a somewhat southern drawl. "It seems as if I always feel sorry for them.

"The only ones who say they are in love with me are the little bittie guys—the big ones go for dolls about 5 feet tall."

Born in Missouri and reared in Texas, Lois first became a bride 10 years ago. Six of the marriages were serious, she says, and the seventh was for a press agent's check. That was the time she married a midget, with annulment proceedings prearranged.

For publicity purposes, the perfectly-proportioned strap-shedder is six feet, four inches tall. Actually, the high heels subtract two inches from that figure, but her lofty height assures her of being "tops" in the burlesque business.

Lois was a show girl in several New York night spots, and a "bouncer" in a couple more before she decided to shed her clothes in public for a living. That was a year and a half ago, and she's doing beautifully.

Sunburn Patrol Beats Freckles

Girls Guard Beach Bathers From Too Much Sunburn and Brown Spots

Clearwater, Fla. (CP) Pretty Myrtle (Bunny) Lowery figures that the Clearwater Beach sunburn patrol has prevented at least a million freckles and as many blisters among bathers who don't know when they've had enough sun.

Organized four years ago more or less as a stunt, the patrol was so successful in preventing severe sunburn among bathers—a major summer beach hazard—that it has been made one of the main features of this resort's safety organization.

Bunny and her shapely assistants, in uniform white bathing suits with identifying insignia on the front, keep an eagle eye on bathers from inland points— who all too often try to acquire a deep suntan in one dose.

"You'd be surprised," Bunny says, " how few beach bathers from out of town know how much sun they can stand. And even when we warn 'em, it's hard to get 'em to cover up."

Each patrol girl has a safety kit with sunburn lotion as well as first aid equipment for treating cuts and scratches. All are expert swimmers and act as lifeguards. Miss Lowery was the beach's first girl lifeguard back in 1937.

The patrol also gives swimming lessons and, as might be expected of a school with so comely a faculty, has whopping enrollments. During the first four years, enrollments totalled 3,000 and this season the number has passed 1,500.

Cards and Dodgers Battle To a "No Decision" 12-Inning Contest as Darkness Falls

Small Crowd Sees Dodgers and Cards Battle 7-7 in Fight to Finish

BOTH RALLY

(By Judson Bailey)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

It's a fight to the finish St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers are waging this week, but they both came out of their first meeting with nothing except unfinished business.

With practically the whole country, except possibly St. Louis, agog over their crucial mid-season clash for control of the National League pennant race, the two foes fought 12 innings to a 7-7 draw yesterday. This left the Cards still two games in front.

Less than 11,000 customers were in Sportsman's Park for the 3 1-2 hours show, but they got their money's worth.

Dodgers rolled away to a 6-1 lead with Jim Wasdell hitting a two-run homer in the first inning and Dolph Camilli following with his 17th and 18th circuit clouts of the season on successive turns at bat in the fourth and sixth.

Then in the sixth the Cards took it all back with a six-run inning. Kirby Higbe, who had been wild but lucky, gave three walks and forced in a run before Manager Leo Durocher could get anybody warmed up. As soon as Curt Davis reached the mound Terry Moore singled for two runs. Johnny Hopp tripled for another run and scored himself on a wild throw by Durocher, and Johnny Mise sent the Redbirds ahead with a homerun.

In the ninth Joe Medwick, a former Cardinal, made his only hit of the game to single home the tying run for Brooklyn. After three more innings darkness finally forced them to quit. The game was immediately rescheduled for Thursday, which had been an open date.

Yankees Lose

Pittsburgh Pirates and Cincinnati Reds, camped hopefully in a virtual third-place tie, ten games back of the first place Cardinals, came through with triumphs.

Pirates scored four runs in the second inning and coasted to a 5-3 victory over Boston Braves before rain halted play in the eighth. This was their tenth win in 11 games.

Reds let Giants rip off four runs against their fading star, Elmer Riddle, in the first three innings and then fired back with two in the fourth and five in the fifth to win while Gene Thompson held New York scoreless the rest of the way.

In the other senior circuit skirmish Chicago Cubs, on a spree that has netted them 10 of their last 12 games, crushed Phillies 12-4 with Bill Nicholson hitting his 19th home run with the bases loaded.

While the National League was tying itself in knots New York Yankees gave away a 6-3 decision to Detroit Tigers.

Cleveland conquered Washington Senators 5-1 with Gee Walker and Ken Keltner accounting for seven of the Indians' 12 hits.

St. Louis Browns beat Boston Red Sox 3-2 and Chicago White Sox interrupted the Philadelphia Athletics' parade with a 1-0 triumph. Ed Smith and Phil Marchildon matched four-hit hurling in one of the year's finest pitching duels, but a single by Taft Wright followed by a triple by Luke Appling in the fourth decided the game.

Cobb Beats Ruth Again

Detroit, July 30— (AP)—Ty Cobb defeated Babe Ruth, 3 and 2, in the third and rubber game of their golf match series at Grosse Ile Country Club yesterday.

The former baseball greats sweated and toiled over sixteen holes in near 90-degree temperatures before calling a half. Cobb took the lead at the start and never was headed, turning in a four-up advantage at the end of nine holes.

Cobb was 15 over par for the sixteen holes, and Ruth was eighteen strokes over.

Cobb, former Detroit Tiger star, won the first match, in Boston, 3 and 2, while the one-time New York Yankee slugger squared it in New York one up, on the nineteenth hole.

WRESTLERS SAY THEY DO NOT FEAR GALENTO

Lee Henning and the Masked Wolf to Wrestle in Belleville

Monday night's big wrestling show featuring the heavyweights is beginning to impress Belleville fans as a spectacle that is likely to be remembered for a long time. In the main bout strapping big Lee Henning of Iowa has been matched with the most mysterious figure in the wrestling game. This is the grappler who is known only as the "Masked Wolf." Who this hooded horror is, no one knows, but one thing is certain, he must be counted as one of the greatest of the wrestlers, for he is unbeaten in many matches against the best. On the other hand Lee Henning is big, powerful and fast and has disposed of some of the really rough house grapplers in jig time. The Wolf follows a knock-em-down and drag-em-out style and in his wolf-like mask is enough to frighten the hardiest foe. However Henning is confident it will be he and not the mysterious one who comes out on top on Monday. Adding tremendous importance to the card is the fact that the referee will be none other than Champion Joe Louis' former opponent, "two-ton" Tony Galento, the slugging bartender. Galento has arranged to be in Belleville for the big match and has stated confidently he will demand strict adherence to the rules "or else." The roly poly battler who put Louis on the floor with a punch says "Dose guys better behave when I'm in dere or I'll molder dem." However a huge "powerhouse" like the Masked Wolf may have other ideas about how far a referee can go and if Tony tries to be too strict on Monday night, the fans will probably see an explosion. One thing is certain, there will be plenty of excitement before the winner of this main bout is decided and the fans should get full value for their money when these three giant athletes come together.

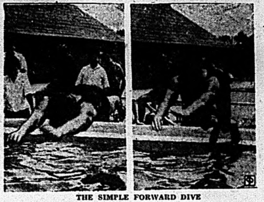
HOW TO SWIM



THE SIMPLE FORWARD DIVE

All previous lessons and what you have learned about the crawl stroke come to a climax in this lesson. Review the articles, step by step, and try each step over again before continuing with your practice.

Now try the face down float, kick, the arm strokes and breathing. There, you now are swimming. You will notice in kicking the flutter kick that you kick about three times for each arm stroke, thus making six kicks for each full stroke.

Some swimmers speed this up to four or even five kicks per each arm stroke, but three is not too taxing and serves to speed you through the water. Besides, if you really wish to learn to swim, learn slowly but thoroughly, and speed will come later.

Now you should also learn how to do a simple forward dive in order to be able to dive from the pool edge, or floating platform. First stand erect, with your arms at your sides, your feet firmly fixed upon the diving board or pool edge. Raise your arms shoulder high before you, hands, palms down, close together, fingers bent slightly upward.

Aim for a spot about seven feet away from you and try to hit this imaginary spot with your hands. Just before you jump, swing your hands down to your sides and bring them up again abruptly and jump. The swing of your arms upward will aid you in your jump. Do not dive into water over your head until you know how to swim, and do not dive at all unless you are absolutely certain that the bottom is clear of obstruction.

Bisons Beat Orioles Twice

Buffalo's Two-Man Pitching Team Returns to Winning Ways

(By The Associated Press)

Buffalo Bisons' one-two pitching punch of Freddy Hutchinson and Virgil Trucks which operated so successfully the first month of the International League season has been revived and apparently is as potent as ever.

Working in succession, the two racked up five victories apiece during the first 30 days of the campaign. Then Manager Al Cinvent broke up the combination by pitching Trucks out of turn. Hutchinson continued to win steadily, but Trucks didn't fare as well.

Last night, however, they hooked up again in a doubleheader and both came through as of yore, downing Baltimore Orioles, 5-3 and 3-2 to give the herd a tighter grip on second place as the third place Montreal Royals split a twin-bill with the leading Newark Bears.

Hutchinson gained his 20th triumph in the seven-inning opener with the help of Mayo Smith's two-run homer in the sixth. Trucks had a tougher row to hoe and was forced into one extra inning in the nightcap before Eric McNair's single drove in Mickey Rocco with the deciding run. In gaining his 11th conquest, Truck established a new strike-out record surpassing the mark of 171 set in 1906 by Rube Kissinger. He fanned five birds to bring his total for the year to 172.

The double victory put the Bisons a game and a half ahead of Montreal and moved them to within five games of the Bears.

Long John Lindell hurled the Bears to a 9-3 win over the Royals after Montreal had taken the opener, 4-3.

Jersey City's Little Giants edged out a 7-6 decision over the Rochester Red Wings, and the Syracuse Chiefs beat Toronto twice, 3-1 and 9-1, in the other games.

Costs Hippenstiel Cash to Win Match

Southampton, N.Y., July 30 — (AP)—Robin Hippenstiel is getting ready to spend the five bucks he's been hoarding for two months. He says it's the most welcome raid he ever has made on his finances.

The 25-year-old San Bernardino (Calif.) youth, who upset sixth-seeded Gil Hunt yesterday in the second round of the 51st Meadow Club invitation tennis tournament, got the money in May from an elderly woman friend with instructions on how to dispose of it.

"Every time you win an important match," she told him, "you make sure to mail me the clippings — all the clippings you can find. I don't want you spending your own money, so use the $5 and be sure to keep me informed."

Up to yesterday Hippenstiel hadn't beaten anybody of consequence in nearly eight weeks of campaigning. The five bucks lay neatly folded in a corner of his wallet. Then came Hunt, now come the clippings and out comes the five dollars.

Where Hunt failed, the other seeded entries succeeded. Bobby Riggs and Frankie Kovacs won in straight sets, as did Gardnar Mulloy and Bitsy Grant. Ted Schoeder made a belated start and captured two matches to gain the third round.

Cochrane is New Champ

Out-Punches Fritzie Zivic, Freddie Cochrane Takes Welter Crown

Newark, N.J., July 30—(AP)—The new world welterweight champion is a fellow who once quit the ring because he couldn't win a fight. But he's red-headed and Irish—so why argue.

He's tabbed Freddie Cochrane, but his pals call him Red. He has been beaten 25 times in his career. But he worshipped Mickey Walker as a kid from the same neighborhood in nearby Elizabeth.

He and Fritzie Zivic, who punched a period onto Henry Armstrong's career, battled for 15 of the roughest rounds a bar-room brawl ever saw at Ruppert Stadium last night. While it was close, Red deserved Referee Joe Mangold's decision for (1) making the fight as the aggressor all the way, (2) taking Fritzie's Sunday shots and charging back for more and (3) poking Fritzie an occasional belt in the breadbasket which did Zivic absolutely no good and which showed up the Pittsburgh joker's staleness from over-training.

They'll probably fight again in September provided Red, who has a 1-a draft classification, hasn't been called up. But until that time, the rugged little 26-year-old is the head man.

BIG-Z CINCH FIRST PLACE IN GALS' LOOP

Bessie Doolittle Hurls Eight Hit Ball to Beat SWACO 19-7

STRONG DEFENCE

They're in again.

Chuck Barnett's Big-Z lassies, 1940 champions of the Belleville Ladies' Softball League cinched first place and the top slot play-off berth in their league by beating their nearest rivals, Ken Watt's SWACO gals 19 to 7 at the Armouries last night.

The lion's share of the victory goes to the Big-Z veteran pitcher, Bessie Doolittle, who tossed an eight-hitter and was never actually threatened as the Barnett-led nine turned in their most sparkling effort of the season when the chips were down.

With first place at stake the "green and white" clad Zeller lassies unleashed a torrid offensive against the SWACOs and cuffed Danny Stead's deliveries for a total of 20 base knocks, as the Big-Z played strong defensive ball, while the losers were literally handcuffed in front of Bessie Doolittle's finest mound effort of the year.

Attack Early

Each nine scored a brace of runs in the initial frame, but the winners drove in seven counters in the second and did not need their remaining ten counters, that came in quintettes in the third and fourth. The SWACO's final bid came in the sixth when they scored three. Twila Langman, with two doubles and a single, was the big hitter for the losers, while Miss Evans hit a circuit. Wilma Clarke and Miss the losing cause.

Helen Garrow and H. Douglas each had four hits as the Big-Z counted six extra base clouts, "Pudgy" Donovan hitting for the crcuit. Wilma Clarke and Miss Garrow both counted a brace of doubles, while Gwenny Bennett had three singles. Molly Hunter and Miss Douglas gave Pitcher Bessie Doolittle some fine support in the Zeller outer garden.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

player and such a gesture is surely from Kingston, Oshawa and Peterborough will take part in a memorial fund ball game at Riverside Park in Peterborough on Aug. 7th. According to Peterborough Fred Craig, Bob Elliott of Kingston is taking the Ponies of the Inter-provincial League to Peterborough to play against a team made up of former C.O.B.L.'ers from Oshawa and Peterborough with the receipts going towards a fund to erect a memorial to the memory of the late Charlie Kearns, who was drowned in Rice Lake, two weeks ago. "Chuck" Kearns was a well known Peterborough baseball and football Jim Corkery Stan Scrutton and warranted. However, why one or two former Belleville players were not invited to participate in this memorial fund game seems rather odd, despite the fact Belleville has not been represented in the C.O.B.L. since 1936. Regardless it can go without saying—a delegation of Belleville baseball fans will be on hand for Charlie Kearns' memorial fund game.

Regarding the game Peterborough Examiner Fred Craig says: "Everything is shaping up nicely for the Charlie Kearns' memorial fund game. Kingston Ponies, approached by Secretary J. J. Dorris on Saturday gladly offered to co-operate in the affair and Manager Bob Elliott of the Kingston outfit said that he would bring along all the well known veterans of the Ponies including Vince McQuaide, Yammy Jamieson, Jakey Quinn, Jim Corkery, Stan Scrutton and himself while Joe Daley, wily old pilot of former Pony teams expressed a wish to accompany the team to Peterborough for the game. Knotty Lee who managed the Petes the year Chuck Kearns came to Peterborough may handle the local outfit in this game. Al and Grant Clark who are playing ball in Northern Ontario have volunteered to come down to help out in the testimonial game and it is expected that Peg Hurst, Lefty Wallace, Red Jubenville and Kitchen of the Oshawa outfit will be here to play with the Petes against Kingston. It is likely the game will be played as a twilight affair on the evening of Thursday, August 7."

Joe Kelleher, who has been commuting between Belleville and Kingston for baseball practice with the Combines recently, was used as a relief pitcher last Saturday after Jack Edwards had been knocked off the Kingston mound. The "easterners" had their batting togs on that day and continued to punch out base hits with regularity. As the Pony-Combines were hopelessly beaten before Kelleher was called upon to pitch it wasn't exactly a fair test of his mound ability. Kelleher, a local mound product, is a keen baseballman as can be seen in the fact he is willing to hitch-hike to Kingston to work out with Bob Elliott's nine.

Do you remember when Tuck Stainback, veteran major league outfielder, was sold by Montreal Royals of the International League to Detroit Tigers of the American for nearly $25,000 a year ago today. Stainback the previous winter had decided to retire from baseball instead of playing in the minors but convinced himself he was good enough to fight his way back to the major leagues.

Seems like the battery department monopolizes all the warlike military nicknames in the National league. The air forces line up the battery of "Ace" Adams and "Blimp" Phelps. Artillery is represented by a couple of pitchers, "Cannon-ball" Heintzelman and "Boom-Boom" Beck. Even when it's kitchen police it's a batteryman, Catcher "Spud" Davis.

Promoter Frank Tunney of the Queensbury A.C. in Toronto, is awfully sweet on Lee Henning, the Iowa powerhouse grappler who meets the Masked Wolf at the Hume arena next Monday. "Henning is not only one of the ten best wrestlers in the business, but this boy has a future. True enough he is meeting the undefeated Masked man in Belleville, but mark my words this boy predicted when he was in Belleville last week making arrangements for the appearance of none other than Tony Gleanto, the heavyweight boxer who once floored Joe Louis, as referee here. It is seldom a world sport celebrity like Galento is seen in a small city, but then here's an opportunity for Belleville and district sport fans to see not only top-notch wrestlers, but the one and only "Two-ton Tony" Galento in action.

The only battle left in the Girls' City Softball League is for the fourth place slot, with Corbins having to win over Ken Watt's SWACO lassies Friday night to create a tie with the Vikings for the remaining play-off berth. Last night Chuck Barnett's 1940 Zeller lassies proved they were worthy titleholders when they trounced Ken Watt's SWACO gals 19 to 7. The lion's share of the piece went to Bessie Doolittle, veteran Zeller hurler, who pitched an eight-hitter and was never in trouble, as her teammates turned in their best two-way performance of the year to cinch first place and the top-spot play-off slot in the league.

As soon as the Canadian Rugby Union placed their stamp of approval on the proposed invasion of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Frank Hannibal, president of the Winnipeg gridders, openly stated they intended to play for keeps—no exhibition games in the east. As the Ottawa Rough Riders are Dominion grid champions it looks as though the Blue Bombers' head executive is barking up the wrong tree, but if the trip is made for war charities no doubt the Rough Riders will co-operate, but not with the C.R.U. title at stake. Last year the C.R.U. would not sanction an east-west game, it will be remembered, however.

SPORT SPICE—Another Canadian has turned to professional baseball...... Stan Lipka, starry third baseman with the Niagara Falls Senior O.B.A. team is slated to sign with Grand Rapids in the Michigan State League...... He was scouted by Dick Fisher, the well-known Brooklyn Dodger ivory-hunter. Grand Rapids being a Brooklyn farm team..... Ty Cobb took the third and deciding golf match over Babe Ruth, three and two...... Cobb was 16 over par and Ruth 18 over the Detroit course........ Exchanging batteries the SWACO gals will play the Reliance men's team at the Flats on Thursday evening, that is if tonight's Corby-Reliance game isn't postponed until tomorrow...... The A's couldn't produce a single run for Phil Marchildon and the Canadian kid lost a four-hitter to the White Sox by a 1-0 count yesterday...... There's no luck attached to losing that kind of ball games...... The Dodgers and Cardinals opened an important series with a 12-inning seven-all draw yesterday, darkness halting the battle.... Which reminds us that it's time the bigwigs of local softball leagues ordered their games played a little earlier in the evening, darkness is falling much faster these evenings.

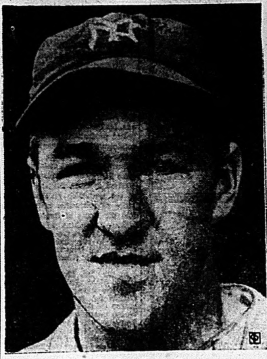
Relief Hurler Murphy Overlooked But He Is One of Yanks' Big Guns



John Murphy Yankee Star

BY WALTER L. JOHNS
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

New York, July 30.—Take a look at the box score of the New York Yankee games one of these days and you'll probably find the name of one John Murphy, as a relief pitcher. In the midst of the Yanks' sensational win streak and Joe DiMaggio's consecutive games hitting splurge. "Grandma" Murphy has been sorely overlooked, for Murphy is one of the big reasons for the Yankee position at the top of the American league heap.

Yeah, we know he isn't one of the big four starting pitchers. He's never been. But when it comes time for a bullpen tosser to go in there when the heat's on, Murphy is the gent who puts out the fire.

Several times this season Murphy has been shoved into the box to rescue a faltering hurler. And his record of seven wins and three losses proves his ability. Besides, he has saved many other games for which he received no credit whatsoever, except the salary the New York club is paying him as a relief pitcher..

Two incidents are brought to mind. In the "croocial" series with the Indians in the Cleveland stadium, with 67,000-plus fans on hand, Murphy went to the mound in the ninth inning with the Yanks leading, no outs, a runner on third, and one run needed to tie. Did Murphy fail? Nope, the game ended with the Yanks still leading by one run. Of course, luck played a part in the proceedings as it has in many instances in many ball games.

Then, in the Yankees' 17-inning struggle with the Tigers in Detroit, Murphy went in with the score tied in the ninth and shut the Tigers out for eight and two-thirds innings, granting but four hits. The Yanks got to the Tiger pitchers for six runs in the 17th and won that game.

He is Veteran

Murphy is one of the few New York City products in baseball. A big fellow, weighing nearly 200 pounds, he has been pitching professionally for 12 years, ever since he broke in with Albany of the Eastern league in 1929.

A graduate of Fordham university, Murphy went to St. Paul from Albany and after two years there the Yanks purchased him.

The righthander needed seasoning so he was sent to Newark where he was used chiefly as a relief pitcher. He worked in 40 games for the Bears in 1933 and was taken back into the Yankee fold the next season. He has been with the New York club ever since.

Murphy's biggest year with the Yanks was in 1934, when he pitched in 40 games and won 14 while losing 10. He has had creditable marks each year since, faltering a bit in 1939 when he won but three games while losing six.

Last season Murphy was called to the relief chores in [illegible] games. He won eight against four losses for the year.

Playground Softball

Headed by Ab Bunton's strong mound effort, the East Hill softballers blanked their West Hill rivals 9 to 0 in a playground softbal lfixture played on their home diamond yesterday. The win gave the East Belleville nine a slight edge in their weekly playground series versus the West Hill nine.

Bunton was in rare form on the winners' hilltop, limiting the West Hill to five scattered hits. Rollins hit a round-tripper for the winners in the second inning when four runs were scored. Hunter and Rollins teamed up to give Bunton some strong defensive support in the field also.

The line-ups:

London, July 30—(CP)—German long-range guns mounted along the occupied French coast opened fire across the Dover Strait before dawn today. There were no casualties nor damage.

SAVE 20% ON TIRE COSTS AS RUBBER-RATIONING LOOMS

B. F. Goodrich offers Motorists 20% More Mileage for Tire Dollar!

KITCHENER, Ont., July 30—Rumored rubber-rationing to build up reserves for war purposes would curtail civilian tire manufacturer which eats up approximately 70% of all rubber imported into Canada. Faced with increases in living costs—plus the necessity of making tires last far beyond their normal life—thousands of motorists are rushing to equip with the new B. F. Goodrich 1941 "Life-Saver" Silvertowns which add thousands of extra miles to tire life. These new Silvertowns with "Duramin" and "Safety-Weld" give five miles where the original Silvertowns gave four . . . actually save the motorists 20% on tire costs.

"Duramin" is a combination of chemicals proven to be the finest defence against rubber's greatest enemies — heat, sunlight and oxygen—keeps rubber young and alive—resistant to the grinding wear of the roughest roads. Not content with a 20% reduction in tire costs alone, B. F. Goodrich went even further . . . added one "super" on top of another . . . super mileage . . . super blow-out protection . . . super safety from skids. Result — this year's Life-Saver Silvertown is the toughest-wearing, safest-riding, smoothest-rolling tire in B. F. Goodrich history. It gives you more protection against blow - outs, more safety from skids, more riding comfort — without any premium in price.

"SAFETY-WELD" MAKES TIRES STEEL STRONG . . . LAST 20% LONGER

"Safety-Weld" accomplishes for tires the same thing that single-unit welding of steel body with frame has done for the auto. It builds a steel-strong tire carcass—bonds top-quality Hi-Flex cords with "Duramin" toughened rubber compounds. It puts the famous "Golden-Ply" protection into every ply! Thus the new 1941 Life-Saver Silvertown is able to resist internal heat, withstand severe road shock, and protect against ply separations caused by high speed driving—proven to be "the safest thing on wheels."

NO DECISION YET ON GAS RATIONING

Oil Controller Denies Story That Limit Was to be Set at 15 Gallons Monthly

Toronto, July 29.— —G. R. Cottrelle, Oil Controller, commenting on a story in the Ottawa Journal that the Government has decided to limit pleasure automobiles to 15 gallons of gasoline monthly, said tonight "no decision on rationing has been made at all".

"We are quite well pleased with the response to our appeal' for a 50 per cent, voluntary reduction in gas consumption, Mr. Cottrelle said. "Our advertising has brought very encouraging results".

"When rationing comes depends entirely on the effect of our appeal and it is much too early to say what the effect of the appeal will be".

Earlier, Mr. Cottrelle said that his recent order prohibiting sale of gasoline other than to the tank forming part of a "private passenger motor vehicle", includes motorboats.

"As yet we haven't put on any restrictions. True, we have closed service stations for certain hours, but that was more to bring the appeal to the attention of the people and make them think. We haven't stopped anybody from driving, and no one has been refused gasoline during the hours that the stations are open. We are making the appeal to the patriotic people of Canada and are confident that it will succeed".

He denied a report that motor boats were in the same category as motor vehicles as far as the regulations are concerned. "It is rather foolish to think that a motor boat can be driven up to a service station and filled up", he said. "Motor-boat owners have to use cans to transport gasoline to their boats, but all owners already have the necessary cans, so there won't be any appreciable demand for new cans.

Hits Motor-Boat Owners

"I wish I could do something about motor boats", he continued. "Their owners are the only class which, as a whole, has failed to co-operate with the appeal.

Yesterday morning three samples of the gasoline container decided upon at a conference at Queen's Park last week, were delivered to Attorney-General Conant. They were of half gallon, one gallon and five-gallon sizes and the last would have a retail value of about $1.95.

"In view of the recent order by the Oil Controller", said Mr. Conant, "in which dealers are prohibited from dispensing gasoline in cans for use in a private passenger motor vehicle, there does not appear to be any necessity for considering further the two smaller cans. The approved five-gallon can should meet the requirements of all to whom dealers are permitted, under the Oil Controller's order, to dispense gasoline other than in the tank".

In commenting on this new can, Mr. Cottrelle intimated that prospective manufacturers of the authorized can might encounter difficulty in securing permission from the metals controller. He said that tin, sheet iron and other metals which could be used in the manufacture of the can, were needed for the war effort", he commented.

Farmers Not Affected

The restrictions regarding the sale of gasoline in cans will not apply to farmers, for use in tractors. They will buy their gasoline in drums, as has been the case, and the Controller intimated that these drums had taken on an added value in the eyes of the farmers since the restrictions were announced. "They are looking after them now because they know they can't get any more", was the way he sized up that situation.

The Provincial Attorney-General yesterday outlined the insurance regulations covering the storage of gasoline. The occupant of a private dwelling may not keep in the dwelling more than one quart of gasoline without obtaining permission from his fire insurance company. In most cases no more than one quart of gasoline may be kept in a garage, other than in the tank of a motor vehicle, without affecting the fire insurance. If more than one quart of gasoline is to be kept in a garage the fire insurance policy should be studied.

The effect of fire insurance on a motor vehicle by carrying gasoline other than in the tank depends upon the attitude of the fire insurance company and, finally, the court's decision in the event of a loss.

As a result of the restrictions there has been a great boom in the sale of locks for the gasoline tanks of motor-cars which will prevent would-be thieves siphoning the gasoline out of the tank. There has been a demand from all over the Dominion for locks of this nature, and companies dealing in them report advances in sales up to 300 per cent.

15 Gallons Month is Rumor

Ottawa, — (CP) — The Ottawa Journal said in a newspage story Tuesday the Government has decided to "limit the quantity of gasoline for a pleasure automobile to 15 gallons monthly".

The Journal said an announcement on steps that would be taken to ration gasoline "is believed to be coming very soon".

"The rationing will be carried on by the use of coupon cards", the paper added. "The Oil Controller (G. R. Cottrelle of Toronto) is expected to make proper arrangements for such necessary motor vehicles as public conveyances, ambulances and so on".

The newspaper said restrictions recently imposed on sale of gasoline products had not achieved "the result the Government hoped for".

Discuss Gas For Lighters

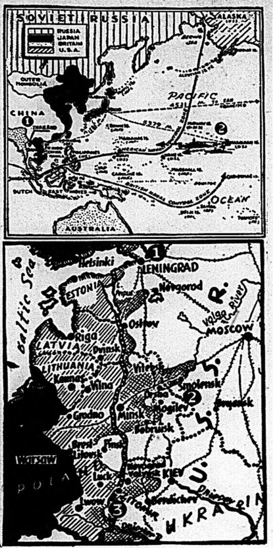
Ottawa, (CP)—The amount of gasoline used by Canadian smokers in their cigarette lighters per year would send a bomber into Germany every night for two weeks.

This unofficial conclusion was reached today when it was roughly estimated that gasoline used in cigarette lighters in the Dominion amounted to 13,000 gallons a year.

Cigar stores have not yet stopped free lighter filling service, although motorists have been asked to cut down on their gasoline consumption.

"Maybe I should hang a 'closed' sign on my tank at 7 p.m.", said one Ottawa tobacconist "I'd be doing myself a favor, anyway. The people would have to buy lighter fluid".

WAR—ON TWO SIDES OF THE WORLD



On TOP the map shows the line-up of Pacific powers at a glance now that Japan has signified her intention of further aggression. At present she is said to be massing on the border of Thailand (Siam), while U.S. naval authorities made a last-minute checkup of the great Hawaiian naval base at Pearl Island. The map on the BOTTOM shows the approximate battlefront as it is taking shape in the world war manner, with trenches; instead of the intense war of movement as heretofore. Most active points in the line are in the area around Leningrad (1), Smolensk (2) and Zhitomir (3).

THE WAR TODAY

(By DON GILBERT)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

For yielding to German pressure and breaking diplomatic relations with Great Britain, as well as actively associating herself with the German attack on Russia, Finland is to be "exalted above all other Scandinavian countries" and her aspirations for "a greater Finland" recognized.

This is from the Nazi publication "Deutsche Diplomatisch Information," published by the German foreign office, and Berlin dispatches add that "foreign correspondents understand that this means the pronouncement has more than a semi-official character, and is, in fact if not formally, official."

It is doubtful that this gratuitous conferment of Scandinavian leadership will be welcomed by the Finns, who appear unhappy enough over their estrangement from the democracies. The Finnish communique explaining the severance of relations with Britain is almost apologetic in tone, speaking of the "pressure of events" which forced Finland into the war and the difficulty of continuing normal relations now that Finland is Germany's ally.

Reports from Finland both before and after the Russo-German war broke out pictured the Germans as having quietly moved into the country on the pretense of sending reinforcements to northern Norway. Once in Finland, they refused to move on and, with the cooperation of the Finnish Rightist elements, gradually manoeuvred the country into an impossible position.

Now it seems the same sort of thing is being tried on Sweden. In the first days of the Russian war, the Germans prevailed on Sweden to allow the passage of one division of troops from Norway to Finland. The Swedes agreed under pressure, but apparently became stubborn when further concessions were demanded.

So now the Nazi propaganda accuses Sweden of following a policy of "fearsome tight-rope walking" and expresses amazement that Sweden could contemplate standing aside "at a moment when Europe's fate recalls from vacation even those peoples who thought historical processes had stopped for them for all time."

What may be in store for Sweden if Germany decides to grab her rich iron mines and her sizable navy and merchant fleet is indicated in the statement that Finland's position "on the northeast wing of the European defensive war demands her strengthening and consolidation." With Norway to the west and Denmark to the south under German occupation, Sweden finds herself completely surrounded.

The Nazis also see in the Finnish episode a lesson for Spain—a chance for securing "leadership of the Iberian Peninsula." Portugal and Gibraltar are the only other territories on the Iberian Peninsula, so presumably these are meant. The Nazi commentary urged that those of Gen. Francisco Franco's advisers who have been recommending active association with the Axis now redouble their efforts.

'V' for Victory Drive Spreads To West Africa

London, July 30 (CP)—Britain's "V for Victory" campaign is reported making striking headway in West Africa where it is being promoted by residents of Gambia, Britain's oldest and smallest dependency in that region.

The "V" sign is said to be fully appreciated in Gamia which is performing yeoman service in the Empire's war effort and natives in French-owned bordering territories also have been apprised of the nature and scope of the war's most celebrated propaganda drive.

Authorities in Gambia have been told that efforts to put across the "V" campaign have been successful in West African port of Dakar where posters soliciting support for the Vichy administrations have been superinscribed with V's.

Informed persons said considerable dissatisfaction existed among Senegalese natives in Dakar who frankly criticize the Vichy rule and say they wish to side with the Gambian neighbors.

ARVIDA PLANT ONE OF LARGEST ON CONTINENT

Produces Enough Aluminum to Build More Than 50,000 Planes a Year

LARGEST WAR PLANT

Arvida, Que., July 30—(CP)—A six-day strike in the huge plant of the Aluminum Company of Canada, Limited, which ended Tuesday, halted production in one of the continent's largest aluminum factories—a plant which produces enough of the vital metal to build more than 50,000 war planes a year.

When John D. Biggers, director of the production division of the office of production management, told the House of Representatives Military Committee in Washington June 13 that the United States expects to buy 200,000,000 pounds of aluminum from Canada, he expected most of it would come from this plant.

In the last two months, the United States has placed orders with the Aluminum Company of Canada for approximately $126,000,000 worth of aluminum—about 340,000 metric tons of it. In addition, the company, through its main plant here is fulfilling extensive Canadian and British orders.

Canada's Largest War Industry

In Ottawa last night the Supply Minister, Hon. C. D. Howe called the plant Canada's largest war industry. It employs more than 5,000 men, has vastly multiplied its output since war started and is still enlarging.

Currently, 4,000 men are employed in Arvida building extensions to the plant alone. To supply the plant's huge demands for electricity—aluminum is extracted by an electrolysis process—a $50,000,000 power project is under construction.

Arvida itself is situated slightly inland from the headquarters of the Saguenay River, some 300 miles northwest of Quebec City. The war has made it one of Canada's boom towns.

Some hints of the importance and size of the Arvida plant were given by R. E. Powell, the Aluminum Company president in a Dominion-wide radio speech last March 31.

Output of Aluminum in Canada Soars

At that time Mr. Powell said Canada is producing enough aluminum for 50,000 warplanes annually and added that the output is still soaring. The Arvida plant is responsible for virtually the entire aluminum output of the Dominion and the president's speech did not take account of enlargements that were begun after receipt of the recent big United States orders.

In 1938, Canada exported $24,000,000 worth of aluminum to 59 countries, Mr. Powell said. In the 11 months after war broke out in 1939 Canada more than doubled its aluminum output. Mr. Powell did not say how much the output had multiplied since then.

GIVES HIS LEG TWICE

Robert W. Hyatt who served as a sergeant in '17 with the first A.E.F., gives his leg to his country for the second time. He lost his leg in the Argonne offensive in '18 and now throws his aluminum leg into the pile to help the present United States' defence plan. Hyatt was decorated five times for bravery.

EXPECT STRIKE SITUATION WILL BE CLARIFIED

Full Effect of Trouble at Steel Car Plant Expected to be Evident Today

MANY RETURN

Hamilton, Ont., July 30—(CP)—The strike situation at the National Steel Car plant, clouded the first day by conflicting statements of management and union officials, is expected to crystallize itself today when the full effect of the walkout over union recognition becomes evident.

A. F. Gill, deputy government controller of the plant which was taken over by the government during a strike four months ago, said yesterday nearly 600 workers reported on the job at the 7 a.m. shift and a greater number were on hand when a change in shifts was made at 3 p.m. The plant, where E. J. Brunning was installed as controller after a three-day strike in April, employs 2,800 workers in the manufacture of munitions.

Milton Montgomery, Field Representative of the Steel Workers' Organizing committee, commenting on Gill's statement, estimated that only fifty workers passed through the picket lines in the morning. However, he said, a number of the British Supply Board employees, also entered the plant but these were escorted through the picket lines by the strikers.

The strike was called when the request of S.W.O.C. for a meeting with a representative of the management to discuss union recognition was rejected. The Government, in refusing the request, offered to meet a committee comprising workers only.

When the walkout occurred late Monday night a number of soldiers attending a trades school in Hamilton converged on the plant and broke up the picket lines. This action, which Col. D. A. White, school commandant, said was unauthorized and "entirely spontaneous" is under investigation. This has been the only untoward incident of the strike.

(At Ottawa yesterday the Cabinet Council discussed the situation but no statement was issued as to what decision was reached.)

Invasion Try In 1941 Remote Says Writer

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, July 30. — (AP) — Britain's war leaders seemed agreed that the season "is at hand" for a Nazi "invasion" of England; but not as to the form that invasion is apt to take.

Prime Minister Churchill, sounding a new alert to Parliament, speaks of it as a German military incursion which might come in September. Anthony Eden simultaneosly predicts a Nazi peace offensive, which apparently is to be based on victories in Russia yet unwon, and which he sternly rejects in advance.

These rather ominous statements might seem to imply that London's information from the German-Russian battle front is not reassuring. Both warnings seem to hinge on the possibility of decisive Nazi victories in Russia within the next month.

Certainly Britain has no reason to fear September invasion in a military sense unless Red armies now balking German attackers before Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev are quickly overwhelmed nor could Mr. Eden's picture of Germany turning westward bearing peace gifts become realistic if Hitler's troops still were bogged down in Russia.

The twin warnings voiced in London obviously must represent official fears that both British and American public opinion will be lulled into a false sense of security by Russia's successful six-week stand. They were calculated not only to keep Britain's defense force on its toes until the approach of winter ends the armed invasion danger absolutely; but to bolster British morale against still possible Russian disasters in the field.

End of Season

Actually, Sept. 1 represents about the end of the invasion season this year for Britain. If the attempt is not made around that date, there will be so short a time left before October gales begin sweeping the English Channel that a German effort to cross it in force will be wholly improbable.

Nor does it seem reasonably possible even now that the Nazis could reverse their vast war machine, fully occupied in Russia, to strike at England except by air this year. Neutral eyewitness evidence from German-occupied regions across the Channel shows that those areas were largely drained of Nazi mechanized equipment for the Balkan and Russian campaigns

Even an utter Russian collapse within a few days (of which there is no hint in the most optimistic German war reports) could hardly result in an invasion of Britain in early September. And what now appears more probable is that Hitler's armies still will be fully employed in Russia during that month.

They have only August and September remaining to complete the conquest of Russia and the destruction of the Red armies in the West before snow flies there. A normal Russian winter would soon immobilize the Nazi attack until late spring. Weather indications in that part of the world seem to point to abnormal winter conditions. Such snows and subzero temperatures as wrecked Napoleon's dreams of conquest may be impending. Nor can there longer be doubt that the slowed pace of the German advance is gravely troubling Hitler's High Command on that account.

Possibility Remote

Mr. Churchill to the contrary notwithstanding, the possibility of an attempted invasion of England this year seems very remote. There can be little question, however, that despite sturdy Red Army resistance, the Germans might achieve such successes in Russia before winter as to make possible the shifting and reorganization and re-equipment of Nazi forces westward during the winter and early spring for a final blow at England next year.

Presumably it is against that possibility that Mr. Eden was warning his countrymen in predicting a Nazi peace offensive. If Russia collapses before winter sets in, a Nazi 'peace' feeler, backed by fears of invasion of England next year, might undermine even British courage.

Bathing in Polluted Waters May Cause Some Cases of Infantile Paralysis

It is in the late summer and early autumn that infantile paralysis is at its height. Thus many parents and physicians naturally feel that there may be something in the water where children swim or bathe that causes this disease. The virus or poison of infantile paralysis taken from the stool or waste from a victim has produced infantile paralysis in monkeys.

Dr. Samuel M. Ellsworth, Harvard University, while engaged in a study of sewage disposal in a New England city found that the bathing beaches, under certain conditions of wind and tide, were affected by sewage pollution. In the Journal of Experimental Medicine he states that during the epidemic of infantile paralysis in the summer of 1936 this city had the largest number of cases of any city or town. Other places where the number of cases was above the average were in communities bordering on water used for bathing and affected by sewage pollution.

As epidemic infantile paralysis (occurring in large numbers) occurs almost always during the summer, it is reasonable to assume that the disease may be spread not only by direct contact of one individual with another, but also by some agency or condition that prevails during the warm summer months.

"During epidemics, and probably at other times, the virus from persons suffering from the disease or persons who carry this virus (though not suffering with the disease) is undoubtedly present in the sewage of an affected community". Infection my way of the nerves of the nose (nerves of smell) is possible and it appears probable that this is a common way of contracting the disease. "Given a sufficient amount of the virus in sewage-polluted waters, it is conceivable that infection can be caused by some of this water getting into the nose of the bather".

There is much to learn about the cause of infantile paralysis, how it enters the body, and the best method of treatment, but it does seem that as it occurs in summer, and most cases were found where sewage-polluted waters in which children and adults bathed during an epidemic, that this may be a big factor in spreading infantile paralysis.

This does not mean that children should not bathe in lakes, rivers and streams, but that they should avoid waters where there is danger of sewage pollution.

Italian Battleship Undergoes Repairs

Alexandria, Egypt, July 30. — (AP)—British naval officers said today they believed the crack 35,000-ton Italian battleship Vittoria Veneto, torpedoed March 28 in the Battle of Matapan, now was undergoing repairs at an Italian naval base.

Many officers thought the battleship had sunk after initial reconnaissance failed to disclose a trace of her after the March sea fight.

Now, however, they said they believed she had succeeded in reaching port.

WALL STREET

New York, July 30.—(AP)—Stocks again backed away from the recently registered five-months peaks under a moderate selling movement chiefly inspired by weakness in steels.

Despite lessened tension in the Far East and continued confidence in Russia's ability to stall the Nazis, speculative circles were inclined to lean to the cautious side in view of price control and tax legislation imponderables.

Stocks under pressure included U. S. Steel Bethlehem, Crucible, Sante Fe, Texas Corp., Pepsi-Cola, Great Northern Pfd., Case and Sperry.

Goodrich edged up to a new 1941 top. Also favored were Goodyear, U.S. Rubber, Woolworth and American Can.

Canadian Stocks were unchanged to fractions lower. Dome lost 1-8 and Distillers Seagram 1-1. Walkers gained 1-4. In the Bond Market Canada 4s lost 1-8.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 30.—(CP) —Prices turned a bit heavy on Toronto Exchange this afternoon. Turnover was only fair at 136,000 shares.

Preston advanced to a new record high at $3.60 up 15. The gain was held through a run of realizing. Kerr-Addison dropped part of its recent gains, backing to $4.70 for a loss of 10. Wright-Hargreaves, Malartic Gold Fields, East Malartic and Sladen ruled higher and Teck Hughes, San Antonio and Hard Rock were lower.

Falconbridge, Pend Oreille and Noranda weakened slightly. Other Base Metals were steady.

Interlisted leaders of the Industrials, including Walkers, common, Brazilian, British American Oil, Massey Harris and Canadian Car Pfd. registered mild weakness.

Light receipts continued to clear readily under good demand on the egg market, and prices to shipper on grades A large and A medium gained ½ cent a dozen. Other grades remained at former levels.

Six Rescued When Yacht Grounds on Bar

Oakville, Ont., July 30—(CP)—Six persons were rescued last night from the 50-year-old yacht Aggie when it went aground 300 yards off the entrance of Oakville Harbor.

Harry Sonshine, former Toronto Argonaut football player, owner of the yacht, swam ashore through choppy water to summon help for those left on board but when he arrived a witness to the accident had already sent for police.

REPORT GERMAN NAVAL PERSONNEL AT VARNA, BURGAS

Ankara Dispatch Says Possibility is Seen of Nazis Preparing Against Russian Fleet

OFFICERS ON TRAIN

By DANIEL DE LUCE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Ankara, Turkey, July 29 —(Delayed) — (AP) — Diplomatic dispatches from Bulgaria reported today that German naval personnel had arrived at the Black Sea ports of Varna and Burgas.

The possibility was seen that they were preparing for operations against the Russian fleet. At the same time, rumors are circulating in Turkey that the Axis planned to seize the Dardanelles and Bosporus straits in order to send the Italian fleet into the Black Sea.

One eyewitness of German naval personnel movements was reported to have counted 120 signalmen and engineers and seven commissioned officers on one train in Bulgaria en route to the Black Sea. Several hundred others, diplomatic dispatches said, were understood to have been assigned to Bulgaria.

Possibility of Attack

Official Turkish circles said they regarded the alleged Axis menace to the Dardanelles and Bosporus straits as premature.

Observers, however, said they considered that a lightning attack might occur in September, depending on Germany's success or disappointments in the Russian campaign.

If Kiev were to fall to the Germans, these observers said, the Nazi intention would be to knife across southern Russia to Crimea. These quarters considered it a possibility that Italian warships might be necessary to German Black Sea communications.

British military experts, however, asserted that an Axis attack on Turkey would bring the Royal Air Force into action immediately, with heavy bombing attacks certain to be made on Axis ships trying to use the straits.

BRITISH PRESS STUDIES SPEECH

London, July 30 (C.P. Cable) — Commenting on Prime Minister Churchill's defence of the government's supply organization, The Daily Telegraph declared today that while the "present system is by no means perfect . . . it has produced a prodigious output and affords the most effective means of setting right the things which still go wrong."

The Times said "the Prime Minister will not weaken the country nor the government by accepting under criticism reinforcement of the war effort which is its motive and purpose."

The Manchester Guardian described the Prime Minister's review in the House of Commons yesterday as "heartening and stimulating," but asserted "the charge Mr. Churchill did not meet is that there are big gaps and unevenness in our general economic plan."

Manchester Guardian's View

The Guardian declared there is a belief among employers and trade unions that "we are not yet employing our full strength in production and that there are defects in our organization which should be remedied."

The News Chronicle commented that "nothing Mr. Churchill said will alter the fact that there is a conviction among large numbers of industrialists and working people, politicians, administrators and economists, that we are not doing all we can."

The Daily Herald said the speech "very clearly shows that the particular problems of output as well as those of strategy, general direction of the war and individual leadership are at present to a great extent in Mr. Churchill's charge. And it is a large part of our case that so much should be placed upon the shoulders of one man."

Women of Empire Do Noble Work Says Duke of Kent

Ottawa, July 30 (CP)—The Duke of Kent thinks highly of work being done by women to help the Empire's war effort.

"Women through the Empire are making a splendid effort and their's is a real contribution," he said last night at a press conference here.

"Recordings of this work by the newspapers is very important, very important indeed."

Children in Britain are in good health, he said, and the small ones don't fully realize just what the war means or its magnitude.

"My own (Prince Edward George and Princess Alexandra) prattle away all the time about Hitler, bombs and the blitz without knowing really what they are talking about," he added with a smile.

As for the youth of the United Kingdom, one thing is certain—"they are not afraid; there is no fear at all among the youth."

"It is a part of their life and they can take it in their stride," he said.

Chiltern Hills Booming in War

Evacuees and Others From London Enliven Former Quiet Bucks Area.

Chesham Bots, England, —(CP)—Before the war this placid Buckinghamshire village in the wooded Chiltern Hills had a retired population of 3,000 people and one small post office.

Today the population exceeds 9,000, one small village store has 400 registered families and the families and the Catholic Church has doubled its congregation.

It's almost impossible for the traveller to get a room or a bed in Chesham Bots now. Even if a room is to be had, the cost is usually £1 ($4.50) for "bed and breakfast". And it usually means sharing the room with someone else.

In the nearby town of Amersham the story is the same. Ten thousand reduced-rate railway tickets for working men are issued every month at the local station. There were none issued before the war. The post office has hired extra staff for the pre-war level of 140,000 delivered letters and 80,000 posted every week has gone up 80 per cent.

The one large movie theatre in Amersham has queues four-deep on Saturdays. The local school is working in shifts to accommodate an extra 200 scholars. The biggest grocery store now has 1,600 registered customers against 300 normally.

Most of the extra population is accounted for by evacuees from London, official and unofficial. Many people who formerly lived in the capital now commute back and forth daily. Others have settled in the country for the duration.

FAREWELL TO TABERNACLE

London, —(CP)— Seven hundred men and women recently gathered at the bomb-damaged Spurgeon's Tabernacle, named for the noted nineteenth-century evangelist, and took part in a farewell service—last to be held in the church until it is rebuilt after the war.

RUSSIAN TIDE

Unofficial sources reported the German advance units pushed back as much as 100 miles from positions they once reached, but did not specify in what sectors.

No Sign of Frozen Front

Lozovsky said the war, mid-way through its sixth week, still was one of mobility, without sign of a "frozen front." What trenches have been dug, he said, were intended as springboards for counter-attacks, rather than positional warfare.

He scoffed at German claims of great destruction of Russian planes, tanks and manpower.

"We still have enough to spare of all of these," he declared.

Red Star, organ of the Red Army, reported on the other hand that Germany's great expenditures of gasoline on the vast Russian front were rapidly exhausting the Reich's supply.

The army organ estimated Germany's pre-war oil supply at 6,000,000 to 7,000,000 tons a year and said production now is only about 20 per cent of that. British bombings from the west have made great inroads into the German synthetic oil output, the newspaper said, and Russian air raids have destroyed much of the Reich's only possible additional oil resources in Rumania.

HOWE SAYS LOSS

the gates, in "something like a sit-down strike." It was not until Sunday that they left.

"The Arvda disturbance was the "The Arvida disturbance was the production in Canada since the war began," Mr. Howe said. "The loss will amount to thousands of tons of aluminum.

"Fortunately reserves in Canada and Great Britain, it is expected, will be sufficient to avoid interrupton in airplane production here or overseas."

Two companies of active army men were moved to Arvida as a "precautionary measure" on Sunday but considerable delay had been experienced in making the necessary arrangements with municipal and provincial authorities.

Mr. Howe said that to avoid a recurrence of such delays in future, an order-in-council has been passed giving the Munitions Minister, through the Minister of National Defence, authority to call out the active army "to prevent or suppress riots, disturbances of the peace or other actions likely to impede or obstruct the production or delivery of munitions of war or supplies or the construcion of defence projects."

"This (the Arvida outbreak) was not a labor dispute," the Minister said. "The officers of the Labor Union knew nothing about it. There had been no demands for higher wages or any changes in the working conditions. Work was resumed without any concessions being granted."

He said some of the men inside the plant shouted "a dollar an hour" when asked what they wanted but there was no organized representation to the company.

Trouble Began Thursday

Mr. Howe said the trouble at Arvida began Thursday afternoon "out of a blue sky." Some of the men in the pot-room quit their posts and men from other departments soon came in and "some kind of melee started." He did not know if there was any real violence, but anyway the trouble spread throughout the plant.

The pot-room is the section of the plant where aluminum finally is turned out by electrolysis—"the final purification process." Lines of huge pots have to be continuously agitated.

Office workers and engineers tried to keep some of the pots operating after the melee started but finally had to give up and shut off the power to protect the pots from worse damage. The fluid in the pots soon congealed and now will have to be chipped out, a long, tedious process not expected to be completed until three weeks from last Thursday, when the trouble began.

Mr. Howe said the gigantic plant had its private protective service but these men, all company employees, drifted out with the rest. There were also a few troops in the vicinity.

The men who took control of the plant were not evicted, but came out of their own accord. It was decided that without an overwhelming number of troops, force would cause more damage than delay, so the men were left inside as long as they wanted to stay.

Mr. Howe declined to answer as to the nationality of the 300 men who seized the plant but said one or two were of doubtful nationality and are being investigated particularly. There had been rumors that two of the men involved had "not been in the country very long."

300 MEN SEIZED

Walkout Among Potsmen

Picard, speaking to the meeting about the start of the walk-out among the "potsmen", said that the latter claimed that there were not enough men to take care of this work. He said that in these conditions the work was of such a nature that "it got on men's nerves so that even old friends were likely to come to blows".

Work was resumed in the plant by last night's night shift. It was not stated what proportion of the normal staff was engaged but the company posted notices saying certain classifications would not be required owing to "freezing" of the "pots".

Reported Demands of Potsmen

In the absence of an official statement from the strikers, individual workers told newspapermen that on Thursday some four hundred "potsmen" presented demands for better working conditions and salary increases. A number of workers said no demands had been made previously to the company, but they claimed that it was well known that they were dissatisfied, had been talking about the possibility of a strike for a year, and had held off in the hope that matters would be remedied.

The four hundred men, when their demands were allegedly refused, are reported to have prevented the Thursday night shift from taking their posts and to have remained in the plant until Sunday morning.

Trouble 'Out of Blue Sky'

(In Ottawa Munitions Minister Howe said the trouble began "out of a blue sky without any advance intimation as far as I have been able to find out". He said, "this was not a labor dispute. There had been no demands for higher wages or any changes in the working conditions".)

On Friday the remainder of the 5,000 plant employees stopped work and on Saturday they were joined in a sympathetic strike by 4,000 men working on a plant addition which is being built by the Foundation Company of Canada.

Troops arrived from Valcartier Sunday and were reinforced by a further detachment Monday.

The workers held a mass meeting Monday and voted 2,453 to 51 to continue the strike.

The exact nature of the original demands of the "potsmen" was not made known along the route followed by the Duke, particularly about the war memorial in Connaught Place.

Duke is Cheered

Cheers were heard at intervals as the Duke, smiling, bronzed by the sun and apparently rested from his tiring trans-Atlantic flight, saluted those lining the street.

Both the Duke and his aide wore the uniforms of their rank in the Royal Air Force. The Duke is an air commodore attached to the staff of the Inspector General of the R.A.F.

His Royal Highness was greeted at the headquarters entrance by Air Vice-Marshal L. S. Breadner, chief of staff, R.C.A.F., who presented the Deputy Minister for Air, S. L. de Carteret, and a number of headquarters officers with whom the Duke entered the building for an exhaustive tour of the administration offices of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

The Duke had no other scheduled public functions today but tomorrow will resume his tour of inspection with visits to the Service Training School at Uplands Field and the R.C.A.F. field at Rockcliffe, both in suburban Ottawa.

SUDBURY BOARD SAID TO IGNORE RECOMMENDATION

Reported to Have Refused to Reinstate Three Teachers on Suggestion of Board of Reference

FIRED BY PRINCIPAL

Toronto, July 30—(CP)—A meeting of the Ontario Secondary Schools Teachers' Association executive will consider scholastic conditions in Sudbury because "we will not wish any of our members to run a risk" by taking a post there, according to S. H. Henry, General Secretary.

He was commenting on a report that the Sudbury Board of Education had decided against a recommendation of the Board of Reference that three teachers, recently dismissed, be reappointed. The Board of Reference, appointed by the Ontario Minister of Education, was making the first decision of its kind.

"We have heard that the Sudbury Board of Education intends to oppose the Reference Board's decision," Mr. Henry said. "If conditions are as we understand, we will not wish any of our members to run a risk of similar treatment."

The Board of Reference is comprised of Judge I. H. McDonald, Sault Ste. Marie, chairman; Dr. A. C. Lewis, headmaster, U.T.S. and A. Fournier, Sudbury High School Board.

In his recommendation, Judge McDonald said that responsibilities of principalship in Sudbury "call for leadership with more experience, tact and judgment than was evidenced by (The principal) Mr. (E. J.) Wyley." The teachers, who had a total of 61 years' service, "were dismissed at the request of the principal."

The recommendation was supported by a letter from G. P. Rogers, Deputy Minister of Education, to the Sudbury Board. No reasons were given for dismissal of the three teachers, Miss Maude E. Millar, Hugh S. Berlanquet and Redmond Kinchsular.

22 English Miners Killed in Explosion

London, July 30 (C.P. Cable) — Twenty-two miners were killed in a terrific explosions at Crigglestone Colliery, near Wakefield, Yorkshire last night. All but six of the bodies had been brought to the surface this morning.

One of the injured, M. Broadhead, said he was blown about 40 yards by the explosion. A rescuer said coaltubs at the coalface nearly two miles from the bottom of the pit were thrown about like match boxes.

The explosion occurred in the south sector of the mine and three rescue brigades quickly went to work. About 160 men working in other sections of the pit were brought safely to the surface and all returned to aid in rescue operation. Relatives kept a night-long vigil in the colliery yard.

CANADIAN RED CROSS AGREES TO JOINT APPEAL

Agrees to Request Not to Proceed With Separate Drive This Fall

SINGLE SPRING DRIVE

Ottawa, July 30 —(CP)— The Canadian Red Cross Society has agreed to a request from the government not to proceed with a separate national drive for funds this autumn and to join with other auxiliary war services in one united appeal next spring, War Services Minister Thorson announced today.

The Minister told a press conference that the Red Cross will be able without a fall appeal to finance its operations until next spring, including an increase from 10,000 to 35,000 weekly in the number of boxes of food prepared for Imperial prisoners of war.

The Finance Department had been trying to systematize public appeals for funds. Its view was that the field should be left clear in the fall for the appeals of the ordinary peacetime community services and that only one drive for the auxiliary war services should be held in the spring, leaving the rest of the year clear for the government's own public financing.

This aim would be reached through the decision of the Red Cross to join the Canadian Legion, Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., Salvation Army, Knights of Columbus and Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire which last spring made a joint drive for funds.

"The amount of the united drive next spring has not been decided as yet, but it is likely to be a very large one," Mr. Thorson said.

Mr. Thorson said it was his understanding there now are about 70,000 British Commonwealth prisoners of war. The increase in the number of food boxes to be packed by the Canadian Red Cross was caused partly by an increase of prisoners and partly because of "some kind of difficulty in doing the packing in the United Kingdom."

The boxes, packed in Toronto, contain 16 items of food, equivalent to 2,070 calories and weigh 11 pounds apiece. The cost of each box is about $2.50.

In regard to the new arrangement under which the Red Cross will join forces with the other war services in a united appeal next spring, Mr. Thorson expressed "great appreciation for the sympathetic and co-operative attitude" of Mr. Justice P. H. Gordon of the Saskatchewan Appeal Court, chairman of the executive committee of the Red Cross.

"I am confident that under his guidance the Red Cross will continue to operate on the finest principles in its traditional role of an agent of mercy in time of war," the Minister said.

PROUD OF HIS TIE

Belfast (CP)—"It is a fashion in some quarters to make fun of the old school tie, but I am not ashamed of mine and if I had two I would wear them," Major-General R. V. Pollok, former G.O.C. Northern Ireland, told students at Campbell College (Belfast) Speech day.

U.S. PATROLS AID BRITAIN TO GAIN THE UPPER HAND

Sen. George Says There is a Gradual Decline in Loss of Shipping

INVASION FEAR LESS

Washington, July 30. — (AP) — Chairman Walter George (Dem.-Ga.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said today that the United States Naval Patrol of sea lanes to Iceland appeared to have been of such assistance that Great Britain was "slowly gaining the upper hand" in the battle of the Atlantic.

The Senator also spoke with guarded optimism of the Russian stand against the German attack on the Soviet. He referred to reports from the eastern front as "heartening".

Emphasizing that he based his observations only on unofficial reports that had come to him, George told reporters there were indications that the United States Defence Patrol of the sea lanes had been of "great value" to the Royal Navy in efforts to move supplies to beleaguered Britain.

"It seems apparent", George said, "that the British are slowly gaining the upper hand in the Atlantic. There is a gradual, but nevertheless marked decline in the loss of shipping".

Turning, to Russia, he said reports of terrific Nazi losses in manpower and mechanized equipment in the Russian campaign made it appear to experts with whom he had talked that the Germans would be occupied in Russia for at least the next six weeks, even if they brought up strong reinforcements and succeeded in breaking through the Soviet Defence lines.

For that reason, he continued, it was reasonable to believe that there might not be any Nazi attempt to invade Britain this year . . unless a stalemate on the eastern front forced Hitler to turn in desperation toward a long-chance gamble on a winter attempt to land troops and equipment on the British Isles.

George declined to comment on an assertion by Mr. Churchill, in his address to the House of Commons yesterday, that the United States was "advancing in rising wrath to the very verge of war".

Publisher MacFadden Wins Damage Suit

Albany, N.Y., July 30 (AP)—The Court of Appeals rejected Tuesday the effort of Mrs. Mary Macfadden to recover 2,500,000 damages against her estranged husband, Publisher Bernarr Macfadden.

Mrs. Macfadden said she and the publisher entered a life business partnership in 1914 to promote physical culture. She contended the business had accumulated more than $5,000,000 in the ensuing years and claimed damages for breach of the alleged partnership.

Macfadden maintained that under the separation agreement in 1932 his wife was given a trust fund guaranteeing a $15,000 annual income.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Not Welcome

"But, Al, I promised mother I'd stay with Clara," Marilyn protested. "Mums was terribly worried. She seems to sense something is wrong. I didn't tell her—just that Clara wanted me to come to New York to be with her for a few days. If Mums finds I've gone to another hotel, she'll be frantic."

"Then we'll see your mother doesn't know—for a few days anyhow. I can fix it at Clara's hotel to take care of your mail or any long distance messages. I know a girl over there—Miss Nevermind."

"Al, will you be serious? I'm terribly worried, really. I'm afraid I haven't much influence with Clara."

"I am serious. Never more serious in my life. When I think of sweet, clean you going to bat for that—what I mean to say is I don't like the setup with you in it. What's more, Uncle Al insists that you don't tag along with Blondie unless he or some other male relative is along to—well, to give the party tone. I doubt she'll invite you, but just in case, the answer is NO. She starts rehearsing in a couple of days—says she—in new floor show at the Blue Parrot—night club to you. There's a heavy swain yclept Herman Hess who's taking her places. He labors under the delusion he's a playboy and spends tons of do-re-mi proving it. I wouldn't like the color of his hair—if he had any."

"It sounds—hopeless. Knowing Clara as I do—"

"Keep the chin up, Heartbeat. We'll shake Blondie loose from the fleshpots. The Chief—Palmer Watson, head of Metropole—has given orders to go the limit. He's set on getting her out of town before she pulls the company down over his head. The first thing we have to do is to make a little reconnaissance trip to Clara's hotel."

Al paid the bill.

"I'm ready," Marilyn said. Her chin was firm.

"Right. Let's go!"

A voice thick with sleep answered the telephone when Marilyn asked for Room 369 at Clara's hotel.

"Is this Clara Marsh?" Marilyn said.

"Yes. What do you want? came peevishly.

"Clara," eagerly, "this is Marilyn."

Marilyn heard a rustling, a confused sound of motion at the other end of the wire.

"Marilyn!" Clara was wide awake now. "You mean my sister Marilyn? Quit trying to be funny. Whoever you are, you have a nerve calling me this hour of the morning."

"But I am your sister Marilyn. Don't you recognize my voice?"

"For the lovva—where are you?"

"Downstairs in the lobby of your hotel. I'm coming right up."

"Well—it is you. What do you mean by following me to New York! You came to spy on me, that's what. I can thank Al Martino for this. He's getting even because I won't do what he wants me to. I'll get even with him. I'll—"

"Clara, please, I don't know what you're talking about. I came to New York on my vacation, to see the Fair—"

"Yes you did," derisively. "You came to spy on me. You let me alone, hear? You stay away from my room!" It was a shout. "You keep out of my hotel. If you bother me again I'll call the manager and have you put out for bothering me. I'm NOT going back to Millville, and that's that. GOOD-BYE."

The receiver clicked sharply.

Marilyn stood for a time holding the mute receiver to her ear. She must have time to compose herself. Her lips were pressed together tightly, her eyes closed to shut back the tears, half of hurt, half chagrin.

"What's the news, Puss-in-Boots?" Al asked, gently for him. "Sister isn't overcome with joy at the sound of your voice? She didn't ask you to share her lavish apartment?"

"She was furious." Now Marilyn dared hang up the receiver, face Al. "She says I'm not to come near her, that I'm here to spy on her."

"The more I hear of Blondie, the better I like strangulation." Al made a gesture of disgust. "Not come near her, huh? Fine! So we'll walk straight up to her room and make a noise like arriving guests."

"No, we can't do that. Clara said she'd call the manager and have me put out if I bothered her again."

"She'll WHAT?"

"She'd do it, too, or try to. When Clara's in a temper she doesn't know what she's doing—she doesn't care. There'd be a scene—it might get into the papers—she being in the public eye, a beauty queen—"

"Beauty queen? If that big blonde's a beauty, I'm Bob Taylor with all the good points of Ty Powers thrown in. So she wants to play rough, does she? Then we'll play her way. Wait right where you are, H.B. I'll check your bag. We're going for a walk around the block."

"Perhaps that would be best." Marilyn felt defeated. "We might think of some way to persuade Clara to listen to reason—"

"I've already thought," Al said, donning his best business manner. "One twist of the brain, and out pops an idea. Bright idea Al, they calls me. We check bag, and we're off for the fights."

Halfway down the block, Al turned Marilyn in at a flower shop.

"Gardenia, please", he told the clerk. "A very special gardenia for a very special lady. Also a dozen posies, big showy ones, lots of color, lots of oomph—to be delivered."

The clerk was pleased. Nice order.

"We have special roses, sir, very special. The stems they are ver' long, and the scent, the aroma—magnifique. There is the American Beauty, regal, sir, regal. There is also the yellow rose from our own hothouse—"

"Yellow!" Al grabbed the astonished clerk's hand, shook it vigorously. "How did you guess it? Wrap up a couple of dozen yellows in a nice gaudy bundle—lots of silver ribbon and gauze and chi-chi."

"Yes sir." The clerk was used to odd orders. "Where shall I send them, sir? Would you like a card, to enclose your name?"

"No, I'll send a boy for them from the hotel down the street. How soon can you have them ready?"

"At once, sir. At once."

"I guess that will be soon enough. Get the gardenia. I'll pay you now. Sa-ay, that is a posie!" Al exclaimed as the clerk lifted it, pure ivory and glistening green, from a bed of cotton. Al took the flower, presented it with a new solemnity to Marilyn. "My compliments, Duchess," he said. "If the flower were lovelier, it would be like you."

Marilyn flushed with pleasure. What girl doesn't thrill at being likened to a lovely flower?

In the street again, Al said, "You're wondering about the yellow roses. They're the passkey to Blondie's apartemnt. She's whacky about having her rooms filled with flowers from what she calls her 'admirers.' It's a hundred to one she won't open the door until she knows who's on the other side. A boy bearing gifts will get the welcome signal.

"We'll step right back to the hotel. I'll get a phone girl there—Miss Nevermind—to pick us a boy who knows his way around. For a healthy tip a bellhop can be awful smart. He'll take the roses to Blondie's room without stopping to send her a letter he's coming. When he steps inside the door to to the wall alongside the advance on his heels. I may even give him a push to be sure he doesn't stand in my way. Once inside, I'll play doorman. I'll see that the door stays open until you—you're close the gods. Maybe Blondie will be too guard during the preliminaries—until you go over the top—I mean over the threshold. The boy will take a fast dive out, I'll close the door very fast and very tight and after that—we're in the laps of the gods. Maybe londie will be too weak to stand up under a surprise attack. Anyhow, we'll be close enough to the enemy to see the whites of her eyes. How do you like my war plans Leftenant?"

Marilyn said, staunchly, "I like any plan that will get me to Clara."

"We'll call this one the Yellow Plan," said Al. "If we're thrown back, we'll try a plan of another color."

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Puds Simkins and Shorty Judge were sitting on Shorty's front steps not saying anything special, and I said, Gosh shang the luck.

What's a matter? Puds said, and I said, I was thinking about something happened to me a little while ago. When it comes to people having hard luck, I'm the champeen of the world. I was sitting on the cerbstone eating the last half of a chocklit mushmellow bar, and some darn dog came up while I wasn't noticing and started to lick my candy, and some people were looking so I had to give the darn dog the rest of it, the darn dog, I said.

That's nothing compared to what happened to me today at luntch, Puds said. My mother's dressmaker was there so my mother send me around to the drugstore for a pint of ice cream so we'd have dizzert, and the man filled the carton away up over the top and he said, Do you want me to put the lid on? and I said Yes without thinking and he quick went and scraped all the ice cream off the top so the lid would fit on, and we just had enough ice cream to go around and if he hadn't of scraped the top off it would just of made a 2nd helping for me, Puds said.

Well you 2 dont need to think you've got a lease on all the hard luck, Shorty Judge said. My ant was suppose to get here this morning, and what does she do but send a telegram saying she cant come, and if the teelgram had got here half an hour sooner I wouldn't of had to take the bath, and now I wouldn't be surprised if I'm catching a cold from it, he said.

Wich just then a hunk of ice fell off a ice waggon going passed and broke all up in little pieces and we all had free ice to suck till we got tired, making us feel partly lucky again.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Round Up"

There's something new in love which the moviegoer will learn when he sees beautiful Patricia Morison, Richard Dix and Preston Foster solve that age-old triangular heart-trouble in "The Round Up," which opens tomorrow at the Capitol theatre.

Patricia's in a spot—torn between loyalty to her husband and a burning desire for her old flame. How she manages to keep both men apart, keep her husband from learning the truth, and finally discovers which one she really loves, makes "The Round Up" a romantic outdoor adventure story you will find hard to forget.

Harry Sherman, Hollywood's top producer of Westerns, has hoarded the screen play for over ten years, waiting to find the perfect cast to portray the colorful characters called for in the script.

Until the moment when "The Round Up" actually went into production, Sherman kept the cast a secret—and no wonder. Besides the veteran star, Richard Dix, and Preston Foster, fresh from his laurels in Paramount's pageantry of color and action, "North West Mounted Police," Sherman decided to introduce a brand new type of this, the first screen appearance of Jack Benny's popular radio announeer, 300-pound, genial Don Wilson, and thirteen-year-old Betty Brewer, child find of the year, and you have some idea of Sherman's motives.

Directing honors go to Lesley Selander, while composers, Phil Ohman and Foster Carling, are to be congratulated for their new music, "Love Never Grows Old," "Easy-Go-Slim," and "Ride 'em Cowboy."

'Sleepers West'

Wisecracking, two-fisted Michael Shayne makes another appearance in "Sleepers West," the 20th Century-Fox picture which is also on the same program. Lloyd Nolan again portrays the matchless private detective, and Lynn Bari, Mary Beth Hughes, Edward Brophy and Ben "Shadrach" Carter are featured with him.

"Sleepers West" takes place aboard the crash-bound Comanche Limited, with a brunette heartache, a blonde headache and other mysterious characters aboard, and it offers Shayne his toughest case.

The universal news of the world wide events and the 4th chapter of the thrilling serial "The Mysterious Dr. Satan" complete the program.

AT THE BELLE

"A Woman's Face"

Joan Crawford presents both her greatest dramatic role and her greatest surprise to her fans in "A Woman's Face," gripping drama of a woman's soul, on the Belle screen tonight, Thursday and Friday, matinee daily, with Melvyn Douglas and Conrad Veidt.

Miss Crawford makes her first appearance in a wierd makeup, representing a woman horribly scarred from birth, and, as a result, the poisonous enemy of all mankind. Infatuated with a brilliant madman, she sets out to commit murder for him. Restored to beauty by a surgeon, her nature gradually changes with her face in a graphic story of regeneration.

Miss Crawford as Anna Holm, on trial for murder for the first decent thing she had ever done in her life, presents a striking dramatic figure Douglas plays the surgeon who restores her beauty and later figures in her regeneration, and Veidt enacts the marman.

George Cukor, who gave the screen such hits as "The Philadelphia Story" and "The Women," directed "A Woman's Face,' with Victor Saville, of "Goodbye Mr. Chips" fame, producing.

The sterling supporting cast features Osa Massen, Reginald Owen, Albert Bassermann, Marjorie Main, Donald Meek, Connie Gilchrist, Richard Nichols, Charles Quigley and Gwill Andre.

A cable trip over a roaring gorge, a mad race against death in the snow in sleighs drawn by galloping horses, and other thrills mingle with the dramatic courtroom scenes and other details of the elaborately staged and costumed production.

Belle Shows Lively Film

Plenty of fun, loads of laughs and romance with a spice to it, all combine to make "Thieves Fall Out," the new Warner Bros. picture which is the added laugh feature attraction, lively film entertainment that should please audiences young and old. Eddie Albert and Joan Leslie, two of the screen's most likeable young players, head the cast. In the supporting roles are Jane Darwell, Academy Award winner, Alan Hale, William T. Orr and many others.

The Belle News of the day will be exhibited tonight only.

AT THE McCARTHY

Gracie Fields

"The Show Goes On," starring our own Gracie Fields, opens tomorrow at the McCarthy Theatre, and advance information rates it "unquestionably the best picture Miss Fields has ever made." Comedy is intermingled with brilliant music and gay songs to give the picture an appeal that should place it among the biggest successes in 1941.

The picture is said to be based on an imaginary career, but there is much to remind one of Gracie's own life in the story of Sally Lee, a mill girl who rises to be a famous comedienne.

The songs featured in the picture should become highly popular. "Smile," the most attractive of an attractive group bids to rival the popularity of "Sing As We Go," whilst the comedy numbers should also receive acclaim.

"The Big Boss"

Starring lovable Otto Kruger in the title role "The Big Boss," this second feature will also be presented this week-end at the McCarthy Theatre in addition to Gracie Fields in "The Show Goes On." An amusing Walt Disney cartoon in technicolor entitled "Mr. Duck Steps Out" will also be presented, making the entire program one of the best of the season.

"Ninotchka"

Receiving the praise of all patrons during the past two days, anyone who has not yet enjoyed the comedy-drama "Ninotchka," starring Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas and Ina Claire, should not fail to attend this evening's final showing of this outstanding hit at the McCarthy Theatre. The program also includes Peter Lorre in "The Stranger on the Third Floor," the top mystery-drama of the season. Latest Fox News events of the week completes an all-round excellent show every member of the family will enjoy.

"Adventure in Washington"

From the studios which in 1940 released the outstanding production, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," now comes another great hit entitled "Adventure in Washington," with two of the screen's greatest personalities heading an all-star cast, Herbert Marshall and Virginia Bruce. "Adventure in Washington" is booked for presentation at the McCarthy Theatre Civic Holiday, commencing with a midnight performance Sunday after midnight. The companion feature in addition will be the comedy riot "Two in a Taxi," featuring Anita Louise and Russell Hayden.

Conrad Veidt and Joan Crawford in a scene from "A Woman's Face," opening at the Belle Theatre today, after three weeks at Loew's Theatre, Toronto. Melvyn Douglas co-stars with Miss Crawford as the plastic surgeon who brings back her beauty and paves the way for her regeneration.

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS WHO GET THE "TOOLS" TO BRITAIN

Here are some of the British sea captains who are playing vital role in the Battle of the Atlantic. They were photographed at the secret headquarters whence all moves on Britain's side of the battle are directed. These are the men who command the ships of the convoys that brave submarines, mines, surface raiders and bombing planes to get the "tools" to Britain.

IT WAS SCHEDULED TO BOMB MOSCOW

This radiophoto from Moscow illustrates the statement of Russian Ambassador Maisky when he said concerning the Nazis' "timetable"—"It's a long way to Tipperary." Correspondents for foreign newspapers and syndicates are giving a thorough onceover to a German bomber, one of the 100 that were sent over Moscow to burn it out. A few planes did break through the cordon of anti-aircraft fire and Russian night fighting planes—but the Luftwaffe bomber shown here was one of the many that didn't.

U.S. GUNBOAT

longing to the Tutuila was shattered, it was announced, and some other equipment on the dock nearby was reported damaged.

The Tutuila narrowly escaped bombs which fell in the American safety zone in Chungking on June 15, leading to a strong United States protest to Japan.

At that time several bombs fell in the vicinity of the United States Embassy at Chungking and near the Tutuila.

Japanese naval officials said the June bombing in the American zone was unintentioal.

Reports to the naval operations bureau on the new incident did not state whether the gunboat, which accommodates a normal crew of 58 officers and men, returned fire upon the Japanese aircraft.

The Tutuila is a sister vessel to the Panany, which on Dec. 12, 1937, was sunk by Japanese action, with the loss of two lives, on the Yangtse River above Nanking.

The 370-ton Tutuila has had an adventuresome career in Chinese waters.

On May 28, 1940, a heavy bomb fell 100 yards away when the Japanese bombed Chungking. Nineteen days later bombs fell so close that Lieut. Robert Germany, her commander, ordered the crew to take cover. Fragments pelted the craft at that time.

On Oct. 25, 1940, Japanese bombs again rained around the vessel and a huge boulder loosened by the detonations rolled down the river bank and smashed into the Tutuila.

On June 15 bombing of this year seven bombs dropped within 75 yards of the craft, rocking her and breaking glassware aboard the ship.

ARMY DENTISTS TO SEE ACTION HEAD DECLARES

Meanwhile They Are Putting Fight Into Many Thousand Teeth in Canada's Active Services

Ottawa (CP)—The modern Canadian army dentist, an essential factor in maintaining forces at top efficiency, follows the men he serves wherever they go, dental service officials emphasize.

The streamlined, mobile and self-reliant Canadian Dental Corps of today is being tested and developed under the direction of a man who searched the records of nations and applied the knowledge gathered in years of scientific research to make sure that Canadian forces are little handicapped by dental ailments.

To Col. F. M. Lott, DDS., M.Sc. (Dent.), Ph.D., two years ago professor of prothetic dentistry at the University of Toronto, a Signals officer in the First Great War, and now director of dental services, a bad tooth is a great deal more than a painful nuisance.

"Any tooth with a deep cavity will cause trouble sooner or later—serious trouble," said Col. Lott. "In the South African War, 1.2 per cent of the total personnel of the British Army had to be sent home, pensionable, for dental reasons only.

"In the last war it is estimated that from 2,000 to 5,000 men were looking for a dental officer every day, and that meant that almost a complete brigade was immobilized.

"It is the intention of the Canadian Dental Corps to see that such wastage of manpower does not occur again, and to give service of utmost value we must be with the men, wherever they go. In this war, there will be no need for long, fruitless searches for a place where a dentist can be found. Our mobile units will be there, prepared to do as good a job looking after teeth as can be had at home in peaceful times."

Universal Need

Col. Lott's subordinates are busy men, whether they serve in Canada or with Canadian units overseas. "Practically every man who enters the army, navy or air force requires some dental treatment," said Col. Lott. "Some time ago a chart was received from British Columbia indicating that a man had been found whose teeth required no care. That was an occasion."

With the importance of dental corps services recognized by military authorities, the need for further dental officers is constant, Col. Lott said. Nearly a million and a half dental operations— "operations" means filling a tooth, an extraction or other care—have been completed by the corps since the war started, and there are still men in the army for whom the corps has been unable to complete required treatment.

"We need qualified dentists badly," Col. Lott said. "There is on record the report of one officer who completed 96 operations in one day, which should constitute something of a record. But no matter how much we have done it has never completed our work because the increased number of dental officers available has not kept pace with the number of men entering the fighting services."

Ask No Favors

The dental corps makes no apologies for itself, Col. Lott said. We take the view that it is just as honorable to save a man and keep him in action as it is to knock out one of the enemy," he said. "The dental corps is asking for no concessions. Dental officers must qualify as officers as well as dentists and they are taking the basic training just like any other arm of the service.

"They will see action—make no mistake about that. The mobile dental unit will always be within easy reach of the troops it serves and with bombings, paratroops and long range artillery the men who look after it will have their share of excitement.

"Strictly, we are non-combatant troops. But we have the right to self-defence, and I have not the slightest doubt as to what the dental officers and their men will do about defending themselves."

When the war started there were 26 dental officers in the Canadian Army Dental Corps, non-permanent active militia; today there are over 500 in the service with more needed immediately.

In addition, the corps requires "a very limited number" of young men of good education to become dental assistants and technicians, and for them there is the prospect that when the war is over they will be in a preferred position to begin a course for qualification as dentists.

Hopkins Meets Stalin, Discusses U.S. Material Aid

Stalin in Message for President Says Soviet to Play Role in Crushing Hitler

THANKS U. S. PEOPLE

Moscow, July 31—(AP)—Further conferences between Premier Joseph Stalin and Harry L. Hopkins, personal representative of President Roosevelt, were expected today—the 40th of the Russian - German war—as the Soviet army was reported battling the Nazi invaders to a standstill in vital sectors of the long battlefront.

Heavy Fighting Rages

Heavy fighting raged throughout the night, a communique said, on the path of the German drives toward Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev.

Mention, however, of familiar place names which have appeared in Russian war bulletins for days—Porkhov, Novorzhev, Smolensk and Zhitomir—created the impression there had been no marked change in the fighting lines.

The Russians said they had beaten off three German attempts to bomb Leningrad by daylight yesterday and another attack on Moscow last night. They said their own air force was pounding German ground forces.

Hopkins, who flew to Moscow from London Tuesday, was almost immediately granted an interview with the most important and most inaccessible man in Russia. He said he came to see Stalin at Roosevelt's request and he expected another meeting today and perhaps several more before he leaves.

Giving one of the few public reports of an interview with Stalin, Hopkins said in a Press conference at the United States Embassy residence:

Stalin Thanks President of U.S.

"We discussed problems of supply, including types and quantity of materials that can be delivered to the U.S.S.R. I cannot presently speak of the details or quantities.

"Stalin gave me a message to transmit to the President He expressed his sincere appreciation to the President for his offer of assistance and declared he is certain the President and the American people are not mistaken in expressing their conviction that the Soviet people will play their role in crushing Hitler."

Germans Claim Seven Russian Divisions Destroyed on 'Northeast' Front

NAZI CIRCLEMENT

Berlin, July 31 (AP)—Germans claimed today that seven Russian divisions were destroyed on the "northeast front" and a military spokesman said this undoubtedly referred to the defences around Leningrad.

The Soviet troops were alleged to have been annihilated after completion of a German encirclement movement and thousands of prisoners at least 50 cannon and seven anti-aircraft batteries were claimed.

Soviet defences of Leningrad, great Russian industrial city on the Gulf of Finland, had been described earlier by the Germans as precarious.

(The Russians said these stories were "pure propaganda.")

Berlin, July 31.— (AP)—Nazis branded as a failure today the first joint British-Russian military undertaking of the war—an aerial attack yesterday on a German-held port in Northern Norway and claimed the British lost 28 planes reported launched from a carrier in the Arctic Ocean.

(The British Admiralty reported four Nazi supply ships were hit by bombs and that sixteen naval aircraft were lost in two operations. At Petsamo Finland, and Kirkenes, Norway.)

Heavy losses were inflicted on the Red Army during the mopping up operations east of Smolensk, the Germans reported.

Picture Defence Shoved Back

With detail uncommon to High Command communiques in recent days, German headquarters pictured the whole Russian defence line from Estonia to the Ukraine being shoved back and broken.

It referred to Soviet forces in the south as "defeated Russian armies" and claimed German forces had plunged into their retreating units in the Ukraine in a "deep thrust."

On the fiercely-contested Smolensk front in the centre, where the Russians are endeavoring to pinch off a German salient stuck through the Stalin line toward Moscow, the War Bulletin reported "encirclement of the enemy east of Smolensk was further tightened."

Emphasis on Northern Flank

Emphasis, however, remained on the northern flank striking toward Leningrad where, German sources said, the Russians have carried their "scorched earth" strategy to the point of spraying naptha on their forests and igniting them with artillery shells to put a hurdle of fire between Leningrad and the German-Finnish drive.

GERMANS CLAIM

Crisis of Russo-German Struggle Still Lies Ahead, View in Washington

By EDWARD E. BOMAR
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, July 31.—(AP) — Belief that the crisis of the Russo-German struggle still lies ahead was expressed today in informed government quarters on the basis of a limited and uncertain flow of unofficial reports supplementing the formal communiques from Berlin and Moscow.

A marked unwillingness to predict the ultimate outcome was manifest however, on contrast with the widespread feeling at the start of the invasion more than five weeks ago that a Nazi victory was inevitable and probably would come swiftly.

Officials with access to the most authoritative available data showed a guarded inclination to favor German chances this summer. This victories, however, conceivably might not decide whether the Nazis would be able to beat down Red Army resistance before unfavorable fall weather sets in. The officials who declined to be quoted by name, emphasized this last point.

Officials concerned with technical military aspects of the vast conflict expressed particular interest in these reports.

The Russians claim an early and almost complete elimination of parachute and air-borne infantry attacks.

The Russians also have presented evidence in support of a claim to perfection of anti-aircraft defences.

The detailed reports indicated that the Germans, too, have developed an extremely efficient anti-tank defence.

The official reports tend to confirm Berlin claims that a number of Red Army divisions have been identified as originally a part of the Far Eastern forces. Possibly ten such divisions have been moved westward over the transSiberian railway, leaving some forty infantry, cavalry and mechanized divisions to face the Japanese. An undetermined number of an original force of about 2,400 planes in the Far East likewise are said to have been transferred.

JAPAN OFFERS APOLOGIES FOR BOMBING GUNBOAT

CREW UNINJURED

By MAX HILL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Tokyo, July 31 —(AP)— Foreign Minister Vice Admiral Teijiro Toyoda offered apologies and expressed regret today to United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew for the bombing of the United States gunboat Tutuila at Chungking, China.

Grew and Toyoda talked at the foreign office for 20 minutes. The chief aide of the Japanese navy ministry also visited the American naval attache, Commander Henri Smith-Hutton, to express his regrets.

The apologies and regret over the bombing, which occurred yesterday, were offered before the American envoy was able to make the representations he had been instructed to make by Washington.

Before Ambassador Grew could go to the foreign office this morning, Vice-Foreign Minister Kumaichi Yamamoto called at the American embassy.

Grew asked for an immediate appointment with Foreign Minister Toyoda and was told the foreign minister planned to come to the embassy.

PROCESSING TAX ON WHEAT ENDS

Tax Will Not be in Operation for New Crop Year—Threatened Increase in Bread Price Avoided

Ottawa, July 31 (CP)—Trade Minister MacKinnon announced the Wheat Processing Tax of 15 cents per bushel ends today and will not be in operation in the new crop year.

Mr. MacKinnon said that lapsing of the tax would avoid a threatened increase in the price of bread in Canada.

The tax has been in effect for one year and was established with the purpose of assisting the financing of government wheat programs. In the crop year ending today revenue from the tax was more than $5,000,000, Mr. MacKinnon said.

The tax was said to have borne heavily on bakers whose costs have been increased because of the war.

"An early increase in the price of Canadian bread was indicated and the lapsing of this tax should prevent such a rise taking place," Mr. MacKinnon said.

Deep Nazi Thrusts In Battle of Smolensk Shown of Little Use

London, July 31—(CP)—A counter-offensice by more than 3,000,000 Red Army soldiers on a front stretching from Leningrad to Kiev was predicted today in Russian military circles in London.

It was asserted that the attack might begin within two weeks, as soon as the Russian High Command is satisfied that the German armies have expended their reserves of strength in attempts to smash the Red Army around Smolensk, barring the way to Moscow.

The Soviet informants said the predicted offensive would be one of the largest in history with the Red Army ranks strengthened by hundreds of thousands of reservists now being assembled and completely equipped for the big push.

London, July 31—(CP)—The outcome of the Battle of Smolensk, considered one of the most decisive engagements of the Russian-German war, will depend upon the ability of the Nazi High Command to deploy fresh first-rate troops against the Russians, said authoritative quarters today.

The German position appeared complicated because Russian counter-attacks were reported by-passing advancing Germans often and attacking lines of communications, these quarters said.

These quarters suggested that the last two weeks demonstrated deep German mechanized thrusts to be of little use because "Russians close in around them, cut off supplies and destroy the tanks."

British and United States military men here have voiced praise for what seems to be a Russian defence in depth.

Most observers were quick to caution Britons against undue optimism although there was evident feeling that the first two Nazi offensives had fallen short of their objectives.

RAF Offensive Against Reich 'Really to Start' About Sept. 1

Correspondent Says 'Where We Sent a Dozen Bombers Last Winter We Will Send Out 200'

LONG RANGE PLAN

New York July 31—(CP)—Noel Monks, air correspondent of the London Daily Mail, said in a press conference here Wednesday that the Nazis "will have to invent a new word for blitz" when the Royal Air Force starts all-out bombing of Germany in the autumn.

Mr. Monks, a correspondent with the R.A.F. in France, said that Great Britain's air offence against Germany will "really start" about Sept. 1 when the nights grow longer.

"What Germany did to us last winter was nothing to what we are going to do," Mr. Monks added. "Where we sent out a dozen bombers last winter we will send out 200."

These are not reprisal raids, he explained. "There is no such word as reprisal" in the official view of the Air Ministry, he said. All British raids are part of a long-range plan.

He described the rise in strength of the R.A.F. as "fantastic." A new fighter in production in Britain will "absolutely revolutionize air warfare," he added.

The new plane is called the Typhoon. It "can walk past a Spitfire and our new Spitfire can do well over 400 miles an hour," Mr. Monks said.

"Nothing can live against this plane. It will sweep the skies," he declared.

Sir Paul, 36, has been a Conservative member for the Whitby and Scarborough divisions of Yorkshire since 1931. He served last year as a Captain in an anti-aircraft searchlight regiment.

ARMY-AIR FORCE CO-ORDINATION IS GIVEN STRESS

Prime Minister Has Assured Commons That Army Will Receive More Air Support

TYPE OF AIRCRAFT

(By ROSS MUNRO)
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Somewhere in England, July 31 (CP)—The question of establishing a more constant and reliable co-ordination of army and air force in battle operations is receiving considerable attention from senior Canadian officers with the Overseas Forces.

Brought to the fore by the battle of Crete, this problem of army-air force co-operation has been widely discussed by military correspondents in the British press.

Prime Minister Churchill's assurance to House of Commons that the army will receive more air support was welcomed by the army but the method of applying this added air power is still a frequent subject of debate.

Air Force Army Co-operation Squadron

Ever since it was formed, the Canadian Corps has had a Royal Canadian Air Force Army Co-operation Squadron under its command and on every divisional or corps manoeuvre Canadian pilots make aerial reconnaissance. This collaboration has been efficient and effective but the problem goes much further than that.

Present work of the Army Co-operation Squadrons is limited and the champions of new air strength for the army say that what the army wants is to have the Royal Air Force provide aircraft of a type suitable for reconnaissance photography or bombing, as the need may be. In many cases, the planes could be "flying artillery" for armored formations and infantry divisions.

Experiments in this "close support" bombing by squadrons under army command were carried out during a recent army manoeuvre in the south of England. For the climax of the attack, Canadian Corps had several bomber squadrons under its command and called them up half a dozen times to cope with stubborn "enemy" resistance.

BRITISH RAID PORTS IN NORWAY AND FINLAND

Nazi Warships and at Least Four Supply Ships Hit by Naval Aircraft

BRITISH LOSE 16 PLANES

London, July 31—(CP)—Powerful British air raids, springing from land and sea, struck Germany and her dominated lands from the French coast to far northern Norway and her sea lanes connecting them.

A severe raid yesterday by naval planes on the Norwegian port of Kirkenes, high above the Arctic Circle, and Finland's Arctic port of Petsamo, were announced by the Admiralty.

It disclosed the loss of 16 British planes but it said at least four supply ships were hit, harbor works were pounded at Petsamo, four opposing planes were shot down and two hits scored on the 1,460-ton German warship Bremse, a pre-war gunnery training vessel, at Kirkenes.

Aachen and Cologne Areas Bombed

The Air Ministry reported renewal, after a weather-enforced lapse, of the air campaign against Germany and neighboring occupied territories with new overnight poundings in the Aachen and Cologne areas of western Germany.

A Mediterranean-to-Arctic scope was indicated for the resurgent air offensive by a Cairo announcement that the R.A.F. set fire to five planes and damaged several others in an assault yesterday on an Axis airfield and seaplane base at Elmas, Sardinia, Italian island in the western Mediterranean.

Low-diving planes sprayed the interior of the hangars with their guns, the R.A.F. communique said. The attack riddled many planes and in a seaplane hangar a fire was started from which rose smoke visible for 20 miles.

The night raid followed a day attack in Heligoland Bight in which the Air Ministry said a vessel of 1,200 tons was sunk, another of 1,500 and 500 tons, respectvely.

In the Heligoland Bight raid the Air Ministry said seven British planes were missing, while in the night attack on western Germany three were missing.

Docks at Boulogne on the German-occupied French coast also were reported bombed last night.

Only a few German night raiders visited England, the Government said, dropping bombs at

STRIKE CLOSES COTTON PLANT

Hamilton, Ont., July 31—(CP)—Five hundred employees of the Canadian Cotton Company's plant here are on strike today, reportedly because they misunderstood an agreement signed by the company and their union, Local Seven, United extile Workers (Trades and Labor Congress affiliate) last Sunday.

The agreement approved a cost of living bonus of $1.63 weekly for certain employees. The union members, whose officials signed the agreement Sunday, want the bonus paid to all employees over 21 years of age.

W. M. Boyd, manager of the plant, said that no negotiations had taken place between company officials and officals of the union.

Manufacture of Power Alcohol From Wheat May Be Considered

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 31—(CP)—Two abnormal wartime economic conditions, the shortage of gasoline and the surplus of wheat, combine to stimulate a movement in Canada for the production of power alcohol from wheat and other agricultural products.

As a result of studies conducted by the National Chemurgic Committee of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce a recommendation now is before the Government for the setting up of an experimental plant for production of power fuel from wheat. It is expected the recommendation will receive Cabinet consideration shortly.

The committee's findings indicate production of alcohol from wheat will require a Government subsidy because its cost is bound to be greater than the cost of gasoline. Thus, the major question for the Government to decide is whether the national interest justifies the outlay of public funds on the development.

Against the money cost to the taxpayers, those who favor the project set the following considerations: A saving on foreign exchange by lessened imports of crude oil and gasoline, a further saving on foreign exchange through lessened imports of tetraethyl-lead, and the moving of 50,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels of Canada's surplus wheat out of storage, thus reducing costs and improving the general economic situation.

Ickes' Order Affects Stations Maine to Florida

Voluntary Rationing Has Not Achieved Reduction Needed Says Co-ordinator

INDUSTRY CALLED ON

Washington, July 31 —(AP)— In a move toward compulsory restriction on the use of gasoline, Interior Secretary Harold Ickes today called upon the oil industry to close 100,000 service stations in the eastern states from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. seven days a week, effective Aug. 3.

The closing would affect all gasoline retail stations on the Atlantic seaboard from Maine to Florida.

Declaring that "voluntary rationing to date has not achieved the reduction which must be accomplished if we are to avoid a more serious situation later," Mr. Ickes spoke of the possibility of more serious rationing, including issuance of ration cards.

"Unless this first action achieves results, it must be followed by other steps to accomplish our end," said the secretary, who is defence petroleum co-ordinator.

3 MEN CAUGHT IN ROCK BURSTS IN GOLD MINE

Are Given Up as Dead Early Today After Hours of Futile Effort to Reach Them in Lake Shore Mine

SEVERAL ESCAPED

Kirkland Lake, Ont., July 31—(CP)—Three men, trapped by two rock bursts in the Lake Shore gold mine, were given up as dead early today after several hours' effort to reach them proved futile.

The men, caught when the two bursts occurred in the stope between the 3,900 and 4,000-foot level last night, are Peter Cain, 37; Griffith Jones, 38, and Harry McMillan, 37.

Several other miners in the same section were brought to the surface unhurt except for minor bruises.

After rescue parties had been working for several hours, a company executive announced at 2.15 a.m. that "We can't get them." He said working parties would continue to dig but said "It will take some time" to get to the spot where the men are trapped by what is believed to be a great mass of rock.

May Take Days to Reach Men

The rescue parties were said to be working under hazardous conditions of loose rock and broken timbers.

Mine officials said it may be days before the entombed men were rescued.

LORD DAVIDSON RESIGNS POST

Gen. Scorgie, Director General of Ministry of Information, Given Leave of Absence

London, July 31 (CP)—Lord Davidson, controller of production in the Ministry of Information, resigned today. He was appointed March 17.

Lt.-Gen. Norman D. Scorgie, deputy director-general of the Ministry, was granted leave of absence.

The departure of the two key officials was taken as indicating that Brendan Bracken, the new minister, had begun a clean-up from the top.

Lord Davidson and Gen. Scorgie both had been the targets of critics demanding reforms in the handling of news and propaganda.

Lord Davidson, former secretary to Lord Baldwin, was in charge of publications, propaganda articles and films. He was expected to take another government job abroad.

Mr. McNeil will study operations of the Canadian Press London Bureau, whence a group of Canadian newspermen direct the flow of British news to Canadian daily newspapers and will visit CP war correspondents living with and chronicling operations of the Canadian Corps.

COURT PAYS FINE

Chicago, July 31 (AP)—Everett Foster, 11, and his sister, Mary eight, whose parents were served with summons because the children's dog had no licence, came to court with 60 cents and a note from their mother saying no other funds were available and asked if the court would allow a little more time. Judge Thomas Green had a hat passed and $2.40 was collected to meet the $3 licence fee.

LACK OF SILK CLOSES FACTORY

Philadelphia, July 31. —(AP)—Lack of silk and other material forced the closing today of the Cortland Mill of the Gotham Silk Hosiery Company, Inc., which employs approximately 600 workers. This is only the first in an anticipated series of shutdowns resulting from the United States government order freezing Japanese assets in this country.

TWO CARS REPORTED STOLEN IN PAST DAY

Two automobiles were reported stolen in Belleville during the past 24 hours. On Wednesday a brand new 1941 Ford sedan bearing Ontario licence plates number Z 5967 was parked in front of the Riggs Motors on Pinnacle St. There were four gallons of gasoline in the tank and the ignition keys in place. That was all that was needed for some keen-eyed auto thief, who drove off with the vehicle.

Early today police heard that a 1935 Ford car, the property of Robert Henderson, had been stolen from its parking position on Dundas Street.

BOY FALLING OFF BIKE JUST ESCAPES BEING RUN OVER

When the chain on his bicycle suddenly came off a boy was thrown to the pavement on Front Street, Wednesday afternoon just as John Alexander, 272 Bleecker Ave., was driving past. The lad fell off the bike, but Mr. Alexander successfully swerved his vehicle and avoided hitting the prostrate boy, but the car ran over the front wheel of the bike. Mr. Alexander reported the matter to the police but the boy's name was not reported.

NEW CORN DROPS TO LOWER LEVELS

Shortage of raspberry stocks on the city market today forced prices up to former levels of twenty-five cents the box. According to vendors the crop is nearing its end and no reduction in prices is looked for. Blackberries priced at 25c and blue berries at 20c. Huckleberry quotations were firm at $1.25 the twelve-quart basket.

Top-grade eggs sold at steady levels at 35c the dozen with mediums a cent cheaper. New corn dropped to twenty-five cents a dozen ears with homegrown tomatoes also declining to seventy-five cents the basket. New potatoes priced at 50c the peck. POLICE COURT

Fined For Driving Into Side of Bridge

As a sequel to driving his motor car into the side of the bay bridge recently, Clayton Thompson of this city, was fined $5.00, and costs in County Police Court held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today.

"Was there any damage resulting to the bridge?" asked Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

"Very little and he's prepared to pay for any damage, I'm told," assured Provincial Constable R. S. Patterson, who preferred the count.

Drove 80 M. P. H.

Without appearing, Kelly Booklan, Toronto, paid $15.00 and costs after being charged with speeding. "He was going 80 miles per hour past me," stated Constable Patterson.

"What was he doing, trying to commit suicide?" drily remarked Mr. Donnan.

Charged With Beer Theft

Albert Lindsay, Shannonville youth, appeared charged with the theft of beer from the Albion Hotel in that village. R. A. Pringle, local barrister, appeared on Lindsay's behalf and was granted a week's enlargement in this matter, as well as a second charge of giving intoxicants to minors. Provincial Police allege Lindsay stole the beer from the Albion Hotel and then gave a portion of his loot to two teen-aged Shannonville lads.

"No sir, they were scrapping with two men from Toronto who will be charged in a subsequent court," replied Chief Constable Sam Eggleton of Stirling.

Case Laid Over

Charges of taking an automobile without the owner's consent against Malcolm Bird of Sidney Township and a charge of assaulting his wife preferred against Ward Hall were both laid over for one week at the request of R. D. Arnott, K.C., who represented both accused persons.

Wishing Tree Site Marked by Plaque

The spot where the famed Wishing Tree stood for so many years on the West Lake road, has been suitably marked by Prince Edward County authorities under the direction of Road Superintendent J. B. Dunkley. The tree recently blew down and the trunk lies in a field at the side of the road. A post bearing a large attractive sign on either side has been erected on the exact spot where the tree stood and is a source of much interest, especially to tourists who usually photograph it.

The lettering on the sign read as follows:

"Site of the famous Wishing Tree, largest hard or sugar maple. Scientific estimate aged 700 years. Body 7 feet through at the base, branch spread 120 feet. Legend says Indians came long distances to make wishes and hold their dances. Struck by lightning in 1925. Trunk stood here, fell May 3rd., 1941."—Picton Gazette.

Weather in July One of Contrasts

All kinds of records fell by the wayside during the month of July which, considering temperatures and rainfall, will be remembered for quite some time. For not only has the current month been one of the hottest on record, but by a queer freak of nature the month was attended by serious drought and at the same time the amount of rainfall far surpassed the average for July.

During the month just closed the thermometer rose to dizzy heights, 98 degrees being registered as the high mark at the Belleville Purification Plant, and possibly one of the coolest spots in the district. In contrast the minimum temperature was a 52 degrees. Rainfall for the month was 4.17 inches.

In July 1940, the high temperature recorded was a mere 90 degrees in comparison to the high of this month, while the low was 45.8. Rainfall one year ago was 1.87 inches.

$21,930 Building Permits Have Been Issued for July

Compared to last year the building tempo in Belleville still continues on an upward swing with permits issued at the city hall showing that construction to the value of $21,830 was either planned or already under way during the month of July. This figure tops the July, 1940, total, permits to the value of $19,725 having been taken out one year ago.

Of the thirteen permits issued during July, seven were for new dwellings or major alterations to existing buildings and included three permits for small cottages. The only other major item on the month's building list was the construction of a new warehouse sixty by seventy feet on the premises of the Reliance Tool and Aircraft Co., Water Street, at a cost of $7,000.

71st Wedding Anniversary Will Be Celebrated Satur. by Mr., Mrs. C. Fralick, Picton

Picton, July 31—To mark their 71st wedding anniversary will be the unique experience of Mr. and Mrs. Courtland E. Fralick on Saturday. This makes them one of the longest married couples in Canada. Despite this fact they are not excited over the event and no special celebration is planned as in past years. Mr. Fralick is not enjoying the best of health but Mrs. Fralick is as active as she was years ago. Both take an interest in events of the day and are confident that the British will be victorious in the present war.

Mr. Fralick is in his 96th year and Mrs. Fralick is 92. He was born at Cherry Valley, Prince Edward County, while she was born in Herkimer County, New York State, where they met while Mr. Fralick was working there. Following their marriage they came here for their honeymoon and after a year in the States decided to make their home in Prince Edward County. For the past forty years they have resided at East Lake, Mr. Fralick being a farmer for many years. Up until a year ago they resided by themselves and did all their own work, but now their daughter, Mrs. Luther Leavitt makes her home with them.

Mrs. Fralick is much beloved in the community through her assistance in any home where there was sickness or trouble. Both are members of the United Church.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Fralick believe that people are living at too fast a pace these days and wonder how they can stand it. He believes that outdoor exercise is one of the reasons for his longevity.

They have a family of four, Mrs. George Woodward and Mrs. Eldon Scott of East Lake, Mrs. Leavitt and Mrs. Frank Howell of Demorestville. They also have two great-great- grandchildren, nine great-grandchildren and twelve grandchildren.

From 6 to 8 p.m. a fine supper was served by the War Workers in the Exhibition building. At 6.30 p.m. it was estimated that over a thousand had passed through the turnstile and numbers continued to pour in later for the men's softball fixture and the open air entertainment. Owing to the failure of a visiting team to turn up teams captained by Don Phillips and Percy Melville waged a six innings' battle, the Melville aggregation winning by ten to eight.

H. W. Sabine was chairman for the entertainment. After a selection by the band, J. F. Baker entertained the audience with one of his old favorite humorous songs. Then came the feature event of the program "A "Czech Sokol" from Batawa, near Frankford. Anthony Cekota who described himself as the founder of Sokol with Bata gave a brief outline of the history and object of this form of gymnastics identified with Czecko Slovakia for so many years and which at the entry of Germany into his country had 500,000 members. He in turn introduced J. Janeckoa captain of the Sokol Gymnastic Club as the captain with 16 young men and twenty young girls marched onto the platform. The men were then marched off for the girls to execute a smart drill under their trainer.

The girls of public school ages looked very attractive in white blouses with red laced fronts and red skirts also wearing red bows in their hair. To the accompaniment of British martial airs the men returned to the platform to perform their gymnastics. The third and concluding section of the Sokol was finished by the girls eighteen in number, who in appropriate costumes staged a musical floral playlet in which solos and choruses were rendered in their own language. Hearty applause was accorded the members of the Sokol and in extending thanks for the ovation.

Recruiting Talk

Mrs. P. Gray, President of the War Workers rendered a patriotic number then Sergt Major Mason of the Argyll Light Infantry (tank) gave a short recruiting talk, interspersed with song and humorous remarks. Further delighting the large audience Miss Lois Mason sang two numbers. The program ended with another selection by the band and the National Anthem. Booths and games upon the grounds received fine patronage and following the entertainment round and square dancing took place in the exhibition building to music furnished by Austin's Arcadian orchestra. The net proceeds of the celebration will be evenly divided between the Telegram's British War Victims' Fund and the funds of the Marmora Community War Workers.

STARDOM DELAYED

His aspirations of becoming a Hollywood movie star gone on the rocks for the time being, 11-year-old David Herman, of Washington, D.C., is shown leaving the Children's Society shelter in Jamaica, N.Y., to begin his return journey home. David ran away from home to become an actor. His escapade was revealed when he tried to buy an airline ticket to Hollywood "on credit" at La Guardia Field. David's father owns a grocery store in Washington. It was here that David first began to dream of being an "Errol Flynn."

PROBE DEATH OF SAMUEL HUTKA

Clerk in Censorship Branch Suffered Injury to Heart Apparently When He Fell on Stone at Lake

Ottawa, July 31—(CP)—Ontario Provincial Police are investigating the death of Samuel Kukta, 44, of suburban Overbrook who died in hospital yesterday from an injury to the heart apparently suffered when he fell on a stone at White Lake near Arnprior, Ont.

Dr. Harry Dover, acting Chief Coroner, opened an inquest but it was adjourned without the taking of evidence.

How and when Mr. Kukta suffered his injuries has not been ascertained by the police. His wife, who brought him to the hospital here, said she heard her husband cry for help and found him lying on the shore.

Police said it is possible the man was injured in a fall on a stone, but an investigation is being pressed to determine whether or not he was a victim of foul play.

Native of Russia, Mr. Kukta came to Canada shortly before the outbreak of the First Great War. He was appointed to the Customs and Excise Division of the Department of National Revenue a short time later. At the time of his death, he was a clerk in the censorship branch here.

He was married in 1926 in Whitney, Ont., to the former Mary Dargus, who survives. In addition to his widow and his mother, who lives in Whitney, he is survived by three brothers, Michael of Whitney, Joseph of Detroit and the third in Russia; and three daughters, Joy, Norma and Nancy, all at home.

AT THE BELLE

"A Woman's Face"

The love story of a lonely heart finding a strange partnership that leads to murder, furnishes Joan Crawford with the most gripping role of her career in "A Woman's Face" now showing at the Belle theatre. Miss Crawford runs the gamut from ugliness to beauty, appearing first as a woman horribly scarred and shunned by society, and later, through plastic surgery, as a glamorous but dangerous criminal until her love for a child brings regeneration.

Melvyn Douglas shares stellar honors as the plastic surgeon who restores the multilated girl to beauty and effects her regeneration, the dramatic role coming in sharp contrast to his recent comedy part in "This Thing Called Love." Also brilliantly cast is Conradt Veidt as the criminal madman whose sinister power over the girl drives her to murder in order to save the child she has come to love. Excellent support is given the principals by Osa Massen, playing the surgeon's philandering wife, Reginald Owen, Albert Basserman, Marjorie Main, Donald Meek, Connie Gilchrist, Richard Nichols, Charles Quigley and Gwill Andre.

Much of the credit for the brilliance of "A Woman's Face" must go to its director, George Cukor, who gave it the discerning touches and fine treatment that made his recent "Philadelphia Story" one of the year's outstanding hits.

"Thieves Fall Out," Funny

The faces of the audience leaving the Belle theatre last night were wreathed in smiles. The reason?.. "Thieves Fall Out," one of the sprightliest comedy films of the year. Eddie Albert and Joan Leslie, the romantic twosome who were seen to such good advantage in "The Great Mr. Nobody" and "The Wagons Roll at Night," are again co-starred—this time as a young married couple caught in a maelstrom of both humor and poignant drama.

The entire program will be repeated again tonight and Friday, matinee daily.

Sunday Midnight Show

The local screen is due to take a definite upswing towards the top in comedy and musical entertainment, with the advent Sunday Midnight at the Belle theatre of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye", Paramount's musical film version of the gay, gag-packed comedy which had Broadway audiences slightly slap-happy from laughing for several seasons.

Prometheus Bound

Something more significant than the "V" campaign is happening in Europe. As if in response to a prearranged signal, all at once the imprisoned nations of that prostrate continent begin to stir. Those who have seen "Prometheus Bound" in its original setting of dark crags and twilit skies will remember the breathless moment when the giant first heaves and stretches under the rocks and chains that hold him to the ground. A tremor seems to run through the waiting earth. Today that same tremor stirs occupied Europe. Signs of life and gestures of defiance appear in so many places simultaneously that they have the effect of a concerted movement.

It is a crescendo movement; no one can fail to see how the wave of revolt has spread and intensifed during the past few weeks. Acts of sabotage and open demonstrations of resistance to the occupying authorities are multiplying to an extraordinary extent in every country. In a single day we hear of main telephone wires cut in France, trains derailed in Czecho-Slovakia, mass disobedience in Holland and Belgium executions for sniping in Serbia and Greece. The German-controlled press in captive lands complains more loudly of the "non-cooperation" of the people. Even in the Reich itself, according to the Gestapo paper, Das Schwarze Korps "stupid Germans" must be energetically dealt with for daring to ask "why Hitler suddenly discovered that Stalin and Molotoff were criminals after a two-year friendship pact."

This ground swell of unrest gathers force as the German armies appear to flounder in the morass of Russia. In part, perhaps, it can be explained by the renewed activity of the underground Communists, released by the Nazi attack on the Soviet Union to carry on a campaign of opposition against Germany instead of the democracies; there are many portents of the revival of the Popular Front in Europe. Mostly, however, the stirrings of resistance correspond to the rise of hope among the vanquished. Hitler's successes in the Balkans and in Crete produced a mood of apatetic resignation and despair Now htat the campaign in Russia enters its sixth week as far from a decision as ever, Europe begins to breathe and take courage.

From the military communiques we gain only a clouded view of the actual fighting. But the Germans admit that the Blitzkrieg methods that won quick victories on other battlefields have failed in Russia. New tactics have to be improvised to deal with the "well-trained, well-prepared, well-equipped and tougher" Soviet armies. In these qualities it is evident, the "surprise" is on the Germans. Whether or not they can recover their offensive power against an enemy constantly confronting them with "fresh troops", they are meeting difficulties and obstacles which compel them to reorganize and draw heavily upon their reserves of man power, air power and oil. Revolt behind the lines reflects these difficulties; it rises and falls with Hitler's failure and success. The stirring of the bound Prometheus is the stirring of hope.—N.Y. Times.

Mary Martin and Don Ameche, in the laughter, music and beauty show of the year, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," featuring "Rochester," coming to the Belle Sunday midnight, for one performance only.

THE DUKE OF KENT IN CANADA

H. R. H. the Duke of Kent is in Canada on an imperial air mission which will take him across the Dominion into the various camps where airmen are being fitted in the greatest air scheme that has ever been developed. His stay in Canada will be filled with duties in connection with the branch of the service in which he has taken so deep an interest. As Air Commodore and member of the staff of the Inspector-General his task is no light one.

True to the service in which he is taking part, he travelled by plane from the Motherland to Canada and will travel across this country by air.

The British Royal Family has set a noble example to the Empire in the service its members are rendering to the Empire cause. Two years ago, just before the war's outbreak, Their Majesties the King and Queen made a royal tour to Canada and left lasting impressions.. Since the war began they have given self-sacrificingly of their time and have gone into places of danger to encourage the people who have gone through the trials of air raids. The devotion which the King and Queen have shown has been an example of courage and fortitude to all. Like every Britisher the Duke of Kent is serving to the utmost.

His Royal Highness will be in Canada on his mission probably five or six weeks.

GASOLINE SAVING

Oil Controller G. R. Cottrelle is pleased that the motoring public has shown co-operation in the campaign to save gasoline in Canada.

It is a good thing to know that Canadians are in large numbers responding to the appeal to reduce the consumption of oil which is so vital in modern war.

Those who have observed the streets at night believe that there is far less driving than usual. Motorists are evidently trying to help the war effort by imposing restrictions upon themselves.

Really no motorist can go too far in accepting the appeal. The more he sacrifices the better it is for the oil situation.

This is a situation calling for universal attention and with that attention and the realization of the need, there will be a heavy saving.

As has been pointed out before it is in the final analysis a matter of the individual's realization that there rests upon him or her the moral obligation not to waste but rather to use less gasoline for these reasons—the saving of gasoline itself, the easing of the demand on transportation when so heavy is the demand for tankers and tank cars and the actual saving of money which benefits the motorist and his family and makes possible support of some of the many forms of patriotic effort to win the war.

One of the best signs of the success of the appeal is that slower driving has been noticed, for slow driving means less consumption of motor fuel. Here is the evidence of a desire to help in oil control.

The country's plea for reduction of consumption will not go unheeded.

MUSSOLINI UNSUNG

Day passes day and not a word appears in the papers about the once "redoubtable" Mussolini and his Fascist cohorts. The British spirit in North Africa was too heavy a trial for the Italians and the exercise the Italians received in Greece and Albania but wore them out. Mussolini who gloated over the result of the Yugoslav campaign had only nominal recognition from Hitler.

But latterly in the great conflict of millions of men battling on the Russo-German front, there is no place for a proud and boastful man looking for individual honors and glories. In that epic battle Mussolini is going to reap no glory. He is not big enough to attract attention in this gigantic struggle.

Easier were it to hurl the rooted mountain from its base than force the yoke of slavery upon men determined to be free.—Southey.

HISTORICAL HYSTERICS
William Tell

When a woman gets a new bonnet you're supposed to stare at it. . . . That's what she pays for. But anytime a guy expects people to fall over themselves for a peep at his fedora . . . something's not right. And it sure wasn't, about six hundred and fifty years ago when little Switzerland was under the heel of Austria.

Now this heel's name was Gessler and he kept raising the taxes till by comparison, the Alps looked like the countryside had a few small goose pimples. He had a heart, the consistency of which would make a block of granite feel like a custard pudding. No self respecting black cat would be seen walking in front of him. But he was still the big cheese no matter how you slice it.

Well, on this particular occasion Gessler has just bought himself a new hat, and being very conceited, in addition to the above mentioned imperfections . . . so conceited, in fact, that he was top heavy . . . he sticks it on a flag-pole in the market place and makes everybody bow to it. This is to show them two things . . . his hat and who's boss.

Well all the people take it lieing down except a Swiss Mister, one William Tell. Tell is a straight-shooting guy who used to be captain of his school tug-of-war team and from jerking his way through college has developed the surest bow-arm of any archer around.

He is on his way to the grocery and as it is a nice day, has taken Junior along for the walk, when he sees Gessler's top-piece waving in the Swiss breeze.

"You don't know your flag-pole etiquette," he says to Gessler, "that hat of yours should be at half mast."

Gessler repartees, "Oh yeah? . . . And why at half mast?"

"Because you're dead from the neck up," snaps Will, "if you expect to get away with this."

Gessler's mood becomes very ugly and he thinks of an idea to match. "My friend," he says, "you're gonna give us a little shooting exhibition, and the target is gonna sit right on Junior's dome. Knock it off, or get knocked off."

"But I'm liable to hit the boy," says Will.

"See what I mean?" smirks Gessler so sure that William will get nervous and miss, that he is already looking up the past tense of Tell.

They try to find a suitable target but the search is fruitless till someone suggests an apple.

Tell hesitates no longer. "Okay!" he cries as one man, "I'll take a shot at it . . . that is, if it's all right with Junior.

And so, on this encouraging note Will takes his place and gets a bead on the MacIntosh. But it turns out to be a bead of Junior's perspiration so he tries another.

"Are you sure you can do it, Pop?" yells Junior.

"Son," replies Will, "I'll stake your life on it!"

"Well, just don't aim too low. You know how I can't stand those shooting headaches."

Whzzzzzzz . . . the arrow flew straighter than ten, jack, queen, king, ace. And that's what started the idea of the apple on the stick of which so many were sold that the Swiss were soon able to pay off their back taxes and get their independence.

—Les Carson, in Judge.

New York, July 31 (CP)—The New York Times, discussing the visit to Moscow of Harry Hopkins, says in an editorial today "we should be blind to our own interests and our enormous stake in the world struggle if we did not recognize the decisive importance of the tenacious stand of the Red army in sapping the force and upsetting the schedule of the Nazi war machine."

Little Malta Can "Take It"

By PAUL NORTON

"Not only will we not give up Malta, but we have no intention of allowing it to be taken from us, whether by the Germans or the Italians. I know that Malta will rise to the occasion whatever is required of it." So said Lieut-General Sir William Dobbie, Governor of Malta, in a recent broadcast message to the people. And the events of the year, that have passed since Malta became a front line post with the entry of Italy into the war, justify General Dobbie's confidence in the people and garrison of Malta.

They have stood up to air raids, more numerous than have been made on any other place. Even London has not had so many raids as this little island, only seventy miles from the enemy's aerodromes in Sicily. There have been over 500 raids or varying intensity—and the morale of all the island is as high as it has ever been.

Malta can not only "take it," but also give it. She has given it to the German dive bombers in such measure that they no longer come over, not in daylight, at any rate. The enemy has been unable to deprive the island of its three aerodromes, as they did in Crete. Malta bristles with A.A. guns, and the air over it is so unhealthy that raiders have gone higher and higher. Recently they have come only by night, sometimes singly, at half-hour intervals, on "nuisance raids," cruising around at a height beyond reach of the searchlights, dropping their bombs anywhere, sometimes in considerable force, and also dropping huge numbers of flares in an effort to find their targets.

Malta is a small island—about the size of the Isle of Wight, not so big as greater London. The result is that a raid covers the whole island; bombers can travel from one end to the other in a few minutes and there is no possibility of evacuation, as it has been carried out in Britain. On the other hand, two facts have kept the casualties remarkably low, considering the number and weight of the attacks.

Soil is a rarity on the island. It is very shallow and for cultivation has to be carefully conserved by terracing. Underneath is rock, and in this rock tunnels and galleries have been driven, providing some of the few really bomb-proof shelters in the world. Thirty feet or more of solid rock provide complete protection against any bomb yet made or likely to be made. Some of these galleries were driven centuries ago and used as storerooms and dormitories for slaves. Others havve been specially cut as air-raid shelters. The rock is comparatively soft and excavation can, therefore, be carried out quite quickly. The many natural rock faces make excellent starting places for the tunnels; there is no need to dig a long, sloping tunnel to the shelter chamber. In all the hundreds of raids, casualties have occurred in a shelter only once, and this shelter was not a deep one.

The other fact which reduces casualties and damage is that most of the buildings are of large pieces of stone and not of brick. They do not crumble up like brick, and the effect of blast is to some extent localized. Bomb craters are unknown on Malta; a senior officer, who has been there through all the raids, told me he had only seen one, and this was in artificially deepened soil. The bombs explode on the surface, instead of burying themselves, and, while this means the blast spreads laterally, it reduces fundamental damage to structures. The stone houses also make the danger from fire very small. There is nothing in the houses that will burn except the furniture; and in all the raids neither incendiary nor high explosive bombs have started any real fires in the residential property.

• • •

Men, women and children now take raids in their stride and are back to work within minutes of the all-clear sounding. It would not have been surprising if, as the result of the abnormal conditions, there had been a sharp rise in sickness and epidemics. But Malta's experience has been that of London—there have been no epidemics. Adventure and even the stimulation of fear may raise our resistance, we are told. In the case of Malta, the freedom from epidemics, in spite of crowding in air raid shelters, has been due to the first-class medical services and to an exceptionally mild summer.

Punishment handed out to German bombers—in some dive-bombing raids twenty per cent. of the raiders were shot down—is not likely to encourage them.

What about invasion by sea? The Navy no longer uses Malta as a major base, but it may be assumed that the land defences are formidable. They are assisted by the natural characteristics of the island—steep cliffs on the south, not readily scaled from the sea, and a very limited number of suitable landing spots on the other coasts.

• • •

Comparison with Crete is hardly possible. There are differences in size and physical characteristics; but Britain had been in Crete only seven months, whereas she has occupied Malta for more than a hundred years. Malta is densely populated and the Maltese are proving themselves excellent in war service. Malta had a Home Guard before Britain, and Maltese are efficient with anti-aircraft guns and searchlights.

Malta has withstood tremendous air attacks and knows that it can "take it." It may possibly have to face even more powerful attacks. The population will be sustained by their hatred of the Italians, by the knowledge that they have their backs to the sea and that very soon the initiative will pass into British hands, so that Malta becomes not an outpost of defence, but a spearhead of attack, from which Italy can be given a dose of their own—or rather of the Nazis' medicine.

Few People Fit Description of 'Normal' Man

The body of a normal man is normal in size and shape and is well proportioned. The arms and legs are equal in length, the posture is erect, the gait is unrestricted and the stride is normal. Few people fit this description exactly. For that reason any one who has any visible defect in this category ought to see what can be done about improvement. It is amazing how much help can be given to people with such defects. Among the recruits now being examined by the Selective Service Boards, almost ten per cent are found with defects in the shape and construction of the body, and another four per cent. have ruptures.

If the shoulders droop, if the spine is curved, if one leg is shorter than the other, if the shoulder blades are unduly prominent, if you have bunions or hammer toes, a specialist in diseases of the bones will be able to bring about improvement without great difficulty in the vast majority of cases. If you limp or sway when you walk, you are not fit for much industrial work or for Army work. That sort of condition demands prompt attention.

If you suffer from repeated aches and pains in the joints, the muscles or the nerves, your condition may be due to any one of a number of causes which come under the heading of rheumatism, arthritis or neuritis. Some of these conditions can be brought under control by the use of proper drugs; some are benefited by the removal of foci of infection; some merely demand the administration of a lot of special vitamins. No one can tell, however, just what treatment is to be followed without first having made a careful examination to determine what is wrong.

A hernia is a rupture, and a rupture is a weak place in the wall of the body which represents a constant hazard to health and life. The most frequent places for ruptures in men are in the lower part of the abdomen and in the groin. Sometimes they occur in the midline of the abdomen around the navel. Sometimes ruptures are found in the scars of wounds. If there is a bulge following coughing, the condition is probably a rupture.

In any event, this type of disability can be operated on with great success and with very little danger. In some instances the condition may be improved by using the injection method, which may not require hospitalization. However, a man should no more attempt to work throughout his life with a rupture or weak spot in his abdominal wall than he would wish to cross a large ravine clinging to a rope which had four or five of the strands missing at a certain point. The hazard is equally great.

LEAD FOR BULLETS

There was a little man, and he had a little gun,
And his bullets were made of lead, lead lead.

Lead has been designated one of the national defence metals over which the priorities division at Washington will exercise a mild form of inventory control.

Normally the United States produces and uses about one-fourth of the lead produced in the world.

The use of this valuable, heavy and malleable metal is not limited to bullets, missiles and other military projectiles.

It is widely used in paints and varnishes, storage battery plates, plumbing, pewter, solder, babbit metal and type metal.

The chief source of the metal is an ore known as galena. Galena in Illinois was so named because of the abundance of lead ore in that region.

The ancient Romans made water-pipes of lead, which they called "plumbum," and plumbers were originally workers in lead or plumbum.

A plumb-line was at first merely a line weighted at one end with lead or plumbum to determine vertical distances or the depth of water.

Even the English word "lead" is related in origin to an old Teutonic word meaning a small weight and alluding to the use of lead on a sounding or "lead" line.

Solder is an alloy of lead and tin.

Pewter as first made consisted of a gray alloy of four parts of tin and one part of lead by weight. In many wars of the past people have turned in their pewter ware to supply lead for much-needed bullets.

The ancient alchemists believed that somewhere in nature there existed a substance—the philosopher's stone—which would transmute the base metal lead into the noble metal gold. They called lead Saturn.

Lead is the emblem of both physical and mental heaviness. We say of one who is tired that he has lead in his feet, and of one who is depressed that he feels leaden.

In Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice" Bassanio wins Portia by passing up the gold and silver caskets and choosing the leaden one.

A diseased condition caused by the absorption of lead into the system is known as plumbism, saturnism or lead poisoning.

Privy Council Reverses Supreme Court Judgment on Windsor Tax Distribution

London, July 31 (CP Cable)—The Privy Council today set aside a judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada involving the distribution of taxes, as between public and separate schools in Windsor, Ont., of the Ford Motor Company of Canada.

The effect of the Privy Council's decision is that corporations in Ontario, desiring to have a portion of their assessments for school taxes directed to Catholic separte schools, must prove the proportion of their Catholic shareholders.

The case has been before the courts since November, 1937.

It dates back to July, 1937, when the Ford Motor Company sought to have 18 per cent of its land, business and other assessments in Windsor rated and assissed for separate school purposes.

Successive courts found against the Windsor Board of Education, holding that it was impossible to determine the exact proportion of Catholics among the shareholders of the company and the 18 per cent was only a guess or an estimate.

The Board of Education appealed the case to successive courts, losing before the Supreme Court of Canada but winning before the Privy Council.

Originally, the Windsor Court of Revision upheld the arguments of the Windsor Board of Education and voided the company's distribution of assessments and taxes.

The case then went to the Essex County Court Judge, on an appeal by the Ford company and the Board of Trustees of the Roman Catholic schools for Windsor. The judge upheld the decision of the Court of Revision.

On a stated case, the Ontario Court of Appeals reversed the decision of the County Court Judge, leading to the appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada by the Board of Education. That appeal was dismissed.

The case before the higher courts resolved itself into three stated questions, all of which the Privy Council answered in the affirmative.

MUST CONSERVE SAYS MR. DEWAN

Says Suggestion Made to Divert Milk Used in Ice Cream to Factories Making Cheese for Britain

Ottawa, July 31 —(CP)— Hon. P.M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, said last night it has been "suggested" that milk now used for manufacture of ice cream and other non-essential products be diverted to factories manufacturing cheese for Britain.

Mr. Dewan, speaking at a Red Cross lawn social in suburban Nepan township, did not elaborate on his statement, but he emphasized what "we must conserve as well as produce."

Canadian farmers are just beginning to realize the importance of their industry as a factor in winning the war, Mr. Dewan said. The prime consideration must be the production of foodstuffs for the British people.

He said farmers have enjoyed increased returns for their products since the outbreak of war but these have been offset by higher prices for necessities of life which are "stepping up faster than farm products."

"If we lose this war, nothing matters," he said. "We must make the best of it, and if labor costs are high we must work harder ourselves and must make greater sacrifice, and keep production up to the maximum."

460 Skilled U.S. Construction Men Reach N. Ireland

Belfast, July 31—(CP)—Four hundred and sixty skilled United States construction men, ready to do double duty all summer to earn their $60 to $120 a week, arrived at a Northern Ireland port yesterday to work on certain harbor facilities.

Their arrival brings to 800 the number of United States workers and technicians assigned to the Ulster projects. The men, expected to leave at the end of this year, have been brought over in connection with American lend-lease aid to Britain.

They brought their own food and clothing and will have their own police and medical services.

David Margesson, British War Secretary, greeted the new arrivals, saying, "We are mighty glad to see you fellows here."

The group, led by E. R. Holland of Williamsburg, Va., and E. A. V. MacPherson of New York, said their Atlantic crossing was without incident.

All of them, as a condition of service, are of non-Axis descent.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma started to make faces thinking to herself, saying, Now what was that recipee Maud Hews told me about? I remember it was very useful but that's as far as I remember. O deer why didn't I write it out? That's the only way things make a lasting impression, she said.

That's right, the things that have made the most lasting impression on me are the ones I've written out in the form of a check, pop said. It wasn't by any chance a recipee to cook cabbage so the place smells like a rose garden when the master of the house opens the front door, was it? he said, and ma said, I recall using my memory sistem on it, and it started with the letter L. It wasn't lima beans, she said.

G, ma, was it a way to cook spinnitch to make it taste like a combination of lemminade and cake and still be so good for you that people still keep on coaxing you to take more? I said, and ma said, Does spinnitch start with an L for land sakes?

It might in some languages, I said and pop said, Liver and onions start with an L, not to speak of an O, so maybe it was a way to have liver and onions 3 times a day. No matter what dish you prepare, it's always served on a bed of liver and onions, he said.

Really, Willyum, I believe you would, ma said. Now I remember. It was a recipe for doing French fried potatoes in little golden balls, she said, and I said, Aw G, what's useful about that? and pop said, And since when do potatoes start with an L?

The L stands for Leave, ma said. You leave them in the hot fat only about half the usual time, she said.

The result being pop got in back of the sporting page and I kept on trying to find out where I put the new number of Kollossal Komics.

Nazi Plunge to Vyazma Like Act Of Desperation

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, July 31 (AP)—Moscow's jubilant claims that Hitler's legions are stalled all the way from the Baltic to the Black Sea may be premature; yet some German confirmation is not lacking.

During the last two weeks neither Hitler's own headquarters nor any other Nazi agency has announced any German advances of important strategic conseqeunce except in the centre, east of Smolensk. There a German armored division is reported to have reached the vicinity of Vyazma, within 130 miles of Moscow itself.

That would be a deadly menace to the whole Russian centre if it represented a broad-based German break-through. Vyazma itself is important only because it is a rail junction, far behind the Russian front, from which Nazi forces could fan out in three directions.

Even by Berlin reports, however, the unit near Vyazma was stalled for lack of fuel and ammunition. Desperate fighting by a relief column from the Smolensk zone was necessary to re-equip it. It is still a roving force, lacking infantry support or secure supply lines to the rear. Nor is there any word that the Nazis have succeeded as yet in thrusting supporting columns to the north or south of the Vyazma spearhead.

Fantastic Situation.

So far as the outline of the battle front in the vital area covering Moscow can be mapped, it represents a fantastic situation. Assertions from Hitler's headquarters that all is going according to plan put a severe strain on one's credulity. German tacticians, for all their admitted daring in military conceptions and execution, could hardly sanction the present indicated disposition of Nazi forces on the Moscow front.

Elsewhere Russian frontier defenses appear still relatively intact. Only in the thrust from Vitebsk to Smolensk, now projected another ninety miles eastward to Vyazma, has the Stalin Line been ruptured. And the indications are that the Germans have thus far failed to widen the base of the Smolensk salient enough to make it a critical penetration of Russian defenses or pave the way for a frontal attack in Moscow.

If Red Army forces still hold the Dnieper River line westward from Smolensk to Orsha, where the river bends south, and from there to Mogliev and beyond, it is obvious that the German advance toward Moscow via Smolensk and Vyazma is on a perilously narrow front.

Its supply line is via the Smolensk-Vitebsk railroad and Moscow claims Smolensk itself is still held by the Red Army. If that is true, German use of the Orsha-Smolensk section of the Minsk-Moscow railway line is impossible. It lies under Russian guns on the south bank of the Dnieper as well as being blocked at Smolensk.

Need Wider Salient.

It has not seemed possible that a German frontal attack on Moscow could be organized until the Smolensk salient is greatly expanded. Savage fighting in the Mogliev sector on the Dnieper south of Orsha indicates that the Nazis tried to break through the Dnieper defenses there. That would force the Russians to abandon the whole bend of the river, a main defensive bastion.

In the light of admitted stubborn Russian resistance on the Dnieper front, the eastward plunge of a Nazi panzer division to Vyazma looks more like a move of desperation than a carefully conceived strategic manoeuvre. It was based on the hope of creating confusion far behind Russian lines, both on the Dnieper and north of the river. That it has failed to do so is clearly indicated in accounts from Berlin of desperate fighting to relieve the advance column.

Nevertheless, Vyazma Junction could prove an important strategic asset if the Germans hold it. They could use it to turn northward and take the Red armies holding the Nevel sector, north of Vitebsk, in the rear.

An Easy Way To Improve Home Canning And Preserving

Thousands of Canadian women have found a vastly improved method of home canning or preserving fresh fruits in season — a method that definitely gives richer flavour and better keeping qualities. That method is, using Crown Brand or Lily White Corn Syrup to replace one-half the sugar formerly used. No other change in the regular procedure is necessary. Your own recipes can be used just as they are, simply bearing in mind that one cup of Crown Brand or Lily White Syrup takes the place of 1½ cups of sugar—up to one-half the total sugar content.

In jelly making a slightly different proportion is required—that is, use one cup of Crown Brand or Lily White Corn Syrup in place of one cup of sugar—up to one-half the sugar called for in your recipe.

The Canada Starch Home Service Dept. C.H., P.O. Box 129,-Montreal, have an excellent little booklet of recipes and information — "Home Canning and Preserving the Easy Way" which will be sent to you free on request. Write for a copy now. Our local fresh fruit season is on its way.

Early Treatment of Sores on Lip Or in Mouth Will Prevent Cancer.

A surgeon in an office adjoining my own asked me to look into the mouth of one of his patients. I was astonished to find a "hole" larger than an egg on one sode of his mouth and throat; the tissues had disappeared leaving no mark.

"It was too late for surgery so I had to use radium. If he had come to me earlier I could have avoided that large hollow. However his life is saved, but it was close".

A few years ago the last thing the physician would do would be to call a sore on the lip or in the mouth a cancer. He did not want to frighten the patient so told him to come back in a few weeks if the sore did ot heal. Today, the physician is suspicious of all slow healing sores on lip or in the mouth in patients of cancer age—about forty years and upward.

By treating a sore as if it were cancer, cancer is avoided because practically all cancers of the lip can be prevented.

That sores on the lip that usually heal in a few days can be irritated to the point that they may turn to cancer in those with a family history of cancer is the opinion of Dr. Maude Sly, Chicago, and other research workers. Dr. Sly has done research work on cancer for many years.

Dr. Geo. E. Pfahler, University of Pennsylvania, in Radiology, says cancer of the lip can be prevented in practically all cases by treating skilfully the sores, scratches, ulcers, that are forerunners of cancer. By making an effort to treat these outer or surface conditions, many early cancers will also be reached and cured.

Cancer of the mouth can be prevented by treating any leukoplakia (white, hard patches) as soon as it develops, destroying any small wart-like growths, treating any sore, ulcer or irritation or hard mass of tissue. Electro-desiccation—drying up of tissues by electricity—is valuable in these conditions which are so often followed by cancer.

The treatment of cancer of the lip and mouth must include treating the sore, ulcer, or irritation and also the adjoining glands from which cancer can spread to other parts of the body.

"Irradiation (Xrays and radium) is to be preferred to surgery in treatment of cancer of the lip and mouth".

The Stars Say

For Friday, August 1

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A PARTICULARLY lively and eventful day is read from an interesting array of planetary forces. While there may be much stirring about, excitement and achievement through all forms of literary work, publicity, correspondence, communications and transportation, yet such culminations may encounter stubborn opposition, impediment and resistance, probably from surprising or unforeseen sources. Definite change or about-face in plans, place and associations may be needful to attain the desired objectives, in which large corporations, secret societies, political or fraternal bodies contribute to success.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate an eventual and successful year if their talent lies in the direction of writings, advertising, promotions, or travel, communication or agencies. Professional lines are stimulated, but from unexpected sources there may be antagonism, best placated by compromise or tactfully yielding a point rather than by rancor or belligerency. Elders may prove obstinate.

A child born on this day should have much adaptability, originality, perhaps creative genius in a literary or professional way. It will have great stability.

Ears Can Be a Beauty Asset

Jane Wyman has pretty, well-shaped ears.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHAT ABOUT your ears, little one? Are they stylish or are they dowdy? A pair of pretty sound receivers, small and neatly shaped, is a beauty asset; let me tell you. And they are rare.

Frequently ears don't match in size and outline. That little joke on the part of Mama Nature is duplicated in hands and feet. Even noses don't always balance exactly and precisely.

Ears come in many variations. There are those with extended lobes, others with not a ghost of a lobe. There are long, lean, devilish ears and short, pudgy fat ones. The too hearty eater usually has ruddy ears; those of the anemic dolly are so white that they are nearly transparent.

The Perfect Ear

The perfect ear is gracefully and delicately outlined, of a faint shell-pink color. When make-up is applied, the powder pad should be used on ears; shine is no prettier there than on the nose and suggests a recent soapy scrubbing. A touch of rouge on the lobes is necessary if the synthetic blush appears upon the cheeks.

When bathing the ears be careful to dry the inner channel carefully. Removing wax with a hairpin is hazardous business, as there is danger of injury; use, instead, an orange wood tick that has been wound with absorbent cotton.

x x x

Coiffures are still sleeked back, but if ears are oversized the tops can be draped with soft curls or rolls. No sense in displaying defects, no matter what the styles may be.

If a little child has outstanding ears, they should be bound flat at night. A little cape of tapes can be made easily enough, worn during sleep.

Heavy earrings should not be worn unless they are carried by a fine wire arrangement that slips over the top of the ear. They drag down the lobes, and throw them out of beauty form.

Your Repressed Fears May Appear in Dreams

Nightmare May Arise from Guilt

What a wild, terrifying place our dream world can be! Pitiless thugs run after us, angry beasts show their teeth—ugh, we'd like to forget it when we wake!

Yet, forgetting it is precisely what we should not do.

Some psychologists say these nightmare images are symbols of our baser instincts struggling to express themselves. By frankly recognizing these feelings, you are better able to deal with them.

The bad man of your nightmare is probably your conscience threatening you for some supposed sin. Or he may represent the "sin" itself, clothed in all the horror with which you invest it.

Here are clues to other emotions which may seethe ignored in your subconscious. Dreaming of a sturdy tree implies a longing for sturdiness. An earthquake may be your feeling of insecurity.

Or do you dream of being lost or abandoned, of wearing rags, of flying, climbing?

Our 32-page booklet explains these and many other familiar dreams and dream symbols accordin to psychoanalysis. Tells how problems of love, sex and ambition appear in dreams. Discusses dreams that "come true."

Send 15c in coins for your copy of EFFECTIVE PHRASES FOR ALL OCCASIONS to The Ontario Intelligencer Home Service, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Shower Questions

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am giving a miscellaneous shower for a very dear friend of mine who is to be married September first.

1.—What is the proper time to give this shower?

2.—I would like to have the men folks come in later. Would it be proper to say so on the invitations?

3.—Also, on the invitations, would it be proper to tell the color of the kitchen? I ask this because it has been my experience that so many times the bride-elect has selected her kitchen color and her gifts are of a different color.

N. E.

1.—Showers are usually given between three weeks and two weeks before the wedding. But a month before is all right, if you prefer.

2.—When men are to be invited to a shower, you should name a time about an hour and a half after the hour you name for the women guests. If it is to be an evening shower, as it probably will be if you are inviting men, ask the women for, say eight o'clock and the men for nine-thirty. This gives time for the opening of the gifts.

3.—I agree completely with your wise plan about stating the kitchen color. If possible, make the color more definite by telling the shade.

Widower's Marriage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—The bride-to-be has not been married before. The bridegroom-to-be is a widower. How does the fact that the bridegroom is a widower change the procedure of the wedding?

2.—How soon before the wedding date should the engagement be announced?

3.—It is to be a very quiet and simple wedding. Is it proper to send announcements?

4.—Should the announcement of the engagement and of the wedding be sent to the home town papers of both the bride and the groom?

Mary

1.—When the bride-elect has not been married before, the details of the wedding are the same whether she marries a man who has not been married before or a widower. The only difference is a very minor one—the widower does not give a "bachelor dinner".

2.—There is no rule about when the engagement is announced. It depends entirely on the wishes and convenience of the prospective bride and groom.

3.—Yes, it is proper to send wedding announcements. When the wedding is a small one, it is a very convenient way to send the news to the list of friends who have not been invited to the wedding.

4.—Yes.

Addressing Doctor and Wife

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

When sending out formal invitations to a doctor or a dentist and his wife, how should they be addressed . . . Mr. and Mrs., or Dr. and Mrs.?

C. T.

In both cases the invitation should be addressed to Doctor and Mrs. William Bryant. And, as I have indicated, it is preferable to spell the title in full.

Yes! The exclusive, mellow Kellogg's flavour tells you right away that you're eating the cereal an overwhelming majority of Canadian families vote their favourite : : : the cereal that taste experts chose in blindfold tests!

And don't forget! That gorgeous, mouth-watering flavour gives you the kind of appetite which helps digestion. Make sure you have Kellogg's Corn Flakes for tomorrow's breakfast. Order two or three packages right away! Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

Kellogg's carry family vote!

Through three succeeding years more than 5000 women have been asked, "What is your family's favourite cereal?" And each year Kellogg's Corn Flakes won by an enormous majority. Your family too will enjoy Kellogg's. And a serving for all of them costs only a few pennies. In two convenient sizes for the home. Or if you eat out, ask for the triple-wrapped individual package.

An Airman to His Mother

Among the personal belongings of a young R.A.F. pilot in a bomber squadron who was reported "missing, believed killed" was a letter to his mother to be sent to her if he were killed.

"This letter was perhaps the most amazing one I have ever read," said Group-Captain C. G. Keith, Officer Commanding the Picton Station, R.A.F., who was the O.C. of the bomber squadron at the time. "It was simple and direct in its wording, but splendid and uplifting in its outlook. It was inevitable that I should read it—in fact he must have intended this, for it was left open in order that I might be certain that no prohibited information was disclosed.

"I sent the letter to the bereaved mother, and asked her whether I might publish it anonymously, as I feel its contents may bring comfort to other mothers, and that every one in our country may feel proud to read of the sentiments which support 'an average airman' in the execution of his present arduous duties. I have received the mother's permission, and I hope this letter may be read by the greatest possible number of our countrymen at home and abroad."

Text of Letter

Dearest Mother,—Though I feel no premonition at all, events are moving rapidly, and I have instructed that this letter be forwarded to you should I fail to return from one of the raids which we shall shortly be called upon to undertake. You must hope on for a month, but at the end of that time you must accept the fact that I have handed my task over to the extremely capable hands of my comrades of the Royal Air Force, as so many splendid fellows have already done.

First, it will comfort you to know that my role in this war has been of the greatest importance. Our patrols far out over the North Sea have helped to keep the trade routes clear for our convoys and supply ships, and on one occasion our information was instrumental in saving the lives of the men in a crippled lighthouse relief ship. Though it will be difficult for you, you will disappoint me if you do not at least try to accept the facts dispassionately, for I shall have done my duty to the utmost of my ability. No man can do more and no one calling himself a man could do less.

I have always admired your amazing courage in the face of continual setbacks; in the way you have given me as good an education and background as anyone in the country; and always kept up appearances without ever losing faith in the future. My death would not mean that your struggle has been in vain. Far from it. It means that your sacrifice is as great as mine. Those who serve England must expect nothing from her; we debase ourselves if we regard our country as merely a place in which to eat and sleep.

History resounds with illustrious names who have given all, yet their sacrifice has resulted in the British Empire, where there is a measure of peace, justice and freedom for all, and where a higher standard of civilization has evolved, and is still evolving, than anywhere else. But this is not only concerning our own land. Today we are faced with the greatest organized challenge to Christianity and civilization that the world has ever seen, and I count myself lucky and honoured to be the right age and fully trained to throw my full weight into the scale. For this I have to thank you. Yet there is more work for you to do. The home front will still have to stand united for years after the war is won. For all that can be said against it, I still maintain that this war is a very good thing; every individual is having the chance to give and dare all for his principle like the martyrs of old. However long time may be, one thing can never be altered—I shall have lived and died an Englishman. Nothing else matters one jot nor can anything ever change it.

You must not grieve for me, for if you really believe in religion and all that it entails that would be hypocrisy. I have no fear of death; only a queer elation. . . . I would have it no other way. The universe is so vast and so ageless that the life of one man can only be justified by the measure of his sacrifice. We are sent to this world to acquire a personality and a character to take with us that can never be taken from us. Those who just eat and sleep, prosper and procreate, are no better than animals if all their lives they are at peace.

I firmly and absolutely believe that evil things are sent into the world to try us; they are sent deliberately by our Creator to test our mettle because He knows what is good for us. The Bible is full of cases where the easy way out has been discarded for moral principles.

I count myself fortunate in that I have seen the whole country and known men of every calling. But with the final test of war I consider my character fully developed. Thus at my early age my earthly mission is already fulfilled and I am prepared to die with just one regret, and one only—that I could not devote myself to making your declining years more happy by being with you; but you will live in peace and freedom and I shall have directly contributed to that, so here again my life will not have been in vain.

Your loving Son.

Umpires Call "No Contest" As Players and Fans Surge Upon Field in Bedlam

Corby-Reliance City League Softball Series Still Undecided After Arbiters Declare "No Game"

FISTS SWING

It was no contest—

Out of a blue sky bedlam broke loose in the fourth game of the City Softball championship between the Reliance and Corbys A.C. at Coleman Flats last night. With Corbys leading 13 to 8 and two out in the last half of the ninth, pitcher Johnnie Bawden strutted from the Corby mound registering indignation against the decisions of Umpire Pointer. Before a replacement could be announced players suddenly swarmed from both respective benches and scuffles resulted which enticed hundreds of fans to swarm the infield. After the dust had settled Umpires Pointer and Maracle convened in the mid-field and viewing the unsettled situation declared "No Contest."

Until the hectic ninth inning Johnnie Bawden had limited the Reliance to exactly three hits including La Bonne's fourth inning circuit blow and Smith's seventh homer, while the Corbys had shelled Ray Smith, the Reliance starting pitcher, from the mound in the initial frame when they scored six runs. Archie Major then took over the "planemakers" pitching duties, but the league-leading Corbys continued to make merry wielding potent bats to score seven runs in the next five frames.

Henn with two doubles and a single paced the Corbys on their prolific attack, while Bawden helped his own cause with a first inning two-base blow and two subsequent singles. Jimmie Barriage connected for four consecutive one base blows before the Reliance finally got him out in the seventh.

Smith and La Bonne counted four of the Reliance squad's eight hits, as Bawden was in complete control until the ninth when three hits, two errors, a walk and the pitcher's objection to called pitches saw Bawden voluntarily stalk from the hilltop.

As Connie Harris moved from the Corby bench to take up the job of relief pitching suddenly players swarmed the field, as feelings have been running high throughout the entire City Softball play-offs. What exactly incited the situation is still personal controversy, but after five minutes of bedlam, during which hundreds of fans swarmed the field and fists were swung freely, Umpires Pointer and Maracle declared "no contest" and the final decision of the continuance of the series now lies in the hands of the league executive.

Prior to last night's game the Corby A.C. had won two games to the Reliance club's one in a best-in-five series.

TOMMY HARMON ROMPS GRIDIRON ONCE AGAIN

Famed Michigan Halfback Leads Poll in Annual College All-Star Selection

Chicago, July 31—(AP)—Tommy Harmon and Forst Evashevski, Michigan's famed runner and blocker, will romp together once more—but there may be an entirely different story to tell this time.

The Wolverine twosome, scourge of midwestern gridirons for three years, will team up this time with other celebrated college seniors of 1940 to engage the powerful Chicago Bears Aug. 28 in the annual all-star game in Soldier Field.

More than 9,000,000 votes were cast by the nation's fans in selecting the all-star personnel and 1,421,586 of the ballots named Harmon at halfback. Second in the individual totals was Evashevski, the demon blocker, with 1,357,674.

The starting lineup against the pro champions, in addition to the Michigan pair, will consist of Dave Rankin, Purdue, and Ed Rucinski, Indiana, ends; Nick Drahos, Cornell and Ernest Pannell, Texas Aggies, tackles; Augie Lio, Georgetown and Tommy O'Doyle, Tulane, guards; Rudy Mucha, Washington, centre; George Franck, Minnesota, at halfback opposite Harmon and George Paskvan, Wisconsin, fullback. Evashevski is tabbed at quarter.

This star-studded array will be augmented by 59 other players, rounding out a squad of 70 eligible for action against the Bears, the 73-0 conquerors of Washington in the pro title game.

Bill Gallon Touted for Hambletonian

Charlotte, N.C., July 31.—(AP)—R. Horace Johnston, whose trotting horse, Bill Gallon, will be a favorite in the Hambletonian at Goshen, N.Y., next Wednesday, is considered a freshman by veterans of the big business.

Just three years ago to the day of the Hambletonian Johnston went to Hanover Farm Sales in Harrisburg, Pa., to buy a colt.

A millionaire manufacturer, he had been a horseman for 45 years but this was his first fling at trotting. He paid $1,800 for Bill Gallon, which sold under the name of Ashley Hanover and was by Sandy Flash out of Calumet Aristocrat.

There wasn't much spirited bidding for Bill Gallon, Johnston recalled today, and several of the others (their names were soon forgotten) sold for $6,000 or more.

"I just liked his looks", Johnston said. "Of course, I had years of experience with horses behind me but this was my first time with trotters.

"It was nothing in the world but luck—just luck".

A year later Johnston knew he had one in a thousand. As a two-year-old the even-tempered trotter was a champion and a leading money winner.

Cardinals Show Ability to Come From Behind as They Widen Gap in National Race

St. Louis Gains 3-Game Lead by Downing Brooklyn 6 to 4

FOURTH STRAIGHT

Feller Fails to Register 20th Win as Indians Bow to Washington

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The St. Louis Cardinals have the class that distinguishes a champion and barring a miracle—or a catastrophe—they are likely to proceed to the National League pennant.

They have plenty of pitching, fine fielding and marvelous power—eight hitters batting over .300 in the last official averages. But most of all they have the stamina and courage that is required to come from behind and win the close games—the battles that count.

This was the way they beat Brooklyn yesterday, 6-4, to take a three-game lead over the Dodgers in their torrid pennant tussle. The Dodgers scored a run in the first and then were held to one scratch hit for the next five frames while the Redbirds pulled into a 3-1 lead.

The Dodgers got a run back in the seventh through an error and in the eighth Pete Reiser hit a home run with one on to put Brooklyn in front 4-3.

This only caused the Cardinals to strive harder and they immediately ripped off three runs in their half of the eighth to sew up the game.

Pirates Win

Discounting Tuesday's tie, in which the cards counted six runs in one inning to overcome a 6-1 Brooklyn lead, this was the fourth straight victory for St. Louis over the Dodgers.

The Pittsburgh Pirates yielded third place to Cincinnati again by dropping a 3-2 10-inning verdict to the Boston Braves while the Reds were pelting the New York Giants 9-0. Bucky Walters acquired his 13 triumph in the latter affair, although giving 11 hits.

The game at Pittsburgh was a dazzler. Jim Tobin, former Pirate, allowed only one hit till the seventh and six altogether. He himself hit a double in the fifth to drive in Boston's only run in the first nine innings. In the 10th Buddy Hassett's fly was misjudged for a triple and two singles brought Boston two runs, enough to withstand a one-run Pirate counter-attack.

The Phillies and Chicago Cubs split a doubleheader. A six-run fifth inning gave the Phils the first session 8-4, Chicago captured the nightcap 5-3 and Tot Presnell pitching three-hit ball in six innings of relief.

Action in the American League was confined to two night games. Washington beat the Cleveland Indians 7-6 and Bob Feller failed for the third straight time to snare victory No. 20. He was not charged with the loss because he was removed for a pinchhitter during a two-run tribal rally in the ninth.

The Philadelphia Athletics squeezed out a 5-3 10-inning victory over the Chicago White Sox with Sam Chapman accounting for all the A's runs on two homers.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By the Associated Press)

Terry Moore, Cardinals—Singled two runs across in eighth inning to beat Dodgers.

Nick Etten, Phillies and Tot Pressnell, Cubs — Former made three hits to lead successful attack in first game while latter pitched three-hit ball in six innings of relief to win nightcap.

Sam Chapman, Athletics—Knocked in all his team's five runs with two homers, one of them breaking up game in 11th inning.

Jim Tobin, Braves—Held Pirates to six hits in 10 innings and knocked in Boston's only run in first nine frames with a double.

OBSCURE BOXER BELTS CHAMP WM. SOOSE HARD

Sailor Geo. Abrahams, of U.S. Naval Reserve, Punches Champion's Ears Down

BY AL COLLETI

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, July 31 —(CP) — Sailor Georgie Abrams, a boxing instructor in the United States naval reserve, has emerged from obscurity in the muddled middleweight ranks, but he'll need a lot of help from Lady Luck before he gets a crack at the much-disputed 160-pound crown.

Last night the husky Washington boxer, on a 20-day furlough from his naval chores, all but punched the ears off Billy Soose in a fast 10-round bout in which Billy's world middleweight championship—New York and California version—was not at stake. Only a slim crowd of 6,223 who contributed to a gross gate of $12,103 was on hand for the summer's first show at Madison Square Garden.

But almost all in the small gathering were rooting for Georgie because they knew he was fighting for a title shot, denied Abrams before because he had the misfortune to belong to the same eight stable as Ken Overlin. Soose won the crown from Overlin last May in a disputed decision and the Pennsylvanian had agreed to defend it against either Ken or Abrams.

Last night, after Abrams had belted the champion into defeat for the third successive time everyone figured he deserved the chance. Promoter Mike Jacobs announced, however, that Overlin gets the return match first.

The bout will be scheduled for the garden in November.

Meanwhile, Paul Moss, Soose's manager, said that Billy would go to the Pacific coast where he has been signed to meet Ceferino Garcia, ex-middleweight champion, now staging a comeback, in a ten-round non-title match in Hollywood Sept. 9.

In last night's tussle, Soose had a two-inch reach plus a 3 1-2-inch advantage in height over Abrams.

But once Georgie came into reach, smashing rights and lefts to the head made Billy break ground over and over again.

Abrams weighed 150 3-4 to Soose's 164 1-4.

WHITE HURLS FOUR-HITTER FOR BUFFALO

Bisons Make Sweep of Series Against Baltimore Orioles

SAFE IN SECOND

Toronto Maple Leafs Surprise All by Winning Doubleheader

Harold White, who occupied the limelight as the rookie pitching sensation of Buffalo last year, has found his place in the sun taken by Freddy Hutchinson and Virgil "Fire" Trucks, league strikeout artist, this season.

Despite this overshadowing, the 22-year-old right-hander buckled right down to work and his record of 11 victories against seven defeats today has had a lot to do with keeping the herd in second place.

He drew even with Trucks in the matter of games won last night, tossing a four-hit, 7-0, shutout against Baltimore Orioles to give Bisons a sweep of the three-game series.

The victory gave Buffalo a 2½-game margin over the third place Montreal Royals who bowed to the league leading Newark Bears 9-5.

Hank Borowy was Newark's pitching hero, limiting Royals to seven safeties in registering his 13th triumph.

Toronto Maple Leafs turned the tables on Syracuse Chiefs by taking both ends of a doubleheader, 3-0 and 10-3, to even the double loss to the Chiefs Tuesday.

Dick Fowler outpitched Lynn Nelson in the opener for a five-hit shutout, while Bob Garbark's single with the bases loaded in the third and Eddie Morgan's homer provided the winning tallies. Four Syracuse errors helped the Leafs to an early lead in the second tilt, as Porter Vaughan spaced eight hits to beat Mike Schultz. Leafs tagged Schultz for 13 safeties.

Wet grounds forced postponement of a doubleheader between Jersey City and Rochester.

GOSSIP NEWS COMMENT

For years the city softball playoffs have provided interest for the patrons of the game, but last night saw the zenith of all climaxes this reporter ever had the privilege of witnessing. The occasion happened at Coleman Flats (which is no secret today) when the Corby's A. C. were leading the Reliance by five runs and with one hand to retire. Exactly what started the whole affair we're not prepared to report, but from a layman's viewpoint it looked thus—Corby's were well in the front, despite a six run splurge on the part of the Reliance in the bottom half of the ninth. Suddenly Johnnie Bawden, who had hurled his best game of the current season, displayed his disgust of umpiring decisions by strutting from the Corby mound and wending his way to the club bench. Relief pitcher Connie Harris started to take up where Bawden had so successfully left off, when out of a blue sky opposing players swarmed towards the plate in uncalled arguments.

Then fists swung, players and hundreds of fans swarmed the field without provocation and before you could say "one up," the game was well out of control. As this corner understands it Bawden walked off the Corby mound simply because he was dissatisfied with the decisions handed down by Umpire Pointer. Why either the Reliance or the Corby squads took parts we still can't understand but according to rules Skipper Harold Bawden was entitled to inform the officials of any change in his line-up. of any change in his line-up. However, no announcement was made of any switch and before a twinkling of an eye players swarmed the field. That was the cue for the fans and the paying (?) populace didn't miss their beckoning. Fists swung, players and fans went into general bedlam and after the dust of battle had settled Umpires Pointer and Maracle declared "no contest."

Now the series still stands at two games for Corby's and one for Reliance in a best-in-five series. As President Clem Bowler was not on deck for last night's game no official decision was handed down regarding what is to be done in the series. Some of the Corby players feel it would be an injustice to replay the game as the Reliance team was the home club and made no effort to clear the field to continue the contest. However, this ocrner suggested neutral umpires for this particular sereis no later than last Saturday. To conserve finances the league heads chose to continue as was and now they've a real problem on their hands. Incidentally Skipper Gerald Barriage informs us they took in the magnificent sum of $13.44 last night from a crowd of well over 500.

Civic Holiday promises the greatest collection of sport celebrities ever seen in Belleville in the short matter of a few hours. In the later afternoon and evening the heralded Sunday Morning Class senior girls' softball team of Toronto display their wares at Coleman Flats while at night two of the most outstanding heavyweight wrestlers in the business, Lee Henning and the Masked Wolf tangle at the Hume Arena here with no less a personage than "Two-Ton Tony" Galento as the referee and third man in the ring. President Ted Schwab announced today that the Civic Holiday softball classics in aid of the Red Cross would be held at the Coleman Flats. "We feel the fans will see a much better game at the Flats, as the Armouries is too small to permit a team like the S. M. C. to branch out and display their wares," declared Prexy Schwab. Incidentally it is quite possible that Galento may be present at the evening game to tell the patrons about the night's wrestling show.

Early today it was "Goodbye Belleville" for "Spike" Pryke, popular third baseman with the Reliance Aircraft softball team this season, because "Spike" has not only accepted a position in Vancouver, B.C., but is to be married in his native Windsor on Saturday, following which the bridal couple will motor to their new home on the Pacific Coast. "Spike" will carry the good wishes of many friends he made during his stay in Belleville, where he played basketball and softball in the higher brackets.

Do you remember when Duncan McNaughton of Vancouver scored one of the greatest upsets in the history of the Olympic games by leaping 6 feet, 5 3-8 inches to win the running high jump event over the world's best jumpers at Los Angeles nine years ago today. His victory ended United States supremacy in the event.

"Cam" Ecclestone and Russ Johnson, Toronto and Hamilton softball pitchers respectively, have been recommended for the Lou E. Marsh Trophy, awarded annually to Canada's "most outstanding athlete." 'Tis also noted that a softball trophy has been struck in the memory of the late Robert (Moose) Ecclestone and will be awarded to the leading hitter in a Toronto league.

SPORT SPICE — Tabby Gow turned in a fine fielding effort for the Reliance last night as he raced miles to gather in fly balls with success. . . . The latest rumour sends Jimmy Dykes, of the Chicago White Sox, to Detroit to replace Del Baker. . . . 'Tis said the Tigers' fans want a more scrappy manager. . . They couldn't better Dykes in that department, but would they see him on the field sufficient to become acquainted with him? . . . That is after the umpires got through chasing him. . . . See where Michigan Tommy Harmon, famed back-fielder, lead the poll when the annual College "all-star" team was selected to play the Chicago Bears. . . . The St. Louis Cardinals, despite the fact they've sold nearly $400,000 worth of players of late, still have the ability to come from behind and win. . . . They rallied to beat the Dodgers and now lead the senior major loop by three full games. . . . And it doesn't look much like a "nickel world series" at this point. . . . Although Canadian-born Murray Patrick, of the New York Ranger Patricks, is slated to be inducted into the United States Army. . . . Don't look now, but that man's in again. . . . Yes, Sir, Dizzy Dean comes to bat to call a Cardinal-Yankee world series next October. . . . Cool and calm.

BUCKINGHAM WINS

Buckingham, Que., July 31—(CP)—The cellar-dwelling Buckingham team stretched its winning streak to three games last night by blasting out seven runs in the sixth inning to defeat the first-place Hull B and B team 8-5 in an Interprovincial baseball league game.

Previous to their winning streak Buckingham had won only one game.

Theo Chartrand, on the mound for the winners, held B and B to seven scattered hits but six errors by his teammates allowed the visitors five runs.

Escape From Yugoslavia In 20-Foot Boat Told

By ROBERT ST. JOHN

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, July 31—It isn't easy to come back to America from the death and destruction of Europe. Something inside your mind tightens in a knot and your head grows a little dizzy when you see white tablecloths again, and plenty of good food, and streets choked with automobiles, and people living pretty much as though nothing terrible were going on a few thousand miles away.

[illegible] Debris

I sit now at a typewriter in a New York skyscraper hotel, but I keep thinking of the hotels in Europe where I stayed that today are piles of rubble and ashes.

First there was the famous Srpsky Kralj in Belgrade. When I sailed into New York harbor a few days ago some of my baggage still had Srpsky Kralj labels on it. And every time I look at them I think of the assistant air attache in the German legation in Belgrade and what he said about the Srpsky Kralj.

He and the other German diplomats had been recalled to Berlin, because Berlin knew that in a few days big bombing planes with swastikas on their wings would be dropping bombs on a sleeping Balkan capital.

A few of us went down to the Belgrade railroad station to see the diplomats leave. As the locomotive whistled its last warning, the assistant air attache, who had resided in that same Srpsky Kralj with us for months, took me aside and whispered these mysterious words:

Promised Souvenirs

"We're coming back. We'll be back in a few days. And when we do come, we'll bring a few souvenirs for you boys at the Srpsky Kralj."

Souvenirs? What did he mean? I stood on the platform trying to puzzle it out as the train steamed away.

Two days it became all too clear.

Two days later, at dawn on Palm Sunday morning, a wave of Nazi bomber planes roared out of the sunrise and in a few minutes made a blazing inferno out of the Srpsky Kralj with their bombs and their incendiary plates.

They had come back, all right. And they had brought the souvenirs with them.

We—"the boys" he spoke about—got away with our lives, but not with our worldly goods.

Then there was the Hotel Europa in Sarajevo. It was a madhouse when we stumbled through its doors one day after the war had been going on for about a week. It teemed with men and women who were fleeing from the advancing invaders. Its lobby reminded me of the New York stock exchange floor on a two-million-share trading day.

Fortunes For Rides

These war-crazed people were offering fortunes for a place in an automobile to take them on farther toward the coast the next day. Or if they had cars they were offering fabulous sums for a little gasoline, because gas was far more precious than diamonds those days.

A lot of them, you see, had diamonds on their fingers or in their neckties or hidden in their pocketbooks but hardly anyone had any gasoline. They were trading diamonds for gasoline.

We stumbled through the doors of the Europa hoping, just like everyone else, to find a little rest in that rambling hotel in a cup of the mountains called Sarajevo before we had to struggle on to keep ahead of the invading army.

But first there were no rooms. Not for money or even for diamonds. So we sneaked past the guard at the foot of the stairs and toured the upper floors and found a room whose occupant had been careless enough to leave his key in the door. We decided he probably had slept the night before and didn't need the room. Didn't need sleep, nearly as much as we did.

But we didn't realize then that things like sleep and food just weren't going to be in the cards for us that month. We didn't realize then that the story was going to keep right up with us everywhere we went.

Easter Sunday

It was Easter Sunday. Church bells were tolling as if nothing were happening. A few townspeople were trying to behave normally. And then up in the sky came that ominous drone, like the noise bees make when they begin to swarm. We knew then that it was time to pick up our typewriters, strap our knapsacks on our backs again and get going.

The Europa was one of the targets that Easter Sunday. But how many of those people who had been trading diamonds for gasoline escaped to use their gasoline we didn't wait to find out.

Then there was that little hotel in Corfu. And the one in Petras, Greece, that was blasted to pieces the day we got there. And the Hotel Belvedere in Corinth, right on the gulf, where we tried to get an hour's sleep one afternoon, and had just started to take off our clothes when they came in great waves, dozens of the big bombers.

Same Everywhere

They were after the Corinth Canal and the bridge over which we had been hoping to get to Athens. Maybe the hotel wasn't on the list that day but when the bombs started dropping and the Belvedere began to shake like an aspen leaf in a gale, we packed up and let someone else record for posterity what happened to that hotel.

It was the same wherever we went in Europe. Ruins of buildings in which tourists and diplomats and newspapermen once gathered, as they are gathered today in this Manhattan hotel where I typewrite.

I went to a hospital in New York to ask a surgeon to dig around in my leg for pieces of bullets I picked up in Greece. It was a good hospital, efficient and clean.

But I kept thinking of the hospitals in Europe I had seen blasted into ruins by chunks of steel dropped from the sky.

There was the hospital in Sarajevo, and the hospital ship in Petras Bay, and the hospital train in Corinth the dive-bombers set on fire, and the little dressing station in Argos they called a hospital, until nothing was left but the walls and they had to move the cots that hadn't been destroyed down into somebody's deep cellar, where nurses tied bandages in the light of candles.

In New York the nurses wore crisp white uniforms. In places like Argos they worked in their pyjamas, or they wore men's trousers, but they worked until sometimes they fell over in a faint, because they wanted to save a few more lives before they admitted they were human, too, and that there's a limit to what the body can do, however strong the will is.

Tonight I will sit in a restaurant and a band will play nonsensical music and people will dance and waiters will come along with heaping dishes.

Buried Food

But my thought will be back where I came from. Back with those people in Europe I saw digging holes in the ground to bury a little food so the invaders would not get it.

Food was growing scarce in the Balkans before the German army ever came into that corner of Europe. Then, while half a million Nazi soldiers were camping in Rumania and Bulgaria, awaiting the signal for action, the drain on the local supplies became ever greater. The Yugoslav and Greek campaigns left most of the cupboards bare. Now the situation is infinitely worse, for the Balkans must feed the hundreds of thousands of soldiers trying to fight their way from Rumania and Hungary across Russia.

Everywhere we went in the Balkans we came upon people who hid all the provisions they had, just as soon as they heard the German army was approaching. Owners of food stores distributed canned goods and whatever else was on their shelves to relatives and friends, and then closed shop.... for good.

CHAPTER 2

New York, July 31—Here in New York harbor the water is full of big ships and some of them are famous warships, but the greatest ship in all the world to me will alway be the Makedonka.

Traded For Auto

The Makedonka was the 20-foot sardine boat that four of us newspaper men got in trade for an automobile in the little Yugoslav town of Budva. It was the boat that stood up long enough to get us to the Greek island of Corfu, thus enabling us eventually to reach Cairo and the communications we had been chasing for a month.

It was just a dirty, smelly fishing boat with a piece of canvas they called a sail and four cracked oars and a little outboard motor that worked all right if the sea was calm and there was no rain to dampen the ignition.

There was room in the bottom for our typewriters and a couple of knapsacks, and for a lot more supplies than we were able to get. The people in that ancient walled town of Budva were kind, because so many of them had been in America and liked Americans and wanted to help us, but they refused to sell us much food. In a day or two they knew the army of the invaders would come sweeping into the city, and they were hiding their food for themselves.

Chief of Supplies

I was chief of supplies because I was the oldest member of our four-man crew and the others suspected it might be a tough job. It was! I can assure you that when you try to ration out one orange among four men for three days you've got trouble on your hands.

The liquid supplies were more than adequate to begin with. For some reason the Yugoslavs were perfectly willing to sell us all the bottled goods we could pay for.

But the first night we had water trouble. We ran into a terrific storm. Rain beat down in torrents. The Makedonka was washed by ten-foot waves. She bounced around like a peanut shell. Some time during the first night, unbeknown to us, the cork popped out of the water demijohn.

The next time we got thirsty we found we had a weak solution of salt water. That meant that our only liquid for the rest of the trip was alcoholic.

If we had been on a pleasure trip, it might have been a happy accident, this salting of our drinking water, but when you're battling the elements of your life, and dodging mines and trying to evade the Italian navy, you don't want your brain befogged with alcohol. We needed clear minds more than we ever had before in our lives. So we had to go light on the liquids. It was another mean rationing job for me.

Food Not So Good

As for the food, our uncooked ham was so tough it was a physical impossibility for even those of us with a full set of sound teeth to make an impression on it, so we just sucked on a piece occasionally. And then got very thirsty, and then wanted a drink which we knew we didn't dare take.

Our anchovies also were so salty that we had to eat them sparingly.

Our five hardboiled eggs lasted one day.

Something had gone wrong with the goulash we got, because when we opened the cans the contents were green. So they had to be tossed overboard.

We saved two cans of pheasant paste for an emergency. Somehow pheasant paste.. there was about a spoonful in each can.. didn't seem a very manly thing to be eating.

Close to Mutiny

Several times, as we neared Corfu, the crew came close to mutiny. I had rationed the bread so it would last 10 days. We figured it might take us that long to get somewhere. But a loaf of bread a day for four men isn't much food, especially when you're doing hard manual labor, like rowing.

Navigation was our chief problem. We had no sea charts, but we did have a few automobile road maps that showed us the contour of the coast line. We tried to stay just within sight of Yugoslavia and later Albania, because we wanted to avoid mine fields and Italian ships that were hugging the shore. During the daytime the coast line was visible about eight or 10 miles.

The toughest job on the Makedonka was watching for mines. The Adriatic was full of them. Some of them had been put there by the Yugoslavs and some by the Greeks and some by the Italians. Yugoslavia's largest passenger ship had been sunk by a floating mine that had broken loose from its moorings. And we knew that if the little Makedonka ran into just one small mine there wouldn't be any of us left to tell the story of the bombing of Belgrade, the fall of Yugoslavia and the crazy flight of our newspaper men.

The mine spotting was difficult because the water of the Adriatic is phosphorescent. The waves have a strange light, almost as though they were charged with millions of electric rays. We kept seeing mines when there were no mines.

Italian Warships

One long night we saw the lights of an Italian warship ahead. We killed the engine (it was working for a change that night) and rowed for hours until we had circled way out to sea and had avoided possible seizure.

As we headed close to Durazzo, chief Albanian harbor, we saw that it was full of Italian warships, so we went out 15 miles to sea again. It seemed to take us all night to pass the lights of Durazzo.

The next morning we sighted on the horizon what we thought were two Italian submarines. You can't do much manoeuvring with a

WALL STREET

New York, July 31—(AP)—Rails and specialties responded to mild rallying efforts in today's stock market but many leaders were indifferent.

The generally bright earnings picture, brokers said, was complicated to a degree by mounting tax prospects and many who leaned toward the bullish side inclined to hold aloof pending congressional action on President Roosevelt's inflation control recomendations.

Stocks edging into new high ground for the year included Southern Railway, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, Paramount Pictures, Consolidated Aircraft, American Cable and Wheeling Steel.

Among the Canadian issues, Canadian Pacific gained 1-8 and Walker's 5-8. In the Bond market Canada 4s were unchanged.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 31 —(CP)— Gold shares weakened moderately on the news from Washington suggesting that some of the base metals might supercede gold in the preferred position in United States metal buying from Canada. The group weakened only .10 but the losses were widened after the news came out at noon. Base Metals also were a bit soft and Industrials higher.

Losses of 5 to 10 cents were showing for Aunor, Kerr Addison, East Malartic, San Antonio, Preston, Malartic Goldfields and Chesterville. Wright Hargreaves held strong and Central Patricia added 2.

International Nickel, Hudson Bay, Noranda and Consolidated Smelters improved slightly and other Base Metals were steady.

Canadian Pacific was taken in considerable volume at a gain of ¼ to 6½. Brantford Cordage Pfd. and United Steel improved slightly. Losses of 2 to 2.18 for Home Oil was the only change in the western oil group.

Produce Prices Generally Steady

Quiet trading on the butter market was enough to keep prevailing light arrivals of fresh supplies moving. No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids remained at 36 1-4 cents a pound. Prints to the retail trade held steady at 37 1-2 cents to 37 3-4 cents.

The combination of good demand and continued small receipts kept the egg market on a firm basis. Prices in both sections of trading, however, were unchanged from the previous day.

Montreal Produce

Stockers were slow with common to medium quality $5.50-$7.75. Hogs were 15 lower at $14.75 dressed-weight and sows were steady $10-$10.50 dressed. Lambs were $1 cwt. lower $12.50 for good ewes and wethers and $10.50-$11.50 for bucks. Sheep were steady $4-$6. No calves were offered.

16 Ships Intercepted Since Beginning of May

London, July 31 (CP)—Sixteen ships trading between Continental France and French Colonies have been intercepted since the beginning of May, Minister of Economic Warfare Hugh Dalton said today in a written reply to a parliamentary query but "the position is still not satisfactory."

Two of the ships were intercepted by the Allied Netherlands navy, Mr. Dalton said, the others by the British.

Mr. Dalton added that the government attached "greatest importance" to the checking of traffic to and from the French Mediterranean port of Marseille "since the bulk of the cargoes there are seized by the Germans and Italians."

COURT SENTENCE IS SUSPENDED

Edgar McCabe, of Deseronto, found stealing cigars is actually the costly way to enjoy a cool refreshing smoke in the long run. McCabe appeared in Police Court here today charged with stealing one box of cigars from a Deseronto hotel. He pleaded guilty and was given a six months' suspended sentence on the condition he pay the costs of the court, which amounted to $6.50. The case was entered before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd by Chief Constable Ernest Beatty of Deseronto, who told the court McCabe had smoked some of the cigars before he was apprehended.

Says Workers Seeking Increases Since May

Montreal, July 31.—(CP)— Alfred Charpentier, chairman of the National Federation of Catholic Workers, said today that workers at the plant of Aluminum Company of Canada at Arvida, Que., had been seeking wage increases since last May.

Speaking of the cause of the strike that sent 5,000 workers in the plant from their jobs last Thursday, Mr. Charpentier said: "The workers have been after wage increases since last May without result. The dissatisfaction started in certain departments, notably among the potroom workers, but there was no sabotage".

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The Germans today departed from generalities on the progress of the Russian campaign and asserted that Soviet resistance before Leningrad is crumbling.

Russian sources dismissed these claims as "pure propaganda" and the official Soviet communique spoke of continued fighting in the vicinity of Porkhov and Novozhev, 150 and 200 miles south of Leningrad respectively.

No mention was made by the Russians of the advance on Leningrad from the north, in which Finnish and German forces were last reported in the vicinity of Petrozadovsk, some 250 miles to the northeast.

German spokesmen pictured the fight for Leningrad as "fast approaching an important decision." In New York The Associated Press said it had been informed the drive on Leningrad had made such progress that the German High Command expects the fall of the city at any time.

Nazi Statements With Reserve

However, as the High Command as far back as July 13 described Leningrad as "in immediate danger," today's assertions must be received with reserve. So far the Nazi communiques have reflected more of what the Germans hoped to accomplish than what had already been achieved.

The loss of Leningrad, second city of Soviet Russia and an important manufacturing centre would be a severe blow, but would in no sense approach the proportions of a military disaster. The Germans probably would attempt to wheel around and start a new drive on Moscow, 400 miles to the southeast, to supplement the northward advance from the Smolensk area.

German occupation of Leningrad, however, would probably mean the elimination of the Soviet Baltic fleet as an important factor in the war. The pressure on land communications has forced the Germans to use sea transport to get reinforcements into the Baltic region as well as to Finland, and the Red army has been active in intercepting these convoys.

Importance of Kronstadt

The chief Russian naval base in the Baltic is at Kronstadt, a few miles off Leningrad in the Gulf of Finland. Kronstadt without doubt would become untenable should the Germans succeed in breakign into Leningrad. There are other Soviet naval bases in the Baltic, notably at Hanko, Finland, and Tallinn, Estonia, but it is improbable that these would be effective without Kronstadt.

In the event of loss of its Baltic bases, the Red navy well might follow the course adopted by the small Polish fleet in the early days of the war when it ran the German gauntlet at the Skagerrak and sailed into British waters to join the Royal navy.

Lloyd Hicks' New Class "D" Boat Performs Well at Kingston

Flashing through the water off MacDonald Park, Kingston, yesterday, Lloyd Hicks' new Class "D" 222 cubic inch motored "Miss Rugene" gave a distinctly creditable performance in her maiden race, when she finished second to W. Bills, Oshawa, "Bilcushman" in her class race at the Kingston Lion Club's regatta.

Mr. Hicks, who is regional vice-chairman of the American Power Boat Association, was delighted with the performance of his new boat. "She has plenty of speed," he smiled, "and by the time she is loosened up she will kick spray in the faces of a lot of drivers. A few adjustments need to be made, but they will be ready in time for the next regatta."

Meanwhile the famous Jackie "Pops" Cooper, veteran seventy-four-year-old 225 Class world's champion, ran into bad luck and was forced to finish third in his class. Al. Brinkman, in "Sea Biscuit," the former "Apache" flashed across the finish line a winner with Percy Bedell's "Miss Waterloo" getting the place position.

In the "B" Class for 225s, Ernest Inch's "Milderna" showed her heels to "Miss Waterloo" and "Bilcushman."

"Milderna" won the 135 class with Keith Gilmore, Picton, driving "Jitterbug" finishing second.

A feature of the regatta was the fine driving of "Baby Rugene," former Hicks boat, by thirteen-year-old Harvey McFarland of Picton, who won the 80 horse-power class. "Baby Rugene" was purchased by Harvey's father, well-known Prince Edward County contractor, a short time ago.

TAKE 2 — TRENTON ....

Trenton Bylaws to be Revised

The traffic bylaws of this town are to be revised by Councillor Ken Couch and Chief Constable Wm. Bain. Numerous complaints have been lodged with the Trenton police during the past few months regarding the congestion of traffic on the main street.

The Town Council agreed that Councillor Couch and Chief Bain would be the persons to review the bylaws and make the necessary recommendations for changes. Chief Bain has advocated that trucks should unload their merchandise to the stores from the rear of the stores and not park on Dundas and Front streets. This would relieve a great deal of congestion on these busy streets.

New lights are to be installed on Front Street according to a recommendation of the Town Council. The lights will cost approximately $70 per month for power.

BRITISH RAID

scattered points in the east and southwest and causing slight damage. No casualties were reported.

A violent thunderstorm which swept over Dover Straight this morning left the visibility poor and promised to hold daylight aerial operations to a minimum.

British sources said the recent lapse in raids on Germany had been caused by bad weather, either over Britain or the continent. They recalled that on only six nights had the R.A.F. failed to attack Germany or German-occupied territory since it launched its "non-stop" offensive June 11.

From the start of this offensive —which Prime Minister Churchill has promised would be intensified in the fall—the R.A.F. was busy for 14 consecutive nights before the weather caused a break.

Other breaks in the offensive occurred June 30 and July 17. Though last night's raid was the first on Germany since Friday, northern France was attacked Monday night.

Hopkins to Return By Some Route Other Than London

London, July 31 (CP) — Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's military air co-ordinator now in Moscow discussing United States help for Russia, will return to the United States by some route other than London, it was reliably reported today, indicating he might travel through the Far East.

Our booklet "Where there's No Will" briefly outlines the changes recently made in the law of the Province of Ontario as it affects persons dying without Wills.

- Changing financial conditions.
- Changing laws.
- Changing family, business and social relationships—

"On behalf of the President, I told Stalin our country considers Hitler an enemy and whoever fights Hitler anywhere is on the right side of this conflict."

U.S. Intends to Help Russia

"We intend to help them, particularly the Soviet Union, both immediately in terms of supplies which will arrive in the near future and also over a long term no matter how long.

"I expressed the President's great satisfaction with the fight the Soviets are putting up in their country and his admiration for that fight".

Shortly after Hopkins left the Kremlin German planes tried to raid Moscow but an official communique said they were beaten off and one raider was shot down.

At the conference were Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet Foreign Commissar, and United States Ambassador Laureance A. Steinhardt.

(A Russian military mission of two generals is in Washington presumably conducting similar negotiations at the United States end.)

The Soviet Official Press referred to Hopkins as President Roosevelt's "closest friend" and printed his broadcast from London Sunday in which he pledged immediate United States aid to Russia.

Red Army Fights Stubbornly

While negotiations occupied the Kremlin, the Red Army fought stubbornly in sectors which have seen heavy fighting for three weeks.

An official communique said the action was in the directions of Novorzhev (about 200 miles south of Leningrad), Nevel and Smolensk (about 230 miles west of Moscow) and Zhitomir (about 85 miles west of Kiev.)

The fighting was especially hard at Smolensk and Zhitomir, the communique said, but in other directions and sectors of the front no important engagements took place.

Crack Motorized Nazi Regiment Annihilated

Among individual successes reported in the customary lists of incidents in the information bureau communique the Russians claimed annihilation of a crack regiment of motorized German Storm troopers in the Smolensk area.

JAPAN OFFERS

At the last minute, however, he requested that the United States envoy meet him at the foreign office instead.

During their 20-minute conference there Grew was assured that the Japanese armed forces everywhere had been instructed to take the utmost care that American property not be damaged.

The American ambassador also protested on three separate occasions today to foreign office against telephone and cable censorship under which information on the Tutuila incident was kept from leaving the country until after Grew's meeting with Toyoda.

In yesterday's incident during the third Japanese air raid on the provisional Chinese capital in three days, a bomb which fell near the 370-ton Tutuila wrecked the gunboat's speedboat and badly damaged another of her small boats. None of the crew was injured.

Fresh Strain on Relations with Japan

Washington, July 31 (AP)— The bombing of the United States gunboat Tutuila in China put a fresh strain on relations with Japan today but the Japanese, while manifesting some apprehension apparently were ready to risk their merchantmen in American ports for the present.

(Japan tendered a profuse apology for the bombing of the United States gunboat which was moored opposite Chungking in what the Japanese themselves had told the United States was "a safety zone.")

Although the State Department still refused specific assurances on the ships, developments indicated that Japan had decided to permit at least some of her United States-bound vessels to make port.

More than 40 of them have been lying off the coasts for days, because of owners' fear that they might be immobilized in American waters under last week's order freezing all Japanese assets.

GERMANS CLAIM

Moscow was said again to have been raided. The rail junction of Orel, about 200 miles south of the Soviet capital and roughly the same distance behind the eastern front, also was bombed, the High Command added.

D.N.B. the German News and Propaganda Agency, said the British-Russian aerial assault on the Norwegian coast had been beaten off with the loss of only two Nazi planes.

The claim that a British Aircraft carrier— presumably guarded by other naval units—was operating in that area caused widespread interest, but D.N.B. failed to mention any naval action accompanying the air attack.

Germans Claim

(The German radio, heard in London, said Nazi naval guns had accounted for two of the 28 British planes reported destroyed, thus indicating that Nazi warships took part in the action. The radio credited anti-aircraft batteries with downing two planes and said the rest were destroyed by German fighters.)

D.N.B. did not identify the port attacked but indicated it was near the northern tip of Norway, which is separated from Russia by a narrow strip of Finnish territory.

Says Torpedo-Carrying Planes Used

The British Air Squadron, which included torpedo-carrying planes strongly escorted by fighters, attacked in waves, the agency said, and was joined by a formation of Soviet Aircraft, apparently from a Russian airdrome in the Arctic.

The accounts did not mention the destruction of any Russian planes.

Accounts of operations on the land front were highlighted by a D.N.B. claim declaring German troops had establised a bridgehead in the Leningrad drive after a two-day battle during which 2,000 Russians were slain.

In an effort to halt Finnish and German troops forming the northern column the Russians were reported spraying forests and fields with naphtha and then setting them afire with artillery barrages.

On one sector of the Smolensk front alone, D.N.B. claimed the Russians lost 230 tanks in two days of bitter fighting

WORK CONTINUES AS DUKE OF KENT VISITS UPLANDS

Lectures and Other Activities Go On As Duke Moves About

LUNCHES AT SCHOOL

Uplands Airport, Ont., July 31 (CP)—Operations went ahead as usual at No. 1 Service Flying Training School of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan here today as the Duke of Kent arrived to inspect the establishment.

Starting his tour of air establishments in Canada which will take him across the country and back His Royal Highness arrived at 11:15 a.m. from Government House in nearby Ottawa in an open car, wearing his air force summer service uniform and carrying sun glasses in his hand.

The King's brother was met at the gate by Air Vice Marshal L. S. Breadner, chief of the air staff and other senior officers.

An Air Force guard of honor drawn up inside the gate gave the Royal Salute by presenting arms while the Air Force band played six bars of the National Anthem.

As the Duke walked through the lines inspecting the guard the band played "The Thin Red Line." He was accompanied by Wing Commander Sir Louis Greig, his aide-de-camp.

Planes took off and landed, lectures continued and other activities were carried on as the Duke moved about.

After walking about the school, inspecting buildings and talking with officers the Duke had lunch at the officers' mess. Arrangements called for him to visit Rockcliffe Air Station, also near Ottawa during the afternoon.

Compliments Canada's War Effort

Last night in proposing a toast to Canada at a state dinner the Duke said the British people are fully conscious of the great value of Canada's contribution to our joint cause in having thought out and put into operation the air training plan.

The training of pilots and air-crews was laying the foundation of victory.

"I look forward to telling the King and Queen and the people of Britain how much more Canada is doing than can ever be published."

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, in proposing a toast to the Duke, told His Royal Highness that honor and admiration of the part the King and Queen are playing in the war is the "greatest welding force in the Empire today."

People United

"I hope," he said, "that when you return to Britain you will convey to them and to the brave, unconquerable people of the British Isles this message: that from one end of Canada to another, in every province and in every part of every province, you found a united people, determined to stand by the Motherland and by the Empire until victory is won."

Travels by R.C.A.F. Plane

A provisional itinerary for the western sections of the Duke's cross Canada tour was made public last night by the office of G. H. Lash, director of public information. Most of the tour will be made by R.C.A.F. plane. Two short rests of two and a half days each are provided, one at Banff, Alta., and the other at Jasper, Alta.

Mr. Lash emphasized that the Duke was not making a state visit to Canada and accordingly there would be no presentation of addresses or "any public functions of any character."

Calgary, July 31 (AP)—A resolution urging that American tourists be allowed to purchase gasoline on Sundays under a special permit was passed yesterday by the council of the Calgary Board of Trade and forwarded to the Canadian Travel Bureau.

FALLS 75 FEET TO DEATH

Montreal, July 31—(CP)—Hector Desnoyers, 33, of Montreal, was killed today when he fell from a building about 75 feet to the ground. Desnoyers was working as a painter during erection of a new building.

Women pilots of the air transport auxiliary have been so successful the authorities have decided to employ more of them. During the last six months they have delivered more than 1000 aircraft without a mishap.

John Brill a Londoner who died last April leaving 8,575 pounds ($38,969) left all his property to the Chancellor of the Exchequer for the benefit of the nation.

For two days and two nights 16 survivors from a ship shelled and sunk in the Atlantic by an Italian submarine were towed in their open boat by the submarine. The story was told by Robert Trinarco, 18, youngest of the crew, who said they were put ashore on the Azores and eventually reached Gibraltar whence they sailed for England.

Sir Adrian Boult, composer and conductor, presented to the city of Birmingham an ambulance given by the Bach Choir of Hamilton, Ont. The presentation was made through the Canadian Red Cross Society.

Looks as if the women are doing the men out of another job. The first of the W.A.A.F. girls trained as balloon operators are being posted to balloon barrage sites in place of men and if the experiment succeeds they will replace men on a considerable scale.

Florence and Emma Dowsett and Lillian Hills, three Ilford factory girls who did continuous night work during air raids last fall and winter to help their bombed factory get into production again, have been presented with gold medals bearing the inscription "for courage and devotion to duty during intense aerial warfare."

Ten thousand shell dressings for London's Home Guard have been prepared by the women's section of the British Legion.

The Civil Army of fire watchers who don their tin hats and climb roof tops during air raids to watch for incendiary bombs has been given the official title of "fire guard."

"Canadian lumberjacks in Great Britain" have contributed 200 pounds ($890) to the Ministry of Aircraft production towards the purchase of aircraft.

Claims Germans Wear Selves Out

Moscow, July 31 (AP) — Russian forces declared today that the Germans have been held to a standstill and are wearing themselves out in futile assaults on the Soviet's unyielding defences.

As these informants pictured the trend, the warfare has developed into a battle of attrition with Red Army masses using their weight to sap the strength of Hitler's forces.

German air assaults on Russia's two greatest cities also were called failures. Three Nazi attempts to raid Leningrad were said to have been beaten off by Russian anti-aircraft gun sand fighter planes and an air attack on Moscow was said to have been repulsed.

With the Germans claiming strides on the whole front, particularly toward Leningrad, Russian reports today included the Gulf of Finland port among Russian cities "leading a safe and normal life." They told of a successful theatrical first night and said theatres and movie houses were open as usual.

Talbot Protests Statement on Arvida Strike

Arvida, Que., July 31—(CP)—Antonio Talbot, Union Nationale Member of the Quebec Legislature for Chicoutimi, in a telegram to Munitions Minister Howe characterized as "false and unjust" the statements made by Mr. Howe concerning the five-day strike in the plant of the Aluminum Company of Canada which ended Tuesday.

"In all justice to our workers," Mr. Talbot wired, "I ask you, Mr. Minister, to look into the matter anew and to make as soon as possible the necessary rectification."

Mr. Talbot, in whose constituency the men live, sent the wire last night and added, "Our working class respect the law and its institutions; they are honest, loyal, hard-working and merit the esteem of everyone."

More than 5,000 employees of the Aluminum Plant, Canada's greatest war industry, were on strike from Thursday, July 24, to Tuesday night, and were joined by 4,000 men working on a plant addition.

Making the first public announcement of the trouble in Ottawa Wednesday night, Mr. Howe said the shutdown was "a suspected case of enemy sabotage" and that arrests "definitely will be made, if none have been made already." He said the shutdown had caused loss of three weeks' production amounting to thousands of tons of aluminum. The Minister said 300 men suddenly seized control of the plant with some kind of melee starting.

Alexis Daris, President of the National Catholic Syndicate of Aluminum Workers which was named by the workers Tuesday as their representative, today declined to comment on Mr. Howe's statements but said:

"Despite any statement which may have been made to the contrary I deny categorically that sabotage was in any way connected with the strike."

Knocked Down Trying to Stop Runaway Horse

While attempting to halt a runaway horse on Charles Street on Wednesday, Michael W. Kelly, 302 Bleecker Ave., was knocked down and sustained severe bruises and lacerations. The horse was drawing a Harris Bread Company wagon when the animal suddenly darted down Charles Street. Near the Victoria Avenue corner Mr. Kelly attempted to halt the frightened animal and grabbed hold of the bridle. The horse lurched so hard it jerked Mr. Kelly's shoes off and when he was dragged over the sidewalk his suit coat was badly torn. Bread and cakes were strewn along the street as the wagon struck a hydrant. Mr. Kelly was taken to his home where he was attended by Dr. Blakslee.

U.S. Senate Group Works to Modify Exchange Ruling

Washington, July 31—(AP)— A dozen senators were disclosed today to be working for modification of Canadian government restrictions which curtail spending by Canadians in the United States.

Senator Wallace White (Rep.-Me.), a leader of the movement, said Canada had forbidden its Nationals to spend any money in this country for other than business purposes. He said that even when a Canadian desires to come to the United States on business his government puts a limit on the amount of money he can spend.

A group of Senators from States bordering Canada met recently and empowered White to pick a committee to discuss the matter with the State Department and Canadian diplomatic authorities here.

"The situation is a real mess", White said in an interview. "The Canadian restrictions have caused a devil of a lot of trouble. There are many towns which are dependent upon Canadian trade. Their entire economy has been built on that trade.

"Of course, Canada has imposed the restrictions to support her own currency, but there is a question of whether she would not be better off to let a few million dollars come to this country. She certainly would be better off from the standpoint of friendly relations".

No Plan to Discontinue Export of Gold To United States

Ottawa, July 31 (CP)—W. A. Mackintosh, acting chairman of the Canadian section of the Joint Canada-United States Economic Defence Committees, in a statement today said the committee was not working on a plan to discontinue gold exports to the United States as stated in a Washington dispatch.

The committee is, however, considering the broad question of whether it will be possible to divert labor and material now used solely to produce United States dollars into the production of materials needed for war.

Mr. Mackintosh's statement follows:

"The joint economic committees are not working on a plan to discontinue gold exports to the U.S. and switch to strategic base metals. Still less is there any agreement.

"The committees are charged with developing recommendations for economic collaboration to the end that the combined defence efforts of the two countries may be increased to the maximum. They are also charged with developing recommendations for minimizing the post-war re-adjustments.

"Until recently U.S. dollars have been the scarcest of our war materials and it has been necessary to push our exports and our tourist industry to the utmost to get them. Now if the U.S. dollars can be made available otherwise, it may be possible to divert more labor and resources to materials needed for war.

"Before any recommendation affecting Canadian exports could be formulated, it would be necessary to know (1) that the labor and equipment of that industry could be used for war purposes; (2) that the U. S. dollars it produces could be obtained in some other way; and (3) that post-war readjustment problems would be minimized.

ROOSEVELT ACTS TO CHECK UNDUE PRICE INCREASES

Asks Congress for Authority to Establish Ceilings for Prices, Rents

FACE INFLATION

Washington, July 31 (AP)—President Roosevelt asserting inflationary price increases were threatening to "undermine our defence efforts," asked Congress today to authorize him to establish ceilings for prices and rents.

"We face inflation unless we act decisively and without delay," he said.

The President also requested in a special message authority to purchase materials and commodities when necessary to assure price stability and to "deal more extensively with excesses in the field of installment credit."

While refraining from seeking authority to put a limit on wages, he said he expected the voluntary co-operation of labor to prevent labor costs from rising abnormally.

"Labor," Mr. Roosevelt said, "has far more to gain from price stability than from abnormal wage increases. For these are likely to be illusory, and quickly overtaken by sharp rises in living costs which fall with particular hardship on the least fortunate of our workers and our old people."

The message went to a Congress sharply divided on the question of price fixing. Already a Senate farm bloc has served notice it would oppose limits on agricultural prices and only yesterday won senate approval of a bill preventing the marketing during the emergency of government - owned stocks on wheat and cotton.

The President said the facts today were "threateningly similar" to the closing months of 1915 which marked the beginning of an upward swing of the whole price structure in the United States.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics index of 28 basic commodities by the end of June, 1941, advanced 50 per cent from the August, 1939, level, he said, and increased 24 per cent since January, 1941.

"For 12 months," Mr. Roosevelt said, "we have tried to maintain a stable level of prices by enlisting the voluntary co-operation of business, and through informal persuasive control.

"The effort has been widely supported because far-sighted business leaders realize that their own true interests would be jeopardized by runaway inflation.

"But the existing authority over prices is indirect and circumscribed, and operates through prices which are not appropriate or applicable in all circumstances. It has further been weakened by those who purport to recognize need for price stabilization yet challenge the existence of any effective power.

"In some cases, moreover, there has been evasion and bootlegging; in other cases the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply has been openly defied.

"Faced now with the prospect of inflationary price advances, legislative action can no longer be postponed."

The President said he recognized that the obligation not to seek excessive profits from the defence emergency, "rests with equal force on labor and on industry and that both must assume their responsibility if we are to avoid inflation."

He also recognized, he added, that "we may expect the wholehearted and voluntary co-operation of labor only when it has been assured a reasonable and stable income in terms of the things money will buy, and equal restraint or sacrifice on the part of all others who participate in the defence program.

"This means not only a reasonable stabilization of prices and the cost of living, but the effective taxation of excess profits and purchasing power."

Bill Will Be Introduced Shortly

Another group in Congress has advocated control of wages on the ground that wage increases have put up manufacturing costs and forced higher prices.

A bill to carry out the President's request is expected to be introduced in both houses shortly. Leon Henderson, head of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, has been working on the legislation for weeks with bill-framing experts.

"Like other defence legislation," he added, "it should expire with the passing of the need, within a limited time after the end of the emergency."

The concept of a price ceiling, the President said, is "already familiar to us as a result of our own world war experience. Prices are not fixed or frozen; an upper limit alone is set. Prices may fluctuate below this limit, but they cannot go above it," he added.

"To make ceiling prices effective it will often be necessary, among other things, for the government to increase the available supply of a commodity by purchases in this country or abroad. In other cases it will be essential to stabilize the market by buying and selling as the exigencies of price may require."

Regarding rent control, the President said despite steps taken to assure adequate housing for defence the nation was already confronted with rent increases reminiscent of those prevailing in 1917-1918.

"This is a development that must be arrested," he said, "before rent profiteering can develop to increase the cost of living and to damage civilian morale."

Stimson Apologizes To Senator Wheeler

Washington, July 31 (AP)—Senator Burton Wheeler won a public apology from War Secretary Henry Stimson for harsh criticism and a personal explanation from Navy Secretary Frank Knox for the temporary denial of a naval commission to the senator's son.

Stimson's statement of apology, issued through the war department late yesterday, said the war secretary did not believe Wheeler intended to direct anti-war postcards specifically to United States soldiers. Stimson also expressed regret for his statement that cards sent under Wheeler's signature to army camps approached treason.

The war secretary declared, however, that not three, as Wheeler said, but several hundred of the circulars reached army men and that a departmental investigation showed "organized attempts, by other persons, to arouse disloyalty" among troops.

The other incident involved Wheeler's son, Richard, 23, who was at first refused a naval commission then awarded it.

Knox was said by a Wheeler aide to have called on Wheeler a short time ago to explain how it all happened.

Japanese Papers Accuse U. S. Of 'Meddling'

(By the Canadian Press)

Great Britain voiced a sharp warning to leaders of Japan's expansion policy today "to reflect while there is still time," and simultaneously the Japanese Press became increasingly hostile over United States and British activities in the Far East.

Tokyo newspapers accused the United States of "meddling" in the Orient and blamed Washington for the action of The Netherlands East Indies in cutting off big supplies of oil to Japan.

Tokyo stick prices wavered, mostly off, although munitions were strong.

In Tokyo, Premier Fumimaro Konoye was quoted as warning Japan that it must be "prepared to meet the worst" amid rapidly changing world conditions and that the Russo-German conflict was already "bringing serious effects to Japan."

Prince Konoye's Declaration

Prince Konoye declared that Japan needed "swift, determined execution of her national policies" and that the government was "determined to proceed on an historic renovation in policies from an entirely new standpoint."

Perhaps significantly, he added that it would be difficult to predict where the flames of the European conflict might spread and that the government was "doing everything within its power to mobilize all resources and manpower for any eventualty."

As he spoke, Japanese troops moved steadily into southern Indo-China bases, within striking distance of Singapore, the East Indies and the Philippines.

JAPAN PREPARES FOR ATTACK ON RUSSIAN SIBERIA

Chinese Circles Believe Tokyo Awaiting Opportune Time

RAISE LARGE ARMY

By J. D. WHITE

Associated Press Staff Writer

Peiping, China, July 31 (AP)—The conviction that Japan is preparing for a great assault on Russian Siberia if and when the Red armies in the west are smashed by Hitler's legions is growing in informed Chinese circles in this North China observation post.

From Japanese in a position to know Tokyo's plans they say they have heard that the Japanese command is gathering in Manchoukuo and North China forces which eventually will total 2,000,000 men and 5,000 planes for a determined effort to break Russian power in the Far East.

Chinese, some of whom work in close liaison with the Japanese rulers of North China, express firm belief that Japan is preparing to stake her national existence n a drive into the Russian Far East when the opportune time comes.

They say the Japanese are boasting that Japan is making ready to hurl the largest army the empire ever has assembled into such an attack and that the occupation of French Indo-China is merely a side issue.

From these Chinese and Japanese sources this picture of Tokyo's alleged program is pieced together:

The conference was strongly influenced by the octogenarian Mitsuro Toyama, chief of Japan's unofficial superpatriots, and other leaders of powerful secret societies who supported the Siberia project.

They were said to have contended that the United States and Britain would take no action to hamper a drive against Communist Russia.

Moreover a Japanese move into Siberia would forestall a further German advance eastward challenging Japan's dominance in East Asia and would realize the 50-year-old dream of the Japanese army of planting the Rising Sun over Eastern Siberia, perhaps as far west as Lake Baikal.

The Chinese are confident that Japan will not move northward, however, until the Germans have broken the main Soviet armies in the west but say she is making thorough preparations to be ready when the time comes.

3rd Sidney

3rd Sidney—Rev. D. W. DeMille of Woodstock, representing the Temperance Federation of which his father Rev. Chas. DeMille is President, addressed the Aiken's congregation on Sunday morning.

Cool breezes coming through the open windows and the vivacious personality of this inspired young speaker who has given his holidays to preach for the cause of Temperance, made one forget the extreme heat outside.

During this war, stated Rev. DeMille, there is no greater fifth columnist than those who push aside the temperance question, feeling it may lie dormant until the war is won.

The liquor traffic which he called a child of selfishness, does not disobey the law, said Rev. De Mille, but it does evade the law. In further enlightening remarks he explained the work the Temperance Federation is accomplishing through temperance education and legislature, in seeking to enforce the law, and an attempt to make better laws.

Subscription envelopes were passed and it was regrettable there were so few of the families in the congregation present at this service.

LUCKY FOR LOVE

By JANE DIXON

CHAPTER TWELVE

All Is Not Well

Al's "Yellow Plan" was carried forward with elan up to and including the point at which the bellboy, carrying a huge box of flowers, pushed the buzzer of Room 369.

"Who is it?" Clara Marsh called, suspiciously. She must have come close to the far side of the door, for she could be heard plainly.

"Package for Miss Marsh," the boy said, as per instructions.

"A package? Oh!" Suspicion gave place to anticipation. "Wait a minute."

An interval—footsteps—and the door was opened.

"Flowers!" Clara was jubilant. "Tons of them. I'll have to send for more vases. I guess I'm using about all the vases in this hotel—you can put the box on the couch here in the reception room—"

At that moment the bellboy was thrust aside, the flower box fell to the floor, Al Martino had his back against the open door and Marilyn sped into the room. The door was closed quietly, but surely, behind her.

The two sisters stood looking at each other; the one pale and determined, the other reddening with anger.

Marilyn broke the silence: "I'm sorry, Clara. I had to see you."

"You sneak! You spy! How dare you break into my room when I told you to keep away from me! I warned you I'd have you put out. I'm going to do it, this minute. I'll call the manager. He'll see that I'm protected from spies. He'll—"

Clara moved toward the telephone. She found Al blocking the way.

"I wouldn't do that if I were you," Al said. His voice crackled.

"YOU wouldn't. You're through telling me what I should do and what I shouldn't do, Mr. Martino. I'm doing as I please. You broke into my room. You were hiding outside. You forced yourself in when I opened my door to get a box of flowers. I'm calling the manager and I'll insist that he have you arrested."

"Punk. Even for a melodrama, it's punk." Al's grin taunted. "Better play it an easier way, Blondie. These classy hotels don't like rows; they annoy the other customers. They don't like guests who holler for the cops. It gets in the papers and scares off the carriage trade. The manager might find that he'd reserved this suite for a party from Chicago, beginning today, and that there wasn't another vacant room in the place."

"He wouldn't dare. I'd tell Herman Hess. Herman knows everybody, the most important people in New York—Herman'll see that —"

Al laughed uproariously. His laugh was more taunting than his smile.

"Dear old Hermie. Moths have been nibbling on him for years, but he won't give up. It's the gals that get him that way. A sucker for blondes, especially dumb blondes. Listen, Backward, if Hermie hears there's a little sister banging on your hotel door determined to save you from a fate worse than death, and if he hears the old folks at home might take steps, he'll let you down so hard you'll bounce for a week. That's the way the Hermies in this town are. They're allergic to fond parents, irate husbands, big brothers and little sisters with rescue impulses. Better not count on Hermie. He's liable to take a ride on the China Clipper."

Clara's native cunning told her that Al might be right. She must not lose Herman, not until after the new floor show opened in the Blue Parrot and she had become the sensation Herman promised she would be.

"If you're afraid to have me call the manager, if you both insist on staying where you're not wanted, maybe you'll say what you have to say and get out," she said, with a weak attempt at hauteur.

"H.B.," Al looked to Marilyn, then at Clara, explaining "Heartbeat, for short." Turning to Marilyn again, he said, "This is where you come in. Tell big sister why you crashed her gate."

"I had to see you, Clara," said Marilyn, urgently, "because you're—hurting yourself. If you go on you'll hurt Mums and Dad and Bill. Mother knows, instinctively, that—things are not as they should be with you. Inside her, she's quaking. You must go home and reassure her. You know she loves you. You're her favorite child. Don't fail her."

Clara said, "You have a nerve, asking me to go all the way to Millville to tell Ma something I can put on a piece of paper and send to her. Why should Ma worry about me—unless you told her a pack of lies you got from Al Martino? Ma knew I was coming to New York to have a good time. She wanted me to come. She's glad I'm being made a fuss over. She's glad I'm having the time of my life. Wait till she hears about the marv'lous show I'm going to be in—most marv-lous show in New York. I'll show that hick town of ours who I am!"

Marilyn realized she could gain nothing by pursuing the present line of argument. She'd try another, though she felt it was weaker than the first.

"You haven't forgotten, have you," she said, "that your agreement with the Metropole Company is that they bring you to New York and return you to your home? They are very much concerned about your conduct, your decision not to return to Millville. They feel you are their responsibility morally, and perhaps legally too. They've been so generous you must consider their wishes in the matter. Keep your agreement with them, Clara. If you want to return to New York later, that will be your own concern. They will be entirely out of it. Don't you think that is only fair?"

"Fair!" Clara's scorn was not pretty to see. "You make me laugh. Have they been fair with me? They've made plenty of money out of me, you can bot-got their name in the papers a million times on account of me. What do they do? They turn me down flat when I ask them to give me the money instead of a ticket home. What business is it of theirs how I spend the money? I won it, didn't I? It's my money. If I want to throw it in the street, it's my loss, not theirs."

Al barked, "Skip Herman. You're not getting the money, Blondie, so better think up some other way to finance your project. Herman says—"

"That's all taken care of," Clara replied smugly.

"Herman, again."

"If my friends want to lend me money, what's to stop them? They believe in me. They know I'll be a sensation, they know—"

"You'll be a public scandal if you don't lay off that giggle water."

"You stop insulting me, Mister Martino. It's time you got out of here, anyhow. Both of you. I have an appointment."

Marilyn said aghast, "Clara you haven't asked about Mums or Dad or Bill? Don't you want to know how they are, what messages they sent?"

"I prefer to get my news from them direct. I must get ready to go out now. I'll thank both of you not to bother me again. I'm busy. GOOD-BYE."

• • •

"Nice people, your sister," Al said as he and Marilyn walked along the corridor to the elevator. "Big-hearted. Fond of her folks."

"Clara's lost her head completely," said Marilyn.

"Come, come now, Duchess, the gal never had a head to lose. She's had a taste of high life and she's gone wolf. Low-lives always do. We didn't get very far with the 'Yellow Plan', did we? Just about where we started."

"Far enough to know something must be done about Clara. She can't go on as she is. I've got to stop her, for mother's sake, and Dad's."

"Yes, and I've got to stop her for the Chief's sake and Metropole's sake, too. We'll go back to the hotel where we had breakfast and get you settled. I'll contact the Chief, let him know you've arrived and that the situation is NOT well in hand. Then we'll have a nip o' lunch and draw up plans for our next offensive."

Tainted Food Affects 5 Persons at Hamilton

Hamilton, July 30 (CP)—The condition of five persons who are believed to have been affected by eating tainted food, was reported improved at hospital today. The group was visiting at Cherry Beach last evening and became ill after eating at the home of a friend, the hospital reported.

Provincial police looked into the matter but said last night that the case would probably be investigated by Dr. M. S. Heddle, Medical Officer of Health for Saltfleet.

Dr. Heddle was not available for comment today.

AT THE McCARTHY

Gracie Fields

If you like George Formby (and who will say they don't?) then take this reviewers advice and get acquainted with England's feminine Queen of comedy, Gracie Fields now at the McCarthy Theatre in the delightful comedy - musical, "The Show Goes On."

Gracie Fields is without doubt the most humorous screen personality, wise-cracking comedienne and above all one of the finest singing stars ever to make an appearance on the screen. And if you are sort of hungry for a piece of entertainment that is new, different and really wholesome, Gracie will serve it to you in abundance in "The Show Goes On." You are urged not to miss this excellent feature attraction and coupled with one of the most pleasing dramatic hits of the year, "The Big Boss," starring Otto Kruger, Gloria Dickson, John Litel and Don Beddoe, the McCarthy Theatre is now presenting a program which is second to none in variety and down to earth delightful entertainment. A clever and amusing Donald Duck color cartoon is also presented in addition to the feature attraction.

"Adventure in Washington"

Herbert Marshall and Virginia Bruce in "Adventure in Washington," the picture which will be the talk of Belleville next week. Also the howl hit of 1941, "Two in a Taxi," opens with a special preview show Sunday midnight. Plan now to see these two feature attractions selected for showing here at the same time that other larger cities will be also playing the outstanding production, "Adventure in Washington."

IN MEMORIAM

LOGAN — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Thomas Logan, who passed away July 31st, 1940.

He is gone but not forgotten,
And, as dawns another year
In our lonely hours of thinking,
Thoughts of him are always near.

Days of sadness will come o'er us,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within the heart concealed.

—Ever remembered by Wife and Family. J31

WILSON — In loving memory of a dear Husband and Father, Frank Wilson, who passed away July 31st, 1934; in his 76th. year.

Deep in our hearts lies a picture
Of a loved one laid to rest.
In memory's frame we shall keep it
Because he was one of the best.
Our lips cannot speak of how we loved him;
Our hearts cannot tell what to say;
God only knows how we miss him,
As we struggle along life's way.
Gone and forgotten by some he may be,
But dear in our memory ever will be.

—Always remembered by Wife, Sons and Daughters. J31

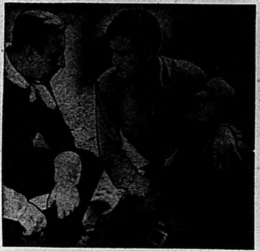
HIT BY AIRPLANE

London, (CP) — Two farmers, George Smith, 62, and John Holdsworth, 58, were killed when an airplane struck a load of hay at a Surrey airdrome.



A terrific battle with the redskins has just taken place, in which Richard Dix and Preston Foster have been saved by the U.S. troops. Douglas Dumbrille, captain of the troopers, listens to rancher Dix recount the fearless heroism shown by the reckless cowboy, Foster, during the climax of Paramount's newest six-gun film of the West, "The Round Up," which opens tonight at the Capitol Theatre. The added attraction "Sleepers West," stars Lloyd Nolan and Lynn Bari.

$1,000 Theft In Cigarettes Is Investigated

Lindsay, Ont., July 31 — (CP)— Police Chief David Gordon of Fenelon Falls, Ont., is investigating the theft of $1,000 in cigarettes from Webster Brothers, wholesale tobacconists. The theft, according to Police Chief Gordon, took place early this morning and was discovered by employees of a nearby bakery.

Chief Gordon said he believed the theft was the work of an organized group of tobacco thieves working throughout the province. He said he believed the same thieves who made off recently with $2,500 in tobacco and cigarettes in nearby Cannington were connected with Fenelon theft.

ARREST UNFRIENDLY FRENCH

Vichy, France, July 31 (AP) — Newspapers in the German-occupied zone reported today that more Frenchmen unfriendly to the Vichy regime had been arrested recently. Among them, they said, were two aviation generals—Baston and Cochet, one of whom was charged with propaganda for Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Round Up"

It's a real he-man, Western spectacle, loaded with suspense and something new in romance that opens tonight at the Capitol Theatre. Aptly titled "The Round Up," Paramount brings its tops in outdoor melodrama to the screen with a cast and story that will thrill the moviegoer.

Indian uprisings, bandit gunrunners, steers, horses, western music, and breath-taking views of a newly discovered section of the High Sierras, are only a part of the film's colorful pageantry.

Caught in a triangle of love are Richard Dix, blonde-brunette Patricia Morison, and Preston "North West Mounted" Foster. Jack Benny's popular radio announcer, 300-pound Don Wilson, makes his first screen appearance as the comical "Sheriff Slim," genial keeper of the law. Little Betty Brewer, child find of the year, helps to round out the talented supporting players who include Ruth Donnelly, Jerome Cowan, Douglass Dumbrille; the singing, Western-swinging quartette, The King's Men, and a wild band of Apaches together with trick-riding cowboys.

Packed with six-gun action "The Round Up" concerns itself with a romantic love triangle that holds surprises for the audience right up until its ending.

Harry Sherman, famous producer of Westerns in the movie industry, has been waiting over ten years to shoot this picture. Because of the unusual story material and the need for a special type of scenic background, Sherman refused to film "The Round Up" until he was sure that nothing would be lacking.

"Sleepers West" Exciting Mystery

With more thrills and bigger laughs than ever before, Lloyd Nolan and Lynn Bari meet aboard the crash-bound "Comanche Limited" in "Sleepers West," the 20th Century-Fox film is the added attraction.

Lloyd, again playing the role of that fast-talking detective, Michael Shayne, swaps wisecracks with reporter Lynn Bari over the whereabouts of the star witness Shayne is escorting to a murder trial. She's blonde Mary Beth Hughes, and a gangster is on board to keep her from testifying.

Half a dozen other colorful characters, including Edward Brophy and Ben "Shadrach" Carter, keep things at fever pitch and the film has a surprise climax that's a knockout.

The Universal News Events of the World and the 4th chapter of the thrilling serial, "Mysterious Dr. Satan" completes this swell entertaining family program.

ESCAPE FROM

twenty-foot sardine boat, especially if you're afraid to use your engine for fear of calling attention to your position. So we rowed and sailed for hours trying to avoid those two spots on the horizon.

But they were going in a circular course and we couldn't seem to get away from them. They finally turned out to be two Italian mine layers. One of them bore down on us. There were two machine guns in the bow. We saw the gunners suddenly spring into position and train the ugly looking little weapons right on the Makedonka.

We got out of that fix by pulling caps down over our eyes and dangling pieces of rope in the water. We knew about as much about how they fish in the Adriatic as we did about sailing, but it seemed to work. The mine layer came close, then gunners waved and went on.

Convoy Suspicious

A closer call was when an Italian convoy hove in sight. A big oil tanker and an 8,000-ton transport sailed by, but an Italian destroyer convoying them snooped around us suspiciously while an Italian seaplane circled low overhead. The fisherman trick didn't work, so we hauled out a bloodstained United States flag and waved it. The officers of the destroyer looked puzzled, but they finally rang some bells and made off.

It was Greek Orthodox Easter morning when a brilliant red sun came up and showed us a speck of land ahead. Our automobile map indicated it must be Corfu. We celebrated by opening the two cans of pheasant paste we had been saving so zealously and spreading them on some slices of black bread and dividing up the lemon and the onion.

We were reaching a safe land just in time, because a few hours before a heavy sea had sprung up, our gasoline had given out, and the sail was useless now because the mast had cracked from top to bottom, nearly knocking us all into the water.

Arrested on Landing

..There was a crowd on the shore of Corfu to greet us. But as we got close we saw they all had rifles, and these rifles all were pointed seaward. It was a ticklish moment, for none of them could speak English and Corfu was ultra-suspicious. The people knew that it probably was only a matter of hours before they would be invaded, and they were determined to go down shooting.

They must have decided, finally, that we were too exhausted to be dangerous. Anyway, they let us land. And then arrested us.

We probably were the most unpopular Americans who ever set foot on that island. The Italian seaplane that had been following us flew back and forth over our heads and the Corfu people, as they sounded their alarms and hid in ditches, blamed us for attracting the enemy to their shores. When the plane left and then came back with a lot of companion bombers, which gave Corfu its first real air attack in a month, the people knew we were bad luck.

We didn't dare tell them that this had been happening since the war began....that everywhere we went the bombers went, too.

Desolation Ahead

Yes, that island of romance was soon to become an island, of desolation, and the Makedonka was doomed to be sunk, and tough experiences lay ahead of us, but we wouldn't have cared about all these things, even if we had known they were going to happen. All that counted at this moment was that three weary days and three miserable nights at sea were over. We were on dry land and nothing else mattered.

The American press had gone to sea, without compass, charts, adequate supplies or any knowledge of nautical matters. We had gone hungry and thirsty and still were soaked to the skin from storms and bilge water, but Corfu was land.

Soldiers Granted Leave to Assist In Harvesting Crops

Ottawa, July 31 (CP)— A plan whereby Canadian soldiers may be granted limited leave to assist in harvest operations already is in effect, National Defence Headquarters spokesmen said today.

They were commenting on a request by Richard Hilliard, agricultural representative for York County, that trainees be released to assist in harvesting crops "which otherwise will be lost."

Defence Department officials said it was announced several weeks ago that soldiers who could be spared from their duties without harm to their unit or their own training would be granted limited leave to assist in harvesting.

The leave may not exceed four weeks and may be cancelled at any time, officials said. Regulations covering the leaves provide that the limited number to whom it is granted must be personnel not engaged on active duty or receiving important training.

:Applications for leave should be made to the commanding officer. Approval from the general officer commanding the district or other administrative unit also will be required.

The policy applies only to those experienced in farm work.

The government has permitted the use of saccharine in non-alcoholic beverages sold in Switzerland to the extent of one-fourth of the sugar formerly so used.

"FEEL THAT I MUST TELL OF GOOD RESULTS SYNTONA GAVE"

Nearby Farmer Wants Others to Know What to Take for Gassy Stomach Pains, Indigestion, Sour Acid-Rising and Other Stomach Distress.

You know, the honest way to find out about a medicine is to hear from actual users, what they say and how glad they are they tried it. That is why we bring you here the stories of actual relief which Syntona is bringing to men and women right in this vicinity. Relief that may mean so much to you that they have agreed to publish their true experiences.

In telling of his grand relief with Syntona, Mr. George VanSickle, well-known farmer of Copetown, Ontario, says:

"I'm 74 years old and have been in pretty good health up to a few months ago, when I began having trouble with my stomach. Don't know exactly why, but it just went that way. It started out with gassy pains after meals, then my food would ferment and give me sour acid risings, belching and a distressed, bloated feeling. Food seemed to form in a lump in my stomach and stay there for hours. Finally it got so that I couldn't even drink a glass of water without feeling distressed, so I decided it was time to do something about it.

"I had heard about Syntona being so good and decided to get some. It certainly proved the right treatment for my stomach, and even from the first bottle the digestive trouble began to ease up. Soon I could eat a good meal and didn't have that feeling like a lump in my stomach, the bloat and gas went away and now I'm not troubled with the sour, acid risings or any trouble after meals. I can honestly say Syntona is a real medicine for troubles like I had and felt I must tell others about the good results it gave me."

MR. GEORGE [illegible]
